Plans for defending Egypt from a Libyan invasion have for years been to halt the Italians at a strategic line, drawing them from their bases with the disadvantages such a separation entails.

For the present the British Command is adhering to this plan, but as time goes on without the Italians risking an offensive it is not improbable that the British desert forces will carry the battle to them.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Out of a job, and asked to leave her boarding house because of the wide publicity she received as the result of an attempted prison break Lona Ackerman is almost desperate because she cannot locate Jim Claridge, the only friend she has left. Just before Lona sped to the penetentiary to see her dying father, serving a life term for murder, she and Jim had fallen in love. At the warden's house during her visit to the prison, two escaping convicts force her into the warden's car and make a safe getaway until Lona grabs the steering wheel and the car crashes. Only slightly hurt, she finds her father has died in the meantime. After taking his body home, she returns to the city. Finally Jim calls her and asks her to marry him. To escape further publicity, they decide to elope.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

GOING up the steps of the courthouse for a marriage license, Lona tried ineffectually to hide behind Jim's tall figure. He laughed at her nervousness and linked an arm through hers protectively.

"They'll know we're hunting the marriage license bureau just by looking at us," he joked.

A grinning clerk directed them to an elevator and, at sight of one of the men lounging beside it, Lona tried to shrink closer to Jim's protective bigness. She had seen that man before! He was a reporter. She remembered him with a camera at the cemetery the day they buried her father. His features had been impressed indelibly on her memory as had all the details of that distressing scene, and she held her breath now, as he looked up from the paper he was scanning, and glanced at her and Jim. Turning her face she edged into the elevator sidewise, and making herself very small, slipped into the farthest corner. The fellow's eyes were still on them when the elevator door clicked shut, and at her last glimpse of, him he was frowning and getting to his feet.

"Jim!" she whispered then, in alarm, "there's a reporter down there and I think he recognized me. What will we do if he follows us?"

"I'll punch his head in if he bothers you," Jim said. His lips were set stubbornly as he strode belligerently out into the corridor where the elevator deposited them. Nobody was in sight, and as they went through the door marked Marriage Licenses he pulled Lona's hand through his arm.

"Don't get excited," he told her, and marched her up to the desk.

It was over almost before it had begun, this operation which in her girlish dreams she had often thought of as one of the most exciting in a girl's life. A few questions from a slightly peevish clerk whose bored eyes kept roving to the clock whose hands were creeping toward closing time. Glibly she heard herself telling him her name, her address, her occupation. A pen was pushed into her hand and she was told to sign.

For a moment she hesitated, looking at Jim for guidance, remembering the conversation they had had about names. She thought of the reporter who might even now be at the door. Involuntarily she glanced around to see if anyone were bending over her shoulder.

"Write it, girl," Jim encouraged her, and she set the pen in the old-fashioned ink bottle determinedly. Another moment and it was done. She watched as Jim wrote in his name with his flowing scrawl and a sense of finality gripped her. There it was, for all the world to see.

At least there'd be no newspaper until morning, she calculated. She and Jim would have one night of peace!

Jim's hand was warm on her arm as they went back out the door into the corridor together. In its pressure she sensed that he, too, was acutely conscious of the folded paper that had crackled as he stowed it away in his pocket. The elevator door clicked shut just as they came up to it and they were forced to wait for its return trip. In the privacy of the darkening corridor Jim's arm slipped about her waist and he drew her close. There was just time for a quick kiss, and she knew her face was hot and flushed as the elevator caught up with them. The elevator boy grinned at them knowingly and she felt her blush deepen as Jim laughed aloud.

"Jim, behave yourself!" she scolded him, wiping her face with her powder puff to hide her color.

The puff was still in her hand when she stepped out into the lower floor hall. Looking up at Jim she saw his face darken suddenly, and she had a frightening glimpse of a small crowd gathered before the elevator entrance. Then came the click of a camera, a click that was repeated before she quite realized what it was. Above the gaping black box, when she did locate it, she saw the grinning face of the reporter she had recognized, and with a little scream she covered her face with her hands.

But it was too late. "Thanks. Swell shot," the reporter said, pleasantly. "Now, if you'll just tell us the groom's name and where you are spending the honeymoon—"

He got no farther. Like a flash Jim's doubled fist swung up and connected with the fellow's grinning jaw. He grunted in the middle of a word and, as Lona screamed in earnest, went down onto the tiled floor, the camera rolling from his hands. It fell at Jim's feet, and he tramped on it, crushing it savagely, grinding it under his shoes.

"Hey, you—" somebody in the crowd began, but the sight of Jim's darkened face and clenched fists stopped him.

"Any body else want some more of the same?" Jim demanded, facing them for a second grimly. Nobody stirred and he slipped a hand beneath Lona's elbow and led her toward the street entrance. The fellow on the floor moaned and sat up as they passed him. His eyes made a wobbly signal to somebody close to the door, bringing out something that sounded like, "Get them, Butch . . ."

At their side as they reached the door another figure bobbed up. For a moment Lona faced him, startled, afraid that he was going to molest them. But he only opened the door for them, smilingly.

"Good punch, fellow," he shot at Jim approvingly, and Jim managed a half grin. Another click seemed to come from somewhere near while their faces were upturned, and Lona jumped again. But no cameras were in sight, and she breathed easier as they came out again onto the crowded street.

"You shouldn't have hit him, Jim," she said, when they had climbed into their taxi again.

"I couldn't have him taking pictures," he told her, defensively. "He can print anything he wants to in his old rag, but he can't have any pictures. And I'll wring the neck off the next one that even points a camera at us!" His fists were still clenched and he sat stiffly upright on the taxi seat.

It struck Lona, as he sat there tight lipped and grim, that his anger at the incident was deeper than it called for, and she watched him, puzzled. It was as if something alien had come between them.

"Jim, you look so strange," she brought out. "You frighten me."

"I'm sorry, girl." He relaxed,

Propose Ottawa Subsidize Hog Producers

TORONTO, Nov. 27—The Ontario Federation of Agriculture yesterday passed a resolution asking the Federal Government to "assume responsibility for payment to the Canadian hog producer of the difference between the old and the new contract price," under the bacon agreement with the United Kingdom.

"The present contract price under the new bacon agreement is not satisfactory to the Ontario farmer," the resolution said. "Inasmuch as the cost of production of hogs is steadily increasing, production can continue only at a loss."

The resolution, passed by the federation in annual convention in Toronto, was introduced after a stirring address by K. M. Morrison, manager of the First Co-operative Packers of Ontario, Barrie. According to Mr. Morrison, the lower price, along with the great demand for increased quantities of hogs, may lower the quality of the bacon and ruin the British market for Canadian hogs after the war. "Just such overeagerness to produce hogs destroyed the British market during the last war," he said.

Defending the packers, Mr. Morrison declared that "if every cent of profit the packers made was handed back to the farmers, it would not by gas for his car."

A rider to the original resolution, designed to place a premium of two cents a pound on Grade A1 hogs, was defeated by the federation. The premium was to come from the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Dominion.

The convention also asked that the powers of the Wartime Price Board be enlarged to include the prices of fertilizers, concentrates and other farm supplies.

Guest speaker at the meeting, Waldo Walsh, Director of Marketing for Nova Scotia, emphasized the importance for organization among the farmers of the country. Roy McPhail, guest from Brandon, Man., also stressed organization.

Answering an attack by a Western newspaper in which he claimed he was quoted as saying Britain could "pay the price or get no Canadian bacon," H. H. Hannam, secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario, denied that there were any sinister motives behind his statements.

"I am in favor of selling bacon to Britain at as low a price as Britain can afford to pay, he said. "My contention is that if Canada wants to give bacon to Britain, let Canada do it and not the Canadian farmer. The latter is already bearing more than his share of the war effort."

"This situation is becoming serious," declared Miss Agnes Macphail, former M.P. for Grey-Bruce. Anyone who says anything against the ruling powers nowadays is labelled as dangerous. If this is the case, then it's time we all became dangerous."

Doing Her Bit

When Miss Rota Burck's brother was called to the colors, she gave up her job as a bookkeeper in an Edinburgh, Scotland, office, to take his place as a chimney-sweep in their father's business. She is seen in her work clothes at the end of a hard day.

CONTROL ESSENTIALS.

LONDON. — (CP). — Lord Woolton, Minister for Food, declared today: "It's not my business to control luxuries," and declined to take a regulatory interest in the prices of turkey and caviar.

"It's my business," he said, "to control the price only of those things essential to the life of the nation."

Vichy Cleans Up In Indo-China

SHANGHAI, Nov. 27.—(AP)—A Domei (Japanese News Agency) dispatch from Hanoi, French Indo-China, said Monday Rene Czeaux, chief of the Indo-Chinese financial administration, had been "arrested on supicion of treason."

Bernard Fontan, assistant financial administrator, also was arrested on the same charge, the dispatch said.

The reported arrests followed upon a shake-up in the ranks of colonial officials by Governor-General Jean Decoux, acting on orders from the Vichy Government. Reasons for the changes were not given, but it was believed they probably were connected with the recent growth of sentiment favoring the movement of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Rene Verber, governor of Cochin-China, Henri Wintrebert, inspector general, and Andrew Touzet, resident superior of Laos province, were dismissed and ordered to return to France.

The Kitchener Toe

Said Goering, to Hitler, one bright autumn day,
We've got to do something, their speed to delay;
Those Canadian women, who all can knit sox,
Make far too much speed, when their filling a box.

So with yarn, and with needles, old Hitler sat down,
And thereby contracted his horrible frown;
And when he'd completed, his intricate task,
Proceeded to give it a name, as a mask.

Their idol in war time, he said with a smile,
Was Lord Kitchener's name, and he thought for a while;
so they'll tackle it sure, we very well know,
If we set them all knitting, the Kitchener toe.

Now Hitler, your scheme, worked exceedingly well,
And made for our women, continual ——;
But experienced knitters, of some other school,
Call the Kitchener toe, the work of a fool.

St. James' W.M.S. Plans 1941 Work

The November meeting of St. James' W.M.S. for which Mrs. Waterman, Lock street, was the gracious hostess, was well-attended and presided over by the Auxiliary president, Mrs. W. Rose.

Closing the year's work, business held a large place on the program. The acting secretary, Mrs. A. Davis, reported the last meeting and the executive meeting and announced plans for future work. Among these were the coming election of officers for 1941. The efficiency contest forms filled in and a very encouraging report was presented by the treasurer. Weekly groups were also planned for and members reminded to renew their subscriptions for the Missionary Monthly.

The day's program was in charge of Mrs. E. Beavis and her group, and opened with a brief period of worship. As Temperance Secretary, Mrs. Beavis stressed this department and presented an excellent Temperance Quiz as a real test of the member's knowledge along this line. During this session, earnest prayer was offered by Mrs. Ingham and Mrs. Sloane.

A beautiful and impressive memorial service was conducted in memory of the late Mrs. M. Buckler, Mrs. R. Payne, Mrs. R. Evans and Mrs. A. Kent, whose departure left a great gap in this Auxiliary and all of whom were valued members. A responsive scripture lesson was read from the 23rd Psalm, and the solo, "Jesus, Blessed Jesus" was sung by request, by Mrs. H. P. Doig, accompanied by Mrs. R. C. Searles. The appropriate hymn, "There Is a Land of Pure Delight" and the benediction closed the meeting.

Jean Hammond Reviews Mission Study Book

Mrs. Sherman Rowe, London street, was hostess to the girls of the Jean Wagar Mission Circle for their November meeting, when despite the heavy rain, a splendid attendance was on hand.

Mrs. H. Turner and Mrs. R. Moynes led in the singing, with guitar accompaniment, the hymns being interspersed by prayers along the same theme. The first prayer, read by Mary Hanson was followed with the Lord's Prayer in unison by the Circle. Mrs. R. C. Searles, the president, led in prayer after the reading entitled the "I Am's of Christ."

The musical part of the program was specially good, and included the duets "In His Undying Love" and "God of the Seasons," by Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Moynes.

A fine presentation of Temperance Needs was given by the Temperance secretary, Gladys Langton; the hymn, "Jesus Keep Us Near the Cross," following her address.

In her usual interesting style, Jean Hammond brought a vivid picture in her introduction to the study, "Couriers of the Cross," which she illustrated by means of a stained glass window to good effect. Continuing with this study on mission work in China, Gladys Rutherford told of the "Suffering of Service."

At the close of the social hour, when dainty refreshments were served by the committee in charge, the appreciation of the members was voiced by Anne Deyell to the hostess and to those contributing to the success of the meeting.

Telephone Staffs Are Heroes Of Modern War

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 27 — (CP). — Spare a word of praise for the British telephone and telegraph operators — in England it's the Post Office — carrying on manfully amid dropping bombs as German night raiders turn the nights into flaming hell.

Listen to this: Skylights came crashing down as a bomb fell near a telephone exchange. Doors and windows were blown in. But the night operators found some tarpaulins to cover the switchboard and continued to work, using engineers' headlamps for light so that the blackout would not be affected.

Or this: Fire licked the walls of another telephone building. For hours, firemen, working while the bombs continued to fall, sent tons of water pouring upward. Firemen advised the staff to quit the flame-lighted building, which presented an easy target, but they remained on duty dealing with essential calls.

Answering Criticism.

The two samples of heroism were disclosed by Postmaster-General W. S. Morrison following considerable criticism of the Post Office, which also administers Britain's telephone and telegraph system.

Although the vast network of the telephonet system is vulnerable to enemy air attack, the main switching and operating centres of the system have not suffered widespread damage, he said. The underground cable plant which connects these centres has been damaged in common with other utility undertakings.

Repairing these underground breaks is often difficult due to tons of debris, burst water mains and other obstacles, but the Post Office staff tries. They have been handicapped by losing so many experts to the armed forces, but a number have been released temporarily.

Despite all this disruption about 20,000,000 local calls a week are being connected in London alone in addition to about 300,000 long distance calls and toll calls originated weekly by London subscribers.

Top Floor Danger.

A difficulty in handling telephone calls is that the operating room generally is located on the top floor of a building to get the best light. Nevertheless a nucleus staff always remains to complete essential calls. That staff since has been enlarged to handle ordinary calls.

Telegraph service has suffered from raids, too. Morrison said telegrams to and from London or passing through the metropolis have been subjected to heavy delay "owing to a vital transmitting centre being put completely out of action by a bomb but measures which have been taken very largely restored the situation."

One of the steps taken to overcome telegraph delays has been to provide messengers to run telegrams between nearby offices whose connecting cables were cut. Also, emergency equipment has been provided in protected positions.

W.A. Holds Tea And Gift Display

A successful tea and bazaar was held by the Evening Branch of the W.A. of All Saints' Church Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. L. G. Dobbin, 267 Stewart street. Miss Gwen Dobbin, W.A. president and Mrs. James Howard received with the hostess.

Mrs. H. Lucas presided at the tea table, which was delightfully arranged with yellow pom-poms and matching tapers. Assisting to serve were Miss Audrey Leach, Miss Gwen Parsons, Miss Meta Hart. Attractive gifts on the bazaar table were displayed by Mrs. J. Cooper, and Miss Emily Parsons were treasurer for the evening.

W.L.A. To Meet Next Saturday

The Ontario Women's Liberal Association executive, of which Mrs. C. R. Banks of Peterborough is a member, is to meet on Saturday at the King Edward Hotel with Mrs. C. R. Widdifield presiding. The afternoon session at two o'clock, will be open to the public, and the program will bring before the Ontario Liberal Party the needs of the women in the army, air force, navy and auxiliary services in Great Britain.

Among speakers who will tell of the many ways in which Canadian women can, by their generosity and thoughtfulness, back a British woman soldier fighting for us, will be Miss Reta Dusseau, recently returned from England after serving for more than a year in the Motor Transport Corps; Mrs. Percival Foster of the War Services Committee for the Y.W.C.A., Mrs. J. B. Groshaw of London, Ont., organizer of the first Women's Ex-Service Club in Canada after the last war; Mrs. Marcus Dimsdale of London, a distinguished English woman invited to Canada by leaders in women's activities to speak on behalf of the British women about the nature and extent of their war services; Miss Joseph Perfect, president of the Libberal Club for Professional and Business Women, who will present a plan sponsored by her club by which the Liberal women of Ontario will raise a fund of at least $25,000 to be sent direct to the women in these services, in addition to comforts which it is hoped the Ontario women will make and supply for the British women through their work for the Red Cross and their donations to the Young Women's Christian Association.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, November 28

THE LUNAR transits for this day indicate a rather erratic and peculiar trend of events in which much insight, strategy and shrewdness must be relied upon to avert difficulty and disintegrating situations. These may suddenly arise from surprising and unforeseen sources, with disastrous and uprooting velocity. They may affect business associations and surroundings, with intimate relations put to high strain.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year which may be a radical and revolutionary one, with sudden and peculiar adventures or experiences. These may uproot both environs and associates, plans and objectives, and seem to be quite devastating. However as the intuitions, ideals and mystical qualities are under benefic stimuli some happy inspiration or curious inner guidance, may sidetrack all dangers and disasters.

A child born on this day, while being erratic, impulsive, variable, restless and unaccountable, yet should be original, have good creative ability and have much subtlety, idealism and inspirational urges of high order.

Plowman Dance Is Big Success

About two hundred attended the Plowmen's Dance in the Canadian Legion Hall in spite of Tuesday night's foretaste of unpleasant winter weather. Moncrief's six-piece orchestra played for a program of dancing that included old-time numbers and novelties. Earl Tully and Arthur McIntyre, assisted by about twenty young people, were in charge of the lunch served at eleven-thirty. Announcement was made of a similar dance to be held by the Association on January 7.

Members of the committee in charge of the dance were: Gordon Hancock of Smith, chairman; Howard Quinn, president; Verne Campbell, Douro; Earl Tully, Smith; Harry Grant, Smith; Roland Dickson, Walter Thorne, Otonabee; Ira Robson, North Monaghan; Arthur McIntyre, Peterborough.

TRY A LITTLE "MAKE-UP"

When you have a homely meat pie

AN EXTRA TOUCH of flavour can change the homeliest meat pie into a most delectable dish for luncheon or supper. Give your own pies this flavour appeal by adding a spoonful or so of H. P. Sauce to the meat just before you pop on the top crust. You'll have the grandest flavour in your pie and everyone will thoroughly enjoy it.

Many other dishes besides meat pies need a little making up in flavour in order to lift them above the commonplace. This is where H. P. Sauce can be of valuable service to you. Use this thick, fruity sauce from England in your cooking: Serve it with meats, fish, fowl, macaroni and cheese dishes and many other foods.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

J. H. Renwick 50 Years Church Organist

Few men are given the opportunity of celebrating a fiftieth anniversary of such a career as did J. H. Renwick on Sunday, last. With him to pay their respects and show their affection and esteem were no less than three former ministers under whom he served, a former brother organist who was the director of another choir during the years Mr. Renwick spent in George Street United Church, Peterborough, and scores of former pupils, choir members and friends from across the province.

The occasion was marked in his present church, Alhambra United Church, Toronto, by a special service which demonstrated in every detail the mastery of choir direction and music which made John Renwick such a prominent figure in his profession. With a choir of 50 voices he gave an evening of gorgeous choir and solo work which delighted a large congregation, surrounding a splendid sermon preached by a former pastor of George Street United Church, Peterborough, Rev. A. J. Thomas, M.A., B.D.

Another echo of pleasant years in his old town was the violin solo played by Miss Mignon Telgmann, well-known to Peterborough musical people of former days. Among the choir members was another popular figure local musicians will remember, Teddy Jones, a tenor of excellent record, and a former member of John Renwick's choir. The program included the anthem "Gloria" by Mozart; the violin number Raff's "Cavatina" by Miss Mignon Telgmann, concluding with a special arrangement of the fine Sullivan number, "The Lost Chord" by Mr. Renwick himself, providing a grand finale to the service.

Afterwards a congratulatory party and entertainment was held in the church basement attended by about two hundred people to do honour to their friend and director. This was presided over by the pastor of Alhambra United Church, Dr. J. Ewing Reid, M.A., D.D.

Opening with the singing of a verse of "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" and remarks by Dr. Reid, the flow of congratulations and good wishes for the guest of honour began, varied with vocal solos by former soloists of John Renwick's choirs and friends from other cities. Eloquent messages came from three former pastors, Rev. A. J. Thomas, M.A., B.D., Rev. J. E. Todd, B.A., Dr. Harold Young. All spoke of the splendid spirit of co-operation and devotion to the high aims of the church always displayed by Mr. Renwick. H. G. Walker of George Street United Church, Peterborough, brought congratulations from his congregation; Mrs. J. Forbes-Allan paid a tribute as an old friend of Mr. and Mrs. Renwick, and Mr. A. B. Burrows, president of the Peterborough Male Voice Choir, presented a message of congratulation and greeting to the former director of the choir, supported by Dr. C. H. Fulford, Fred Skitch, D. H. Fleming, members of the chorus of the old days.

Other Peterborough friends who were present were Mr. and Mrs. Evason Walker, Mrs. A. B. Burrows, and from other towns and cities, Mrs. Lloyd Wood, nee Ida Sanderson of Lindsay; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fulford of Port Hope; Rev. Chas. Coburn, president of the Toronto Conference of the United Church, and Mr. Charles Parsons, Barrie, a former Sunday School Superintendent and member of Mr. Renwick's choir while Mr. Parsons resided in Peterborough. Mr. George King of Windsor, one-time organist and choir master of Trinity United Church, Peterborough, made the long journey to pay tribute to his co-worker of the old days.

A member of the church board, J. H. Wilson, read excerpts from a few of dozens of letters of congratulations that had come in to Mr. Renwick, expressing regrets from writers who were not able to appear in person. Among them was a letter from Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., at Ottawa, to "Jock Renwick" recalling many summer days of association at Stoney Lake and Peterborough.

The concluding event of the evening, following a lunch served by the choir members, was a presentation by two members of the committee of stewards and choir, of a gold pocket watch and chain to Mr. Renwick, and a coffee percolator set to Mr. and Mrs. Renwick. Mrs. Renwick herself was the recipient of a lovely chrysanthemum bouquet and many words of praise for her undoubted ability in assisting her talented husband during years as soloist, and for her graciousness and sympathy while acting as a "choir mother."

Four reporters were asked by Mr. George H. King, now of Central United Church, Windsor, one-time organist and choir leader in Trinity Church, Peterborough, to convey to his many friends his kindest regards and greetings. Mr. King, incidentally, has completed his thirty-eighth years as an organist, the last 15 years having been spent in his present Windsor appointment.

A Good Line for the Evening

By ALICE ALDEN

SOFT draping and long, fluid, lovely lines make up the ideal evening silhouette, according to women who know their after-dark clothes. While hip-draping and the bouffant skirt are both represented in the evening frock parade, it is the long, slim frock with skirt falling in graceful folds that captures sartorial honors.

Brenda Marshal, is wearing her new favorite, fashioned in heavy white crepe roma. There is interesting detail at the bodice which extends in back to the floor-length cape-like scarf, which can be draped and worn as a scarf. This lovely frock is girdled with a broad belt of silver kid encrusted with multi-colored stones.

Time Off In Wars To Talk Of Hats

MANCHESTER, Nov. 27.—(CP)—Despite bombings and the distress of the blitzkreig England's women are evidently losing neither their heads nor their hats, judging by the comment of a writer on "The War Hat —Fashion and Utility" in The Guardian.

"All hats are not, even now, war hats," this authority points out. "Tin hats will no doubt soon achieve priority, but it is noticeable among the elect who are entitled to battle dress that the pleasure of this form of headgear palls easily.

"Hats fall into two categories—the strictly utilitarian and those in which fashion predominates. The fashion hat is the sequel of fashion hair, which at the moment is high or 'catogan' at the back.

Midway between pure fashion and pure utility comes the rather mannish felt, this observer writes.

"This may turn down to turn up in front and terminates in a knob anywhere, but points to remember are that the crown should err on the spiky side and avoid anything in the shape of a melon. These mannish felts are worn with all sorts of coats, and they are appearing in many colors, of which the various plums are perhaps the most popular. People like wearing a black dress and then a plum-colored coat and hat."

Curls and Topknots

Talking of utilitarian hats the writer discusses the turban "ready made or fashioned cleverly out of the scarf."

"Turbans of any kind look best with a topknot of hair. A curl or two on the forehead makes a focus for the knot of the scarf which is just behind it. The ears should be slightly covered and the scarf pulled up with the edge round the head the tigher of the two.

"Turbans are a good antidote to curls. They not only keep this phenomenon—so strange in time of war —in thorough order but they allow it gradually to be transformed into something more shapely and less destructible.

"Classic hats are, of course, the tricorne, which is seen here and there in black velvet and is much liked by the older woman."

OVERSIZE PEAR TREE

A pear tree owned by E. E. Andersen of Ceres, South Africa, has a circumference of 5½ feet at the base, is 30 feet tall, and yielded 3,120 pounds of fruit this year.

Nurses Approve Coming Of Victorian Order

Approval of the proposed establishment of a branch of Victorian Order of Nurses in Peterborough was expressed by members of Chapter C of the Registered Nurses' Association Tuesday night at their annual meeting, following a talk outlining the purpose of the Order by Mrs. J. F. Lynch, who was thanked by Miss Edith Young. The meeting was held in Nicholls' Hospital Residence with Mrs. Donald Hill, first vice-president, in the chair.

A well-presented skit demonstrated a Community Nursing Bureau, with Mrs. E. M. Leeson and Miss Mary Armstrong as announcers; Miss Edith Young as director of the Bureau; Miss Daisy Everson taking the part of registrar; Miss Wilson of stenographer; Mrs. Campbell as school principal; Miss Baker, the farmer; Miss McBrien, a graduate nurse; Mrs. Leeson, a practical nurse; Miss Mary Pickens, a student eliminated from the School of Nursing; voices behind-the-scenes, Miss A. McKenzie, Miss V. Fiske, Miss Allen, Miss Barie, Miss McEacherin.

New officers were elected as follows: Mrs. S. Wainwright, president; Miss V. Fiske, vice-president; Miss Jeanette Wood, second vice-president; Miss Mary Pickens, secretary-treasurer; Miss Florence Vickers, Red Cross zone nurse; Miss Loise Stewart, Mrs. Schneider, Miss Flett of Lindsay, finance; refreshments conveners, Mrs. R. Taylor, Mrs. F. Rundle, Miss Flett.

After the meeting refreshments were served under the convenorship of Mrs. Donald Hill.

MANY SINS COMMITTED UNDER THE NAME OF LOVE — Wives Become the Most Grinding Tyrants on Earth and Treat Their Husbands Like Slaves.

Oh, love, what crimes are committed in thy name! Especially by women! No peculiarity of the feminine sex is so inexplicable as that the more a woman loves the more justified she feels in treating the object of her affections as she would not treat her deadliest enemy. She considers that her devotion is like the mantle of charity—it covers all of her sins against her victitm. Theoretically, love should make a woman gentle and kind and unselfish, seeking the happiness of her adored one. But in real life it does not always work out this way. It manifests itself in suspicions, in espionage, in tyrannies, in enslavement, so that many a man has felt that if this is a woman's love he would rather have have her hate. It is women's mistaken idea that if, in the phrase of the day, they are crazy about their husbands, it gives them the privilege of bedevilling them, and that drives many married men away from home and starts them to philandering. The first thing that any neglected wife ever tells you is how much she loved her husband; how she never had any thought except for him, and she never dreams that it was because she made her love a jail for her husband instead of a house for happiness that she lost out.

Take nagging, for instance, which is the fault that men resent above all others in thir wives. There isn't a woman so dull as not to know that nothing infuriates a man so much as being put through a questionnaire about everything he does and says when he is absent form her, and being forced to give an alibi for every minute of his time, unless it is being adjured to watch out for automobiles when he crosses the street; to be sure to put on his rubbers if it rains, and generally treated as if he was a moronic child.

Yet wives inflict this persecution on their husbands because they love them, because they have no interests outside of them, and everything that they do and think is of momentous importance to them.

The Curse of Jealousy.

Then there is jealousy. Surely it was a woman who originated the idea that jealousy was a proof of love. At any rate, millions of wives feel that they have a perfect right to torture their husbands by getting green-eyed over every woman they speak to from their grandmothers to their secretaries.

They are even jealous of their husbands' business and men friends and keep the poor creatures walking on eggs for fear of doing or saying something that will precipitate a storm of suspicions and reproaches.

It is love that makes women the most grinding tyrants on earth. When you see a man who is henpecked out of his life and who you can bet your bottom dollar dares not call his soul his own, that he has a "devoted" wife.

I know one of these unfortunate slaves of affection who has never had as much liberty as a dog on a leash since the day he was married.

His wife buys his clothes. Makes him eat what she thinks is good for his stomach instead of what he likes. She doesn't let him even go for a day's fishing with a friend. She tags him on every trip he takes.

And she justifies her bossiness by saying that the reason she watches over him so closely is because she is so afraid that he might get sick or hurt, and that she loves him so much that she couldn't live without him.

Disastrous to Children.

And if women so often make their love a curse instead of a blessing to their husbands, they even more frequently make it so disastrous to their children that it would have been better for them to have a cruel mother or a neglectful one than the overly devoted ones they have.

For it is mother love that is so blind that it will not see a child's faults and correct them. It is mother love that is so tender it cannot bear to deny a child anything it wants.

It is mother love that is so weak that it does not enforce obedience on a child and make it respect law and order, that fills the jails with young hoodlums; that produces the men and women who are too weak-kneed and spineless to stand the gaff of life, and that is responsible for the spoiled youngsters who are quitters in marriage.

And it is mothers who love their children so much that they cannot bear to give them up who shut the door of opportunity in their children's faces, and who doom their sons and daughters to a bleak old maiden and bachelor hood.

They do their children the greatest wrong that could possibly be inflicted upon them and feel justified in it because it was done in the name of love.

All of which suggests that it might be a good idea for us to examine our loving and see whether it makes for the happiness or the misery of those on whom we bestow it. DOROTHY DIX.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

then, and put his arms about her. "I didn't mean—I sort of lost my temper, I guess." His drawl was back again, and the strangeness disappeared as suddenly as it had come, so that now she wasn't sure she had felt it at all.

"It's not worth getting so angry about," she tried to tell him, but he shook his head.

"You're too easy with people," he proclaimed. "Including me." His whimsical little half smile showed, and she smiled back.

"You look terrible, Jim, when you're mad," she brought out, her mind still going over the scene they had just quitted. "So fierce and—mean. I hope you never get mad at me that way."

"Mad at you, girl? I can't ever get mad at you. Don't you know that? You're too little and too—sweet. Besides, you'll be Mrs. Claridge! Do you realize that? Who could be mad at Mrs. Claridge? Especially Mrs. James Claridge!"

Mrs. Claridge! The name brought a flush to Lona's cheeks and a warmth to her whole being that stayed with her even when she had sent Jim on his way back to Mrs. Peterman's, and had gone up to her own room to make her preparations.

Preparations for her wedding. In a few hours she would be Mrs. James Claridge! She said the name over to herself as she dressed for the second time that day in the blue outfit and pushed the wave into her brown hair with extra care. Mrs. James Claridge—Lona Claridge. It seemed to take away from her, somehow, all the troubles that had been hers as Lona Ackerman. As if that unhappy, distracted girl were about to vanish forever.

She looked ridiculously young when she stood before her mirror, finally, ready down to the last button on the blue gloves. Her face was still flushed and her eyes were bright. She hesitated for a moment, trembling, as the telephone, announcing that Jim was waiting for her below, sent out its fateful jingle. She felt as if she were setting out for a new, unknown world as she picked up her suitcase and locked the door behind her for the last time.

Havelock Man Is Acquitted

Joseph Love, 64, formerly of Smith township and now a resident of Havelock was acquitted by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning on a charge of careless driving, originating out of a recent accident on Highway 28 between the filtration plant and the Nassau turn.

Love's car ran off the highway and was wrecked against a big elm tree. He sustained a fractured forearm and a dislocated hip. He was defended by T. J. Carley, K.C. while the prosecution was in the hands of Provincial Constable David Silvester who was the only crown witness.

"The car was sold for junk; it was a total wreck," Constable Silvester said in his evidence. He told the court that tire marks showed that Love's car had started to leave the road 80 yards south of where it crashed into the tree at the bottom of a deep ditch.

'From the damage done to the car," witness said, "I would say that the car must have been travelling at a high rate of speed." Constable Silvester said that he had gone to the hospital on the night of the accident to interview Love but found he was not in condition to make a statement at that time.

"There was an odor of liquor off his breath," witness stated. Next morning Love had said in explanation of the accident that he must have dozed off.

Cross-examined by Mr. Carley Constable Silvester said that the circumstances in connection with the accident would be consistent with that of a person falling asleep or having had a sudden weak spell or seizure. It was about an hour and one half after the accident that he had seen Love in hospital, he said.

After an unsuccessful motion for a dismissal of the case Mr. Carley called Love into the witness box.

"Now that I can think the whole thing over," Love said, "all I can remember is that there was another car on the curve that had bright lights and I moved over to give him more room."

"There are suspicious features about this case," Magistrate Langley said in giving judgment. "However I do not think that under all the circumstances a conviction would be justified."

Obituary

MRS. JAMES V. O'REILLY

HASTINGS, Nov. 27.—The news of the sudden death at her home, 41 Ferrier avenue, Toronto, on Friday, November 22, of Elizabeth O'Hearn, wife of the late James O'Reilly, came as a shock to her many friends and relatives. Deceased had not been in good health since the death of her husband last March, but was able to care for her home.

On Monday at Holy Name church, Rev. Father McGinn, celebrated Requiem Mass for the repose of her soul, after which the funeral proceeded to Hastings for burial beside her late husband, where many were gathered at the cemetery. Rev. P. Costello said the prayers at the grave. The sympathy of all is extended to her lonely son, who is left to mourn her loss, also one brother John in the West. The many spiritual and floral offerings were a consoling evidence of the love and esteem of the deceased.

Those who attended the funeral to Hastings were her son, Emett, Mr. Hugh O'Reilly, Mrs. Patrick Masterson, Mrs. T. O'Reilly, Mrs. O'Hearn, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Masterson, Mr. Fred Butler, Mrs. Don Barnett, Mrs. Jack Finley, Miss Madaline Gibson, Mrs. E. McElroy, Mr. and Mrs. John Marshal, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent McElroy, all of Toronto, Mrs. Annie Oulehan, sons, Jack and Leo, Mrs. M. Tufts, Grafton, Mrs. J. J. Oulehan, Cobourg, and Mr. Casey Masterson, Peterborough.

DAVID GEORGE HOOEY

David George Hooey, beloved husband of Dorothea S. Thompson, passed away suddenly in Nicholls Hospital on Wednesday morning. He was in his 67th year.

Born in Cartwright township, Mr. Hooney was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hooey. He had lived in Peterborough for the past 47 years, 42 of which were spent in the Canadian General Electric Company where he was employed in the winding department.

An elder in the Bethany Tabernacle, the deceased was one of the most interested in its progress. He had attended the Tabernacle for over 40 years, and was one of the oldest members.

Surviving is is sorrowing wife; one daughter, Dorothy, at home; one brother, Percy of Port Perry; two sisters Mrs. Maud Vass of Peterborough, and Mrs. Robert Fawcett of Telkwa, B.C.

The remains will be resting at the family residence, 570 Aylmer street until 11:00 a.m. on Saturday. The funeral will be from the Bethany Tabernacle at 2:00 p.m. Rev. William McArthur will officiate, and interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

Rescue Impossible

PENTWATER, Mich., Nov. 27.—(AP). — A coast guard board of inquiry heard witnesses testify on Monday that it was impossible to effect an immediate rescue of seamen aboard the Canadian freighter Novadoc which was grounded offshore here in the severe November 11 storm which swept Lake Michigan. The Novadoc went aground during the night. Two of its crew of 19 were lost and the others were removed by the fishing tug Three Brothers of Ludington, two days later. The inquiry is to determine whether the Ludington coast guard station was negligent in its duty.

With a Good Vocabulary You Are Always Poised

Have Charming, Correct Speech

"I'm MOST scared to speak to these HERE people," she thinks, joining a group better educated than she. Will her speech betray her? Will her partner notice?

Only having a correct fluent vocabulary can save you from a sense of inferiority at such times. Knowing that it's right to say ALMOST, not MOST, that you wouldn't add HERE to these, you are freed from doubts that rob you of poise.

And you can easily check your slips. A little practice and you're soon saying "in REGARD to," "ought NOT" as automatically as you once said the crude "in REGARDS to," "HADN'T ought." At the same time check pronunciation errors. Say "LIbrary," not liBERry"; "ATHlete," not "ath-a-lete."

If you rely too much on overworked words such as "nifty" and "nice," brighten your talk with colorful new words—"a sizzling steak," "an inviting open fire."

Or do you confuse "affect" with "effect"? Do you say "She was HIRED as secretary" when you mean "EMPLOYED?"

Our 32-page booklet untangles words that sound alike, clears up those of similar meaning. Points out frequent English and pronunciation errors and gives correct forms. Lists unacceptable slang; helps you attain the smooth, fluent vocabulary that wins admiration.

ONE OF your side's assets consists of the weaknesses of your opponents. If you have them sized up dependably, you can get away with many things which otherwise would not be possible. Such a characteristic as a preference for short suit leads against No Trump by one opponent can enable you to score occasional games not truly in the cards.

The type of bidding being used by North and South really called for North to bid 2-Diamonds over his partner's opening 1-No Trump. But North knew West as a player given to leading his short suit against No Trump contracts, if his hand was not extra strong, in an effort to hit his partner's suit, and also when he had some honor cards which he feared to underlead in other suits. In fact, this fellow overdid a very good thing.

North's No Trump raise instead of a bid of his suit was solely because West might be thereby lured into leading diamonds. That is exactly what he did, offering the diamond 9. As a consequence, the declarer made five tricks in diamonds, two in spades and four in clubs by finessing and overtaking his diamond honors, giving him eleven tricks before the defenders got the lead again.

If North had bid his diamonds, West would have led a low heart, and the contract would have been beaten by five tricks in that suit.

With a Good Vocabulary You Are Always Poised

Have Charming, Correct Speech

"I'm MOST scared to speak to these HERE people," she thinks, joining a group better educated than she. Will her speech betray her? Will her partner notice?.

Only having a correct fluent vocabulary can save you from a sense of inferiority at such times. Knowing that it's right to say ALMOST, not MOST, that you wouldn't add HERE to these, you are freed from doubts that rob you of poise.

I WANT 2000 PEOPLE TO TRY SYNTONA FOR ONLY 25 CENTS

SUFFERERS FROM STOMACH TROUBLE, WEAK KIDNEYS, LAZY LIVER, NERVOUSNESS AND GENERAL RUNDOWN CONDITION

EVERY PERSON who suffers can have a special introductory bottle of SYNTONA to try for ONLY 25 CENTS.

Simply read the offer below. Do this in your own interest.

This new and scientific medicine, known as SYNTONA, has helped so many people whom the readers of this page know personally. Therefore, we offer the first trial bottle at 25 cents, because we believe the people who are benefitted will keep on using it. The offer is good for Friday and Saturday of this week only.

Science brings us methods of preparation and preservation which enable us to bring this famous medicine within easy reach of all sufferers. Permits hundreds to get away from the habitual use of nerve-deadening tablets and harsh drugs.

What It Is!

This is no salts or pill, nor is it a powder, capsule or tablet.

SYNTONA is an advanced medical compound of 12 of the finest medicinal herbs, and not one a habit-forming drug. It is taken before meals and mixes with the food in one's stomach, thus throwing off the poisons that foster stomach troubles. It acts within ten minutes to stop gas and pains, sourness, bloating and belching. At the same time SYNTONA drives the poisons from the kidneys and relieves headaches, bladder irritation and weakness.

NOW, whether SYNTONA will help you as it has thousands of others—whether it will end your suffering in a day or week—remains to be seen. But in light of what it has done for others, it is surely a mistake not to try it for 25 cents, only a fraction of its worth. This introductory offer is good Friday and Saturday ONLY, so read the rest of this announcement and act at once. Do this in fairness to yourself and your family.

What It Will Do!

SYNTONA will cleanse your bowels (gradually — not drastic or severe), and tone them into daily action.

It will bring out awful gases and impurities (frequently from the first dose) which may have been inside of you a long time, causing you many days of misery with headaches, dizzy spells, skin eruptions and lazy, drowsy, tired feeling.

SYNTONA will relieve acid conditions and make the digestive organs sweet and clean, and give grand relief from acid indigestion, bloating, sour stomach, shortness of breath and dyspepsia.

IT WILL improve your appetite and promote proper assimilation of food for ENERGY and RESISTANCE.

SYNTONA will act as a diuretic to sluggish kidneys and flush out quantities of impurities that may have become dammed up inside, causing BACKACHE, SHARP PAINS and RISING AT NIGHT.

It will make your liver more active, thus relieving spells of biliousness and sick headache.

Relieves those with rheumatism and neuritis pains, by ridding the system of excess acidity and irritating waste matter.

IT WILL clear up skin eruptions caused by the impurities in the organs, will overcome the sallowness or "muddiness" that is due to sluggish liver.

SYNTONA will make your stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels more active, build you up in general and make you FEEL like a DIFFERENT MAN or WOMAN, younger than you may have felt in YEARS.

U.K's East Ports Unusable For Large Ships

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 27.—(AP).—Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, told the American Federation of Labor here to-day that German bombing had rendered practically all eastern British ports unusable for large ships but declared United States' workers by speeding arms production could "conquer the Nazis without firing a shot."

Sir Walter told of sacrifices by labor in his country for the war effort, and said the people had pledged their determination to "carry on until the dictators are destroyed."

"The only thing dictators fear is force," he declared, "and if you can hasten the process of producing force you will serve humanity.

"We need planes, planes and more planes. The British navy may be the first line of defence for America, but I want you to make the first line of defence for all democracy in your workships."

Responding to Sir Walter's address William Green, president of the A.F.L., declared:

"We must place our profound duties in the factories and produce as never before, so that our friends may win this battle. Our cry is, 'Hurry, hurry, hurry, America and send to Great Britain all the strength she needs, so she can win quickly."

An accident occurred in Omemee Village on Saturday night when a car driven by J. Hayhurst, Guelph, crashed into a buggy owned by W. J. Thorne. The car got out of control and careened into the ditch. The buggy was completely wrecked and the horse was so badly injured it had to be shot.

Reds Behind Bulgaria Says Sofia

Horizon Brightening In Baikans Is Soviet View

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 28 (AP)—A high Soviet official has assured Bulgaria that "Russia has always supported and continues to support Bulgaria," government sources reported today.

Informed quarters said the Soviet official, Arkady Soboleff, secretary general of the Russian commissariat of foreign affairs, who headed the Soviet delegation to the Danube river conference, declared before leaving Bulgaria:—

"The Balkan horizon has brightened. Neither Turkey nor Bulgaria wants to fight, and Bulgaria is upholding her neutrality."

(Informed quarters in Berlin admitted last week that Bulgaria would not sign the Axis pact at present, although previously it was reported that strong Axis pressure was being exerted to enrol Bulgaria.)

Frats Branded As Un-British

VICTORIA, Nov. 28 — (CP). — College fraternities and sororities were termed "un-British" by Mrs. Laura Jamieson (C.C.F.-Vancouver Centre), in the British Columbia Legislature yesterday when estimates for the University of British Columbia were discussed.

She was supported by Mrs. D. G. Steeves (C.C.F.-Vancouver North), who said the fraternity system "has been the curse of European universities," and added that it contributed to a great extent to the rise of Hitlerism in Germany.

The charges brought a promise from Hon. G. M. Weir, Provincial Secretary, to look into the matter, but he said final control rested with the Senate and Board of Governors of the university.

Mrs. Jamieson charged that "fraternities and sororities are distinctly undemocratic" and endanger the democratic atmosphere of the campus by "dividing the student body into classes where wealth secured a premium."

"Those attending the University (of British Columbia) are becoming more and more from the better-off families," she said.

Preparing Turkey

Rome, Nov. 28 (AP)

THE newspaper Il Giornale d'-Italia claimed today that Britain is sending convoys of supplies to Turkey to prepare that country for developments in Italy's attempted invasion of Greece.

The editor of the newspaper, Virginio Gayda, said in explanation of yesterday's naval battle south of Sardinia that strong forces of British warships were escorting convoys in the Mediterranean "toward Egypt, Greece and even Turkey, which the London government wants to equip owing to developments of Greek events."

35 Germans Shot As W. Indies Raid Fizzles

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—(AP)—The World-Telegram said today a German landing party from a raider operating in the Caribbean was repulsed by British forces at Curacao, Netherlands West Indies, when the Nazis attempted to destroy valuable oil refineries there. The paper, quoting an unidentified eyewitness, said the Germans invaded Curacao the night of July 28, and that British land forces and shots from two armed tankers in the harbor killed or wounded 35 Germans.

This informant said strict censorship kept the "invasion" a secret.

The paper said the invaders were supposed to have come from the German raider which sank the British freighters King John and Davisian last July 10, about 240 miles northeast of the Virgin islands.

The informant said he learned of Rome Frowns On Iron Guard Terror

Rumanian Situation Almost Out Of Premier's Control

ROME, Nov. 28—(AP)—The newspaper Il Popolo di Roma termed today the slaying of at least 64 political prisoner by Rumanian Iron Guardists in Bucharest "unjustifiable lynching."

Referring to yesterday's purge the newspaper said: "The action carried out by Legionnaires certainly was not legal. It was contrary in every way to the political tendencies of General Ion Antonescu, who can only deplore it...One can only hope that Rumania will find peace again in the spirit and doctrine of the Axis."

Antonescu In Difficulty

BUDAPEST, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Rumanian Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu struggled to check possible anarchy in his new Iron Guard state as self-appointed execution squads of green shirted Guardists were reported threatening the lives of every political enemy in Rumania.

The outburst of vengeance in which at least 64 Rumanians met violent death yesterday, including generals and cabinet ministers under former King Carol, was said to have touched off a virtual reign of terror. Both Antonescu and Vice-Premier Horia Sima, leader of the pro-Nazi guard, pleaded for "legality, justice and order."

These reports slipped past a screen of censorship:

The blood purge, started by a rebellious wing of the Iron Guard "legionary movement," struck down not only those incarcerated in Jilva prison but also numerous politicians who never were arrested.

Only prompt government protection saved former premiers George Tatarescu and Ion Gigurtu and former war minister Gen. George Ilasievici from assassination.

Antonescu himself is considering resigning if extremist guardists cannot be restrained.

The whereabouts of Juliu Maniu, famed leader of the one-time National Peasant party, is not known and fears are expressed for his safety. He has had a strong bodyguard since Iron Guard rule began after Carol's abdication in September.

Antonescu's efforts to cool off the Iron Guardist extremists are backed by German divisions on Rumanian soil and by Rumanian garrisons, both reported ready for instant action.

DIPLOMATIC sources in Lisbon reported today that a new trade pact between Great Britain and Spain had been completed in Madrid negotiations.

While its provisions were not divulged, it was described as considerably broader than a previous agreement, with a clearing arrangement permitting Spain to purchase commodities in the entire sterling area.

11 Students Shot, 500 Jailed For Paris Riot

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—(AP).—The British Broadcasting Corporation said today 11 students had been killed in Paris, more than 500 sent to concentration camps in Germany and others deported to unoccupied France as a result of recent rioting which began Armistice Day.

The report, heard here by National Broadcasting Company, said the students, supporting the Free French movement of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, attempted to eject Germans from a university campus in Paris and that the university later was closed.

Reports from Vichy said today that Georges Ribbert, Minister of Public Information, was in Paris negotiating with German authorities there for the re-opening of the University of Paris.

Great London Hotel Savoy Struck

Carlton Also Damaged; Plymouth Attacked But Reception Too Hot

LONDON, Nov. 28—(CP).—Royal Air Force bombers delivered a heavy two-hour assault on the Rhineland city of Cologne last night, blasting at the railway network on both sides the great Rhine bridge and setting many fires with incendiary bombs, the Air Ministry news service announced today.

It was the second heavy attack on Cologne in as many nights.

2 London Hotels Hit.

Censors gave permission today to disclose that two of London's most famous hotels—the Savoy and the Carlton—were damaged in recent air raids.

The residential portion of the Carlton was closed indefinitely after a high explosive bomb plunged through the roof. About 120 persons were in this part of the building at the time, but there were no fatal casualties.

At the Savoy, where the facade above the court was among the sections damaged, six guests and members of the staff were injured, none seriously. Several rooms were damaged and masonry was hurled from the fifth floor into the street, narrowly missing the Savoy chapel.

Italian Suicide Unit Lets Greeks Through RAF Breaks Up Rally

ATHENS, Nov. 28—(AP).—Greek reports from the front indicated tonight that the Italians were in full flight up the Albanian coast after a stubborn four-day stand in the southwestern sector by a Fascist "Regiment of Death."

All were sworn to die before retreating.

ATHENS, Nov. 28—(AP). — The Greek counter-invasion of Italian-held Albania still is progressing in all sectors, according to unofficial reports today from the battlelines, but official circles maintained reserve.

Dispatches picture the Greeks as constantly hammering the Italians, forcing wholesale surrender by Fascist troops in some cases and retreat in others and the shattering—with British help in the air—of all Italian attempt to reorganize.

By sectors, the Greek dispatches reported:—

Southern—"As a result of yesterday's success our troops have succeeded in compelling the enemy to a general, quick withdrawal after fighting four days and nights without rest, sometimes launching stormy attacks at bayonet point, sometimes manoeuvring through high mountains and encircling the enemy detachments and sometimes launching surprise night attacks.

"After an attack yesterday about dawn our troops forced an entire battalion of Italians in Albania to surrender and by afternoon the enemy's resistance had collapsed.

400 Taken in One Town

Central.—Four hundred Italians captured in one village by 15 Greek soldiers after the Greek line had carried beyond the place. In darkness the Greek detachment surrounded a house where most of the Italians were barricaded with machine guns. The Greek leader fired through a window and killed an Italian second lieutentant. "The other Italians surrendered," said the despatch.

Northern—"Our troops continued to advance and occupy important enemy positions—strong enemy units opened fire in fierce resistance, but before the dash of Greek troops they dispersed in all directions.

More prisoners were taken and their statements disclosed the magnitude of the Italian disaster.

"At any moment the final clash between our advancing forces and the retreating enemy will take place. The Italians...are seriously threatened with being cut off from their bases."

Centre of this action was Pogradetz, Albanian town about 20 miles north of fallen Koritza, where a government spokesman said the Greeks encountered and crushed "systematically fortified" positions. Greek advance guards previously had been reported at the edge of the town.

(Advices reaching Ochrid, Yugoslav town on the Albanian border, however, said Greek troops attempting a flanking movement on Pogradetz had been pushed back and that the Italians were holding their lines along the Cerava River about five miles to the south.)

Destroyer and Cruiser Struck In Brush With British Off Sardinia, Rome Admits

Italians Claim In Return Their Forces Damaged 3 Cruisers, Battleship Aircraft Carrier And Downed 7 Planes

ROME, Nov. 28—(CP).—The Italian high command admitted today that the Italian destroyer Lanciere, 1,620 tons, was seriously damaged in a clash with British naval forces south of the Island of Sardinia yesterday.

The communique said the 10,000-ton Italian cruiser Fiume also was struck, but asserted the shell failed to explode.

The high command claimed that two British cruisers were hit by Italian shells and that bombs from Italian airplanes later hit an aircraft carrier, a battleship and a cruiser, starting a fire on the battleship.

(A British Admiralty communique yesterday said the Mediterranean fleet had encountered an Italian naval force and engaged it at extreme range as the Italian vessels "retired at high speed." It added that no information was available immediately on the outcome of the brush).

In fighting between fleet aircraft after the naval clash, the Italians claimed seven British planes were shot down, with the Italians losing two planes.

As Rome Tells It

In giving its version of the naval brush, the Italian high command said:—

"Yesterday afternoon naval formations of ours cruising south of Sardinia came in contact with an English squadron coming from the west, composed of several battleships, an aircraft carrier and numerous cruisers.

"Engaged in combat, our ships hit and damaged for certain a cruiser of the Kent type and a cruiser of the Birmingham type.

(The Kent class has five vessels of 10,000 tons each, the Berwick, Cornwall, Cumberland, Kent and Suffolk.

(The cruiser Birmingham is one of eight ships of the Southampton class. Five of them, the Southampton, Newcastle, Sheffield, Birmingham and Glasgow, displace 9,-100 tons; three of them, the Gloucester, Liverpool and Manchester, displace 9,400 tons.)

"An enemy projectile hit our cruiser Fiume, but failed to explode. Our destroyer Lanciere, on the other hand, was seriously hit and has been towed to base."

Ottawa Orders Restriction On Steel Sales

OTTAWA, Nov. 28—(CP). — For other than war industries, purchases of steel beyond actual current requirements have been forbidden, H. D. Scully, steel contoller and chairman of the Wartime Industries Control Board, announced today.

"This step has been taken to assure abundant supplies of steel to the armament and munitions industries," Mr. Scully's statement said.

In addition, as a means of conserving steel supplies for the armament industry, the steel controller has advised many manufacturers working on government and other orders to find substitutes for steel in products which are not of a vital war character.

"The steel controller was advised the trade throughout the Dominion that any excess over-stocking will not be permitted in future," said Mr. Scully's statement, given to the press by the director of public information, G. H. Lash.

Only Normal Needs.

"Producers and manufacturers are in turn advising their customers that they will supply only normal month-by-month requirements."

Mr. Scully added that the restrictions are of a purely voluntary nature but the controller has received assurance throughout the industry and from a variety of trade and othe associations that they will do their utmost to prevent any sales or purchases of steel in greater-than-normal quantities.

These associations will prevent any large purchases which could be spread over a period of months.

"We are determined to prevent any purchasing practices which might be detrimental to the efficient prosecution of the war," said the steel controller.

In a letter to the trade which is also being circulated among steel purchasers Mr. Scully said that in addition to his other powers the steel controller "may buy, take possession of, or otherwise acquire steel, wherever it may be found, at a price

The control powers also apply to Greek ships of more than 4,000 tons in the Eatsern Mediterranean. The statement added that the Greek shipping committee "acts in close consultation with the (British) Ministry of Shipping."

(The Greek merchant marine totalled 607 ships of 1,780,667 tons at the start of the war, ranking as the world's ninth.

(Greek losses to date are estimated at 56 ships of approximately 250,-000 tons. Part of this loss has been replaced by purchases since the war began and by flag changes).

Minor Fascists To Be Released

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(CP)— The House of Commons in a secret session today heard a review of the army's organization by War Secretary Anthony Eden.

Before the doors were closed the House discussed the treatment of British Fascists held in internment camps. Herbert Morrison, Home Secretary, announced a decision to release some lesser officials of the British Union of Fascists.

He indicated, however, that the government was not considering the release of Fascist leaders such as Sir Oswald Mosley.

Parliamentary circles said there was nothing of an emergency nature about the secret session.

Prime Minister Churchill had told the House it could expect a secret report of the war secretary's "recent adventurous journey" to the Near East and "the position generally of the great armed forces over which he presides and which are gaining in force, number and equipment as every week passes by."

The Princess Spy

Trade Opening Invites Canada

Mission To Line Up Market-Hungry Indies, Cen., S. America

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 — (CP). — Already the third exporting nation of the world, Canada has a "definite opportunity" to increase her sales to Central and South America and the West Indies, a prominent trade official said to-day.

His comment came only a matter of hours before a four-man Canadian mission headed by Trade Minister MacKinnon leaves for those areas to find what demands Canadian products can fill, and what products Canada can use in return.

The official said "several difficulties" staind in the way of a further major increase in South American and West Indies trade; but members of the mission were "very hopeful" that extension of the existing trade agreement with almost all the countries to be visited could be arranged.

It was not expected actual discussions along this line would be started during the mission's seven-week tour, since the time available at any capital would be brief. "The main purpose of the trip is to explore the situation," he said, "and clear the ground for future negotiations.

"From our information here, there seems to be a definite opportunity to develop wider markets in this hemisphere."

When Mr. MacKinnon leaves here to-morrow he will be accompanied by his deputy, L. D. Wilgress, and two other officials of his department, Yves Lamontagne and G. B. Smith. They leave New York by plane on Monday for Nassau, Bahamas, returning to Miami on Wednesday.

From there the mission goes to Jamaica, Colombia, Canal Zone, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Trinidad, and Cuba.

Canada already has a trade agreement with the British West Indies. It came into effect in 1927 for a 12-year period, and since the outbreak of war has been extended indefinitely, almost certainly for

War's Greatest Fight, At Sea

Lack Of Irish Bases, Hun Channel Hold, Snags

LONDON, Nov. 28—(CP).—Ideas for solving two of Britain's most pressing problems—how to meet German night air raids and sea warfare—were offered in the press today.

The Evening Standard, saying that "the biggest battle of this war is being fought on the Atlantic," suggested "co-operation of airplane and ship" to reduce British shipping losses.

The magazine "Aeroplane" said the answer to the problem of night bombers could be expected, "but not at once and probably not before next winter.

"There is no single technical 'device' to solve the problem," it said.

See Offensive In Troop Call

Experts Mull Spot Of Attack —Greece, Sandy Fr. Shores Or—?

LONDON, Nov. 28 — (CP). — What significance to attach to yesterday's statement by Ernest Bevin that a gigantic call-up of Britain's manpower might be expected next year has started observers guessing.

The Minister of Labor suggested in the House of Commons that men between 35 and 40 might be called then for training and the quickest assumption was involved which might necessitate large-scale troop replacements.

In the same House with Mr. Bevin was Leslie Hore-Belisha, former War Minister whose resignation was asked, and received by the late Prime Minister Chamberlain. Mr. Hore-Belisha reiterated his belief in aggressive action by demanding more vigorous participation of British troops in assisting the Greeks.

It was always Mr. Hore-Belisha's belief that the only real defence is attack and it was thought to have been this belief that cost him his portfolio last winter. He was reported then to have advocated a furious assault on the German Westwall rather than the plan followed by the Allied high command of remaining behind the Maginot Line.

The place of a major offensive is hard to guess. The logical choice would seem to be through Greece, to whose assistance British air and naval forces already have gone, but German submarines might make troop transportation from Britain a difficult problem and Italian undersea craft would do their best to stop them.

The alternative is an assault on Nazi-held European positions. At first glance this would appear as difficult as a German assault on England. Actually it is not quite the case.

The southern coast of England at the Strait of Dover is high and the foreshore comparatively short for a considerable measure of its length.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Nov. 28 — (AP).—Out of the frozen Yukon today came the uncanny story of an aged Alaskan Sourdough who, dying in the wilderness, was believed to have deliberately entombed his body in ice to save it from the wolves.

Encased in solid ice, the body of 84-year-old Edwin A. Robertson was found by a searching party in a glacial stream where a little trickle of water still flowed over the ice.

AA's Scatter Chain Raid On U.K.

Southwest Town Escapes Lightly Despite 150 Planes

LONDON, Nov. 28—(CP). — "A heavy and successful" overnight bombing raid on Cologne was announced today by the Air Ministry while Nazi night fliers centred their attacks on London and a southwest English town which censorship left nameless.

The "invasion ports" of Le Havre, Boulogne and Antwerp also underwent Royal Air Force raids, the Air Ministry declared.

A joint communique of the Air and Home Security Ministries disclosed casualties were few and damage "not extensive" in London, the southwest town and scattered points attacked by Nazi fliers, some of whom ranged as far as southeast Scotland.

It was announced unofficially that the southwest town had "barely any scars" and only two minor casualties.

Between 150 and 200 German planes participated in the raid, it was estimated.

German or Italian planes were reported near East Anglia this morning.

Several small groups of raiders crossed the Kent coast at great height. Anti-aircraft fire broke up their formations, but they headed inland toward the northwest.

the duration. The Dominion also has "most favored nation" agreements with all the other countries to be visited except Peru, Chile, and Cuba.

Mutual problems developed for Canada and other Western Hemisphere nations as a result of the war. German aggression shut off trade with Norway, the Netherlands Belgium and France. New markets had to be found. The British Navy has kept European enemy countries from shipping goods to this hemisphere.

Canada found new markets in a hurry. Shipment of huge quantities of war materials and foodstuffs to Britain and other Empire countries more than replaced her lost markets in Continental Europe. And in addition she got increased orders from Western Hemisphere nations. She replaced Germany as third exporting nation, behind the United Kingdom and United States.

Exports Up 62 per cent

Mr. MacKinnon announced a month ago that exports to South America were valued at $21,509,000 in the first 12 months of the war, an increase of 62 per cent from the previous year. Argentina and Brazil nearly doubled their purchases and every other South American country bought more goods.

"The countries to be visited by the Canadian mission still are suffering greatly from lack of markets and lack of source of supply," a trade official here said. "They are looking to North America to supply them with goods and to take their own products."

One of the mission's principal duties, he said, would be to determine what things Canada could buy in the nations to be visited. Many of the products they could provide were available already to Canada, either from home production or from other Empire nations.

In addition, many of the countries had only a limited amount of foreign exchange available to purchase Canadian goods.

"It's hard to say what Canadian products might be affected if extended trade with these countries is arranged," he said. "It all depends on what the mission discovers the needs of the countries to be, and what products Canada can profitably import to maintain a fairly reasonable balance on imports and exports."

The official said that since most of the nations to be visited received "most favored nation" treatment with Canada, any major change in tariff arrangements affecting one country likely would mean changes involving the other nation as well.

Americans There, Too

While Mr. MacKinnon and his mission are on their tour, two members of the Inter-American Development Commission, Washington, will be in the same area, attempting to establish groups in each of the American republics for the betterment of Western hemisphere trade.

This American move is in line with President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy, under which the United States has signed trade treaties with most South American countries.

Through the permanent inter-American Economic and Financial Committee established at Panama last year, the United States is striving to stimulate hemisphere collaboration on economic matters.

The U.S. Import-Export Bank also is extending credit to some Latin-American countries under which they may purchase equipment and other goods in the United States to strengthen their home industry.

The weather was bitterly cold, the route untravelled and without shelter and the country infested with packs of wolves.

As United States Commissioner R. E. Steel reconstructed Robertson's end, darkness overtook the old timer on the trail and he tried to camp for the night beside the stream. But when he was unable to light a fire, death from freezing swiftly approached.

The commissioner believes the howling wolves and the certainty of death then impelled the Alaskan pioneer to take a step which cheated the wolves.

From the position in which the body was found yesterday with parka pulled over his head and his arms folded, Steel was convinced that Robertson had purposely lain in the stream, with the freezing water trickling over him, to make sure the wolves would not get his body.

"Just after dark....one of the gun crew (from a tanker) said he wanted to go back to his ship. I offered to drive him down. We were about a half-mile from the dock when a Dutch officer, with a revolver strapped on his hip, stopped us, flashed a light in our faces and said he wanted to use my car to move his family away from the gasoline tanks.

"The gunner got out and hurried on to his tanker. The docks were alive with reports that a Nazi landing party already was heading that way for an attack on the refinery.

"As the tanker was moving around so it could train its guns on the shore, the shooting started. There was murder going on—machine guns and hand grenades. Then the tankers began firing into the mess. I know that it must be really serious when the tankers were firing, for every time they shot they were running the chance of blowing themselves to pieces by igniting a gas pocket that might have formed while they were taking on gasoline.

co-operation with Japan.

(Chiang's regime, the legal government of China, which now operates out of the temporary capital of Chungking, does not recognize the authority of Wang's administration, established in Japanese-conquered China).

Outstanding features of the instrument were said to be:

1. A provision that Japanese troops remain in China "for two years after complete peace is restored everywhere in China."

2. A provision extending the so-called "anti-Communist" region, where Japanese troops are stationed permanently, to include North China as well as Inner Mongolia.

Much For Japan.

These two clauses, it was said, would give Japan a permanent military grip on all China north of the Yellow River and at the same time make unlikely withdrawals from other areas.

In the economic field the proposed treaty was represented as threatening by implication the virtual exclusion of foreign interests and Japanese monopolistic control of the majority of China's resources.

It was stated the instrument dealt with economic questions in general terms but declared "Japan will have all facilities in all matters that affect her war economy."

A foreign interpretation of this was that China would become "a second Manchoukuo" with freedom to sell to other countries such products as Japan did not want and freedom to buy what Japan could not sell her.

Unknown Soldier Given Blame

The story of the unknown soldier who donated a half-filled bottle of wine to John O'Brien of Sault Ste. Marie when the two happened to meet in the market rest room failed to save O'Brien and two companions from convictions in liquor charges in police court this morning.

Constables John Naples and C. J. McGillen swore that they found O'Brien in company with Edward Hummel and William O'Toole in the lumber yard at the rear of the Peterborough Canoe Company at noon on Monday, O'Brien they said had a half-filled bottle of wine in his coat pocket and Hummel, the first of the accused to be tried, smelled of wine.

Chief Constable Newhall said that at the police station Hummel had said that they had "only had a little drink."

O'Brien called as a defence witness said that the wine had been given to him in the rest room on the market square and that neither he nor his companions had consumed any of it before the officers arrived on the scene.

"The soldier said to me" stated the witness "if you don't drink yourself, John, give it to some of your friends."

O'Toole and Hummel both testified that they had had nothing to drink out of the bottle of wine.

Magistrate Langley registered a conviction against Hummel on a charge of illegal consumption, declaring that he could not believe the evidence of O'Brien and his companions.

Hummel was fined $10 and $5 costs, the latter including $2 stenographer's fees.

O'Toole had also pleaded not guilty to a similar charge and Constable John Naples had been called to the witness box when the accused announced that he would change his plea to guilty.

He, too, was fined $10 but the costs were $3, there being no fee for the stenographer.

O'Brien, a transient, who is well known here, pleaded guilty to illegal consumption and as a second offender was fined $50 and costs or a month in jail.

"Couldn't you date it back so I can get home to Sault Ste. Marie for Christmas" the accused asked.

"You had better have your Christmas dinner in jail here; you will be home for New Year's if you want to" replied the magistrate.

Provinces Must Cut Outlay Member Says

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 (CP)—In the face of steadily rising revenue requirements of the federal government to finance the war, the provinces must curtail expenditures, W. K. Esling (Con. Kootenay West) says.

While he believes in conscription of wealth, the combination of present federal and provincial income taxes in some provinces on the high incomes leaves comparatively little —without including defence and municipal taxes, he contends.

"There is only one thing to be done," he told the House of Commons yesterday. "The (Finance) Minister must use his persuasive powers on the provinces to cut down their expenditures during the war."

Old Account Is Wiped Out

Accepting an old omission of bowling alley licenses as an departmental oversight and "an erroneous view" that continued for six years until three years ago, the legal committee of the City Council Wednesday night decided to forget about the whole affair, and wipe out an account which the city itself had neglected to present and collect.

The bill was for $480 against the Duffus alleys, sixteen of them at five dollars each for six years. And those six years extended back from 1937 when the collection of bowling alley licenses was begun again, and since then has been paid by the Duffus Company, the Y.M.C.A. and the K. of C. They have been paid during those three years because the license accounts were submitted annually.

City Clerk Outram explained that in his recollection there were the Duffus and Solomon alleys, in the city, and some discussion arose as to whether a club should be charged the license fee, and also whether the Duffus alleys should be charged. It happened that the Duffus account "got into the non-active list" by mistake, and it remained there until three years ago when Mr. Outram wrote to all three bowling organizations advising them that they were required to pay the license. They have done so since then, but the uncollected licenses of the Duffus Company for those previous six years called for some decision one way or the other to dispose of the account.

In the meantime the "Y" and K. of C. had been operating bowling alleys without paying a license, and last night Alderman Gordon's committee agreed that if any attempt was to be made to collect the old Duffus bill, accounts should also be presented for those six years to the two associations each of which has four alleys, it was said.

The committee's attitude was expressed by Aldermen Dutton and Bradburn that all three should be treated alike. It was felt that since the licenses were begun to be collected during the last three years they had been paid, and the previous suspension of payment was caused in the first place by some error resulting in failure on the city's part to demand the licenses for the six years.

Alderman Bradburn's motion, seconded by Alderman Dutton, recommended the cancellation of the Duffus account, and that in future a closer check be kept on all licenses.

Alderman Bradburn then enquired about what action was taken in regard to a George Street dance hall which had been refused a license to operate until a fire escape had been provided.

Mayor Hamilton said it had been referred to the police and was in their hands. City Engineer Parsons supplemented the information by recalling his own action.

"They have had three years to put in a fire escape and they haven't done so," he told the committee. "The police stepped in on Friday night, and according to them the place is not operating. They don't get a license until they put in a fire escape."

Mayor Hamilton said he understood that the police had the place closed last Saturday night, and the question of operating could be left to the authority of Chief Newhall.

Plans Are Drawn For Incinerator

Preliminary plans of a new incinerator to cost $23,000 were shown to the property committee of the council Wednesday night by City Engineer Parsons. He was asked to go ahead and fill in details in the possibility that the present council or its 1941 successor may decide to replace the old fire box which Alderman McCannan says has been doing an excellent job.

In the opinion of the committee as expressed last night the present site on Townsend street should be retained, although the exact location of a new incinerator would be changed.

For four or five years the property committee has been advising a new incinerator plant, and Alderman McCannan and those who have been chairmen have been warning the council that the present structure might collapse any day. Repairs have helped to hold it together, but the council feels that the job has to be undertaken some time, and that the danger of the old frame falling down continues from month to month.

Potash salts will be recovered from sea-water by a firm in Norway.

Explaining the steel controller's advice to those working on government and other orders to find substitutes for steel, a spokesman said it referred to more extensive use of wood than heretofore.

For instance, he said, in all temporary war buildings being erected for the government and in airplane hangars across the country wooden trusses were used instead of steel. Also, manufacturers making steel shelves, desks, filing cabinets and such things were being encouraged to use wood instead.

Puts Faith In Sima.

Antonescu, who became the Guardists' "spiritual" leader when he donned their green shirt after becoming Premier, is described here as having pinned his hope for a national rennaissance on Sima's ability to convert party extremists to an orderly program.

Instead, Sima was bitterly criticized by Ion Codreanu, father of the Iron Guard founder, who led an abortive attack on the Bucharest "green house" headquarters of the Guard and is now reported in custody in a hospital.

The split became so dangerous that some members of the Codreanu faction were put to death by the government on charges of treason but even this did not dissuade it from attempting a purge, it was said.

A brief commentary on the Bucharest radio last night deplored the prison "incident" as an "error of youthful mentality by armed people" who took revenge on the old regime and thus did the Iron Guard "great damage."

Disappearance of Prof. Nicolae Iroga, former mentor of King Carol, was rumored but whether it was meant he had been taken into custody by the Government or by rebellious green shirts was unknown.

Britain's Spitfire defenders and anti-aircraft guns to-day after another night of give-and-take bombardment.

Machine-gun fire was heard over south-east coastal villages, said the Exchange Telegraph News Agency, as fighter patrols broke up the formations of daylight attackers.

The night had brought renewed bombing of London, a south-west English town (which German sources claimed was the port of Plymouth), and scattered points reaching as far as south-east Scotland. Berlin said over 100 planes took part; but the poor visibility hampered exact observation.

On the British side of the ledger "a heavy and successful" night bombing of Cologne was carried out, while Le Havre and Boulogne, France and Antwerp, Belgium, on the invasion coast of the Continent, also were bombed.

As if to support Nazi daylight attackers, German long-range guns rocked the Dover coast area, their fire directed by a "spotter" plane which British anti-aircraft gunners tried to strike down. Shells fell at regular intervals for more than an hour and a half and the fire was returned by British artillery.

One raider plane turned back toward the French coast with smoke pouring from it. A crippled plane was believed to have jettisoned two heavy bombs which fell in the sea off a southeast coast town.

A few of the invaders got through the British defences to London and one was brought down by fighting planes near Croydon, on the London outskirts.

A joint communique of the Air and Home Security Ministries said the night's casualties in Britain were few and damage "not extensive."

Unofficially, 11 persons, including six children, were reported killed in a village near the south-west town attacked by the German night fliers.

London had another air raid warning around noon, followed shortly by the all-clear.

Two Messerschmitts, fleeing from British pursuit planes, dropped two bombs on a town in south-eastern England this morning.

One of the bombs damaged a maternity home. Two persons were cut by flying glass.

MILLBROOK

Home Baking Nets Over $40

MILLBROOK, Nov. 28—(ENS).—An enjoyable event of Saturday afternoon was the sale of home-made baking, and hot supper, held in the community waiting room under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Grace Presbyterian Church.

Table conveners were Miss Mina Gibson, with Mary Eakins and Jean Syer as helpers; and Mrs. Alex. Miller, her assistants being Margaret Armstrong and Mrs. Mervan Kinsman.

The abundant menu was enjoyed by the large number of guests who filled the long tables more than once, and in charge of the home baking counter, with its tempting array of bread, buns, pies, cakes, fresh eggs, etc., were Mrs. A. Kerr was cashier, and over forty dollars was added to the society's treasury as a result of the undertaking.

Next event of a similar character in the village is the afternoon tea being held at the Parsonage on Saturday, November 30, from 3 to 5 p.m., under the auspices of the Golden Links Mission Circle, Mrs. E. J. Powell president.

Girls' Club Meets.

The "Home Front Guard" Girls' Club met on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. C. Thorndyke, with seven members, and two visitors answering the roll. The vice-president, Luella Kennedy, occupied the chair.

The bottles for testing water were given out to the members, several of whom reported having sold all their tickets on the fruit cake, more being supplied. The leader, Mrs. W. H. Armstrong, took up the topic: "Public health services in our district," under the headings: Pasteurization of milk, T.B. testing of cows, Medical health officers, vaccination and serums for combating disease.

How to buy graded foods, and the national pantry shelf were next considered, the latter including: eggs, milk, fruits and vegetables. Considering the subject of healthful clothing, it was pointed out that clothing must not be tight fitting, but allow free movement, and muscular activity, and must not crowd or restrain any part of the body; (2) it must furnish proper protection against injury, and to withstand cold; (3) allow free circulation of air, on the body surface.

The roll was answered with names of people who have made contribution to health, these including: Madame Curie, radium; Louis Pasteur, pasteurization; Joseph Lester, listerine; Sir Frederick Banting and Dr. Joseph Jabel, insulin; Edward Jenner, vaccination against smallpox.

Next week the roll will be answered by "A book I would like to own," and the meeting will again be at Mrs. Thorndyke's. The home assignment is: Plan and prepare a meal for the family, with a probable estimate of the cost.

The Nazis Will Teach Them

News from Holland comes through Berlin today, and the latest word is that military traffic is congested there (Amsterdam is mentioned in particular) "by various cycling law violators, principally couples who hold hands while pedalling down the road."

In addition to cash fines the Germans have started a new system of punishment. They deflate the tires and remove the valves.

What massive brain must have churned and throbbed to have finally produced such an ingenious arrangement!

Imagine if you can full-grown hulks of men running about, wearing the uniform and insignia of the great German nation, and with all the power and might of authority behind them—snooping around and letting the air out of bicycle tires.

And all because the people riding on bicycles take up the road space which is required for military traffic!

The thing is all out of joint and out of proportion. Good land, the young people of Holland have for years been holding hands when they go out cycling in the evening. The ones who are being punished for doing it today are doing exactly what their mothers and fathers did before them.

They make no bones about it and they do it remarkably well. One can see any number of them in Holland. The young man and his lady love start out and they ride side by side. We have seen them riding when the man puts one hand on the handle of the lady's wheel and she in turn puts a hand on his handle. And thus arranged away they go. The country is flat as a pancake and that is why there are more than four million bicycles in that country of eight million people.

So they are punished by having the air taken from their tires and the valves removed, which would make pumping up impossible. The grave and ingenious Germans will teach them. The innocent pleasures with generations of tradition behind it will have to be kicked to one side so that military traffic can have its free course. The men with guns and bayonets and iron heels and hate and repression must have preference in Holland today. And possibly the men who perform the operation of deflating the tires have that feeling of the patriot who is serving his country. There may even be citation for valor.

We know that no person loses a life or has a leg broken in this form of repression but the whole thing is part and parcel of the nauseating extent to which the military traffic of Germany has sprawled its way across Europe. And why military traffic in Holland? Are the goose-stepping Germans afraid the Hollanders will run into them with their bicycles? Or is it that when the iron heel starts to grind it must put beneath it everything which has been the custom and the pleasure of the conquered country?

A Stranger In His Own Office

Lord Rothermere, who died suddenly in Bermuda, was the owner of many newspapers, the king pin of which was the London Daily Mail. He had large pulpwood concessions and mills in Newfoundland and other business interests in Canada.

Whether he could be regarded as a great newspaper publisher is something we do not know, nor have we ever encountered the individual who could furnish the answer. As a manipulator and buyer of newspaper properties he was a success, if such can be called success. And it is an undoubted act that he made so much money that it was probably correct to say he did not know how much he was worth.

Lord Rothermere was known for one thing—he never was in his office, or in the office of any of his newspapers. There are men who worked for years on some of his biggest papers and they would not know the man if they saw him on the street. There was something like a legend in London that if one desired to find Lord Rothermere the poorest place to inquire would be at the office of the Daily Mail.

Seldom did he write anything for any of his papers, but when he did it attracted attention because it appeared over the signature of My Lord Rothermere. Whether the reading public paid much attention to his writings is unknown. He did not possess the keen sense of news values which was the chief asset of his late brother, Lord Northcliffe, and he considered it advisable to relinquish the grip on the London Times which Lord Northcliffe controlled from 1908 until 1922.

Lord Rothermere was Air Minister during 1917-18, but as a member of the Cabinet he was not outstanding. Nor did he pay much attention to the seat which was his in the House of Lords, and frequently he was urged to attend and air his views there rather than through his newspapers. His estate on the border of Kent and Sussex is credited with 70 bedrooms and 26 bathrooms, and he has a pretentious villa on the French Riviera, and much of his time was spent there.

He was a great business man who preferred to remain behind the scenes, but he could never be regarded as a great publisher or newspaper man. When it came to making plans and watching them add to his already great fortune he was possibly somewhat of a wizard.

When Bulgaria Said No

Bulgaria today feels it has some friends, and that is what a little nation needs. More now than ever before. Bulgaria was looked upon as a sure thing for the Rome-Berlin Axis, and it did look very much as though the signing-up would be done. But it wasn't.

Russia advised Bulgaria to stay out, and on top of that Britain promised to respect the integrity of Bulgaria if that country did nothing to bring assistance to her enemies. The meaning of that British promise had more effect than might have been anticipated, and it needs explaining. Germany had been carrying on propaganda for weeks and the story was that Britain, if victorious, had pledged to divide Bulgaria among her neighbors. Britain was wise enough to nail that canard and nail is openly. If Britain had said nothing the report might have gone unchallenged that Bulgaria was due to be carved in the event of British victory.

The one matter which has not been settled is control of the lower Danube River, and that is something which intimately concerns Russia and Germany, and as soon as Bulgaria announced her intention to stay out of the Axis group Russia pressed her advantage, and it is believed that long conferences which took place between Russian and Bulgarian diplomats had to do with that very old question—the Danube—regarded as Germany's life-line to the East through the Balkans.

Bulgaria is at least having a breathing spell after being very much on the spot. Just why Hitler accepted Bulgaria's negative reply with such complacence is one of those things for which there is no present explanation.

Why Be Famous?

Perhaps it is safer for a man to be an ordinary person, a very humble chap who goes about some simple task each day and on toward dusk takes the beaten path toward home. There he may rattle the furnace and perform such tasks as seem proper. Later on he banks the fire and goes to bed.

Much safer to lead that sort of existence than to be the inventor of new war material. Despatches from Washington refer to the man who worked for fifteen years and finally perfected the Norden bombsight, said to be the finest and most accurate in the world.

He is referred to as "Mr. X" and his identity is carefully concealed. Not under any circumstances would it be stated where he lives or if he is a married man with a family. We learn he is guarded at all times lest some one run off with him and force from him the secrets regarding the bombsight.

He cannot walk proudly and with a feeling of elation down the main street of his town and receive the congratulations of friends. The local paper cannot write a story about him on the general theme that "local boy makes good," nor can his wife attend meetings and mix with her friends and thus bask in the reflected glory of "my husband."

Perhaps the man finds his reward in knowing that he has done a service to his country; he may have been well paid for it, and probably was. But he has to live under a bushel, and he may feel like looking under the bed before he turns in at night. It must be miserable to be a person of world wide importance and then for safety's sake have to live in such a way that the fact will be concealed. Much better to be the ordinary little fellow and be able to crow when wages have gone up a dollar a week.

Just Another Barn Fire

We recall driving through the country at night some time ago and there was a red glare in the sky. The remark passed was "It's just another of those barn fires." There wouldn't be anything to see and it might be several miles away. No use turning aside—just another barn fire.

There was one four miles from Fergus, in Wellington county. A lantern was being used in the barn and the farmer was in the mow putting down feed when something dropped on the lantern and the fire was on. The farmer had time to shove open a door and get a new seed drill out. When his wife came to his aid four horses and eight cows were saved, but everything else went.

The barn was exceptionally large and was but three years old. In it were 3,000 bushels of grain, 500 bags of potatoes, five calves, ten pigs, a colt, 50 tons of hay and as much straw. Then there would be all the tools and odds and ends which collect in a barn. All the farm implements with the exception of a tractor and seeder were lost. In terms of money the loss is placed at $10,000, and this is partially covered by insurance.

Yes—just another barn fire—but how would you like to be that farmer at this time of year trying to carry on without a barn and without feed; without a place to stable the horses or the cows? And how would you like to replace that large barn at today's prices for building? And it may be that some who saw it from a distance remarked: "Just another barn fire."

NOTE AND COMMENT

Latest report of the heroic adventures of the Italian fleet is that it has been moved to a safer port.

The writer of a letter to the Kingston Whig-Standard signs himself "Buckshot." Admittedly that signature is several degrees more emphatic than "Pro Bono Publico."

One candidate running for Mayor in Brantford uses as a slogan: "More Industries and Lower Taxation." That's the stuff to make the voters come out early and form in line.

We read where J. C. Dill of Ellice township in Perth county had not missed a nomination meeting in forty years. The list of those who have never attended a nomination meeting is impressively and dangerously long.

It has been said that the three horsemen of the Apocalypse, famine, pestilence and death will ride behind war in Europe this winter. They were started off from Berlin.

Traffic accidents in Britain are increasing and the number of vehicles allowed on the roads is decreasing. One can understand what the officials there mean when they say it doesn't make sense.

The Edmonton Journal says that 10 per cent. of the young men passed as O.K. by their family doctors are being turned down at the training camps. The young men would not have changed in the interval, but the doctors would.

One wise man claims oranges and grapefruit are berries, while strawberries and raspberries are not. Well, just at the moment we refuse to argue, as there appears to be more important matters needing attention.

One minister reported that after doing some calling in the afternoon and attending a church social in the evening he had consumed 16 cups of tea in one day. If he were as full of sound doctrine as he was of tea then he should be in shape for one powerful sermon.

In Stratford there were 65 names suggested at the civic nomination meeting, but at best there would be no more than 17 vacancies. As usual there were those complimentary nominations of people who had no intention of running. It may be a fine old custom, but it is as silly as it's fine.

DIET

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I know my diet's rather strict, if I departed I'd be licked, I'd double up in pain; for gout would turn me powerful sick, I'd have to limp upon a stick, or use my basswood cane.

¶ I've been advised so many times, to wander not from proper lines, to try not this and that; I've written down what I can eat, and made a shortened list and neat, and stuck it in my hat.

¶ But when Joe asks me to his place, to shake my head would be disgrace, he wears a friendly look; and when he puts you in a chair, you bank on what you're getting there, his wife's a dandy cook.

¶ 'Tis right to say their table groans, and doing so makes such pleasant tones, things I've not seen before; before one thing's been et half through, they keep suggesting then to you, that you should have some more.

¶ And I've been warned that I might die, if I went stoking up on pie, but Joe just laughs at me; their pumpkin pie's two inches thick, it ought to make me deathly sick, when I've had pieces three.

¶ But when I get stuffed up at Joe's, I sort of fit tight in my clothes, and get to feeling grand; I clean forget about the list, how I should fight and still resist—then sleep to beat the band.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

NEXT Saturday will be Saint Andrew's Day, and as this column has two large books to review then let us discuss the national saint of Scotland today. It has been usual for the Scots to hold a feast on Saint Andrew's Day for at least a hundred and fifty years past, a feast which is sometimes called "Burns' Night," perhaps because the works of that poet are so lavishly quoted then. It has been said that Scotland is wherever three Scots are gathered together, and certainly it is true that Saint Andrew's Day is celebrated in every corner of the Empire. The writer, as a Marchbanks, and descended from generations of Marchbanks', cannot but approve the custom.

C & B

The white decussate cross on a blue ground, which is the Standard of Scotland and a part of the Union Jack, commemorates the cross upon which Saint Andrew died. He was one of the Apostles, and it is believed that he was put to death at Patrae, in Achaia, in the year 69. Although has it that Andrew was scourged, there is no conclusive proof, tradition then fastened to the X-like cross with cords, head down, and that he remained in that position, "teaching and instructing the people all the time," until he died on the second day.

C & B

The story goes on that after Andrew died, a portion of this holy cross was carried to Brussels by the Duke of Burgundy and Brabant, called Philip the Good. It was Philip who established the Order of the Golden Fleece, the knights of which wore the cross of Andrew as their distinguishing badge; it was then called the cross of Burgundy.

C & B

The connection of Saint Andrew with Scotland arises from the fact that in 369 an abbot called Regulus journeyed to that country from Constantinople, bearing with him relics of the saint. He established a church and a monastery in honor of Andrew which he called Abernethy, on the site of the present city of Saint Andrews. Abernethy became a place of pilgrimage for the devout from all over Europe.

C & B

It is curious also to know that the Russians lay claim to Saint Andrew, or did until they lost interest in all saints other than Saint Marx. It used to be claimed by the Russian Orthodox Church that Andrew made a mission to what later became Russia, and they established him as titular saint of the Russian Empire. Peter the Great founded an order of knighthood in the name of Saint Andrew, the distinguished mark of which was a blue ribbon.

C & B

As might be expected it was formerly believed (and may still be, for anything the writer knows to the contrary) that Saint Andrew would work spells and charms for those who sought his aid on November 30th. This belief is embodied in the verses by Barnaby Googe, one of which runs:

To Andrew all the lovers and the lustie wooers come,
Beleeving through his ayde, and certaine ceremonies done,
(While as to him they presents bring and conjure all the night,)
To have good lucke, and to obtaine their chiefe and sweete delight.

C & B

Other countries than Scotland have had their Saint Andrew's Day customs. In the parish of Easling, in Kent, what the historian refers to, contemptuously, as "labourers and lower kind of people," gathered for a squirrel-hunt, armed with guns, poles, clubs and other primitive weapons; then they paraded about the countryside, shouting and killing not only squirrels, but also hares, pheasants and partridges, breaking down hedges and doing other mischief. The day's sport ended in the alehouse, where free fights were not uncommon.

C & B

The Saint Andrew's Day feast is an occasion of great ceremony and traditional observance. It is usual for a haggis to be eaten, and it is brought before the company in great state, to the sound of bagpipes. A dish even older in its association with this feast, however, is the singed sheep's head, either boiled or baked; this is the dish usually served to Scottish societies in London. It, also, is produced amid the skirling of the pipes, a tradition which speaks highly for the hardihood of the Scots people. Many people find the noise of the bagpipes intolerable; the writer is not one of them. But only a true, unregenerate Scot can take pleasure in hearing the pipes indoors, and particularly while eating. There is something insistent and remorseless in their droning which destroys the equanimity and causes all the digestive processes to stop. A man who can eat a heavy dinner to the sound of the pipes cannot be destroyed by any ordinary means.

Well Away

Judge: "How do you know this man was drunk last night?"

Constable: "Well, I found him in the club hallway with a can, watering the flowers on the linoleum."

Deserted

Officer: "I say, sergeant, where have all these silly asses in our company gone?"

Sergeant: "I don't know, sir—I think we're the only two left."

AND THEN . . .

"Thought I told you to pick up paper?"
"'Sright, sarge. Firsht bit was a ten-bob note."
—Humorist.

• The First Time He Met Him

Letter in Ottawa Journal

SIR,—A very short time before his death I met Sir Percy Sherwood on Sparks street in front of the new Post Office.

As he had so often done, in the last 56 years, he gave my a hearty hand-clasp, saying: "I'm glad to see you. You look well. Keep it up. Good luck to you!" One always felt better for the rest of the day after a greeting from Sir Percy Sherwood.

Our first meeting, in 1884, was a somewhat unusual one. It seems worth recording.

Sir Percy was Chief of the Dominion Police and I was the messenger, assistant operator, collector and inspector of the Bell Telephone Company at 18 Elgin street — a stone's throw away from Sir Percy's office in the basement of the East Block.

On the day in question I was sent to fix Sir Percy's telephone. He was not in his office when I arrived, but as his door was open I placed my hat upon his desk, sat in his chair and proceeded to overhaul his telephone. The microphones used in those days were Blake transmitters and, while they worked very well, they frequently got out of order and needed considerable adjusting. When they were adjusted to the inspector's satisfaction it was his duty to have a trial conversation with "Central." Then he would blow a constant stream of air against the diaphragm of the transmitter until, by final adjustment, he got an uninterrupted sound in his own ear.

To one entering the Chief's office at the time above indicated, the following picture confronted him: A boy with his lips almost touching the microphone, whispering inaudibly ("That you Myrt?") and so completely engrossed with his work that he could not hear approaching footsteps or anything else. The Chief—for it was the Chief who was entering his own office—strode towards me from the rear, grasped my coat collar with his good right hand and skidded me across his office floor and through the open door into the corridor beyond! He was the curler, as it were, and I was the stone. As he was returning to his desk he shouted: "How often must I tell you urchins you must not play around these offices!"

As he took his seat he noticed my hat upon his desk and glancing towards the door saw me limply leaning against the corridor-wall and looking longingly at my hat. As the storm within him subsided he turned to me and said: "What were you doing in here anway?" "I was trying to fix your telephone," I answered. "Oh, this is too bad," said Sir Percy, "I'm very sorry. I hope I didn't hurt you. Here's your hat—you'll forgive me—won't you?" His warm hand-clasp, which I then felt for the first time, will never be forgotten.

"GAZETA KATOLICKA" (catholic Gazette) Polish-language weekly, Winnipeg: "No stretch of imagination is required to foresee that in the course of the present war Great Britain and Poland will strengthen mutual confidence, will mutually appreciate their values and will create foundations for future pacific collaboration. Great Britain will need Poland as a factor on which she will be able to rely in the new balanced order of European nations. And Poland will need Great Britain for the realization of her political and pacifistic plans as well as for her economic reconstructions.

The present war will bring about the collapse of the influence and importance of the Romanic nations, as Italy—on account of her alliance with Germany—France—which has already abandoned her previous world position by her voluntary capitulation—and Spain—which will finally collapse after the defeat of her Rome and Berlin protectors.

In such circumstances, the Slavs, freed from their present dependence, will be in a position fully to develop their vital forces and become a crystallizing centre in post-war Europe. It may also be assumed that the course of the war itself will turn Poland into the centre of a new Slavic bloc of nations that will be strong, thanks to its cultural value and its geopolitical position, bringing at the same time Great Britain and the United States into a new supreme world hegemony and a close pacific co-operation."

"Ukrainsky Holos" (Ukrainian Voice) Winnipeg, commenting on the suppression of Ukrainian Communist organizations in Canada: We have been, for many years, warning the people of the criminal work of Moscow's agents. We have also been warning of the criminal work of Berlin's agents which differed from that of the Communists only as much as the right hand differs from the left. Exactly as the Communists were shielding themselves with the argument that they were caring for the Soviet Ukraine as the "only Ukrainian state in the world" but were taking from Moscow instructions how to serve that country, so the Nationalists (or rather Nazis) are shielding themselves with the argument that they are only thinking of the liberation of the Ukraine but are receiving from Berlin instructions how to serve that Ukraine. In this way, they are exactly in the service of Berlin as Communists are in the service of Moscow.

BLAST THESE SANDBAGS

TWO amusing stories of a Yorkshire policeman were told by John Hilton. "He is a stout policeman. "On a dark night last week he was standing on duty by the entrance to the town hall, standing quite still and minding his own business, when a sharp elbow caught him in the midriff and a woman's voice said, 'Blast these sandbags'. It was the same policeman who was sent out on the strength of a phone message that a delayed-action bomb had buried itself in a back garden. He came back with his report. 'Certainly not bomb. Suspect rabbit.'" — London Listener.

A Bit of Nonsense

Secret Wanted

A man reviving from an anaesthetic was being very sentimental. The wife nearby said to the nurse: "I have not heard him talk like that since our honeymoon; where do you buy the dope?"

Peace

A Sunday school teacher gathered her class together and asked, "Now, Florrie, what is your definition of the word 'Peace'"?

Florrie, a very small evacuee, answered. "Please, miss, when the lady who we is staying with gets the last of us washed, she marches us up for bed, and then says, 'Now for a bit of peace'."

A New One

Hospital Nurse: "You say financial difficulties brought you here?"

Patient: "Yes . I saw my tailor coming, crossed the road to avoid him and halfway across I saw another creditor on the other side. I did not know what to do, hesitated and went under a car."

That Man Again

A man who was obviously not a teetotaller entered a local English public-house the other night during a black-out. He began to behave rather badly, and the landlord refused to serve him.

He went out quietly.

After a little time he sneaked in the side-passage door. The landlord turned him out again.

About five minutes later he boldly walked in the front way. The exasperated landlord shouted at him to get out, or he would throw him out.

To which the fellow replied, "Look here, guv-nor, do you own all the pubs in this 'ere village?"

Please Tell

Magistrate: "Your wife says you have 'her terrorized."

Prisoner: "Honestly, sir—"

Magistrate: "I do not ask you this in my official capacity, but as man to man, do you understand?"

Prisoner: "Yes, your worship."

Magistrate: "What's your secret?"

Just So

The old shepherd's daughter was going to marry a town-dweller. Wishing to make her father look smart when he gave her away at the altar, she got him to agree to wear a hat. The shepherd went into a store:

Clerk—"What size, please?"

Shepherd—"I don't know."

Clerk—"We'll try a six and a half first."

Shepherd—"Six and a half be hanged. I wear a 16-collar, and I know my head is bigger than my neck."

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God: when shall I come and appear before God? My tears have been my meat day and night, while they continually say unto me, Where is thy God? When I remember these things, I pour out my soul in me: for I had gone with the multitude, I went with them to the house of God, with the voice of joy and praise, with a multitude that kept holyday....

Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy waterspouts: all thy waves and thy billows are gone over me. Yet the Lord will command his loving-kindness in the daytime, and in the night his song shall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life.—Ps. xlii.

WHAT PRICE GLORY?

IT'S a French hospital during the June drive on Paris. A young German, captured and wounded, lies close to death from loss of blood. A French nurse bends over and rouses him, telling him to get ready for a blood transfusion, his only chance for life.

"Whose blood am I being given?" he asks with effort.

"We had a hard time finding anyone," she answers, "but a French soldier has finally volunteered."

The young Nazi, weak to the point of death, raises himself in bed. His eyes speak the same message as his lips, "I am German, I will have nothing in my veins but German blood. Before I will taint my blood with any other, I will die!" He died.—Notre Dame Bulletin.

CANADA'S FUTURE

IF the conflict lasts Canada may be expected to gain in population, through transfers of skilled labor and refugees from Great Britain and post-war immigration. Her economic structure will be stronger because her dependence upon exports of farm products and raw materials will be lessened. Financially, continuing the trend of the past few years, she will be less dependent upon foreign capital investment. The development of the Canadian economy, now being accelerated by the war, is in fact similar to that of the United States between fifty and twenty-five years ago. — National City Bank of New York.

A Week Late

"You want more money to pay your dressmaker?" said her husband. "But I gave you £5 last week for her."

"Yes, dear," explained the wife, gently, "but it just happened that she did not send the bill."

Canadiens Sell Doug Young To Buffalo Club

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 28 (AP)—The Buffalo Club of the American Hockey League purchased Defenceman Doug Young Wednesday from Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, subject to National League waivers.

Lew Giffels, secretary of the Buffalo club, said there appears to be no doubt that Young will be waived out of the National League. Prior to joining the Canadiens last season, Young played several seasons with Detroit Red Wings.

Doug Young is a professional hockey protege of the late Teddy Oke. He turned pro with Oke's Kitchener Greenshirts back in 1928-29. When the Kitchener franchise and players were transferred to Cleveland by Oke and Harry (Hap) Holmes for the season of 1929-30, Young was one of the most promising chattels. He was an outstanding defense campaigner for the Cleveland club, which won the International league title that season. He was the league's most brilliant puck-carrying defenseman in 1930-31, scored sixteen goals and six assists and was drafted by the Detroit Red Wings for 1931-32.

Young remained with the Red Wings until the fall of 1939-40, when Manager Jack Adams decided to ship him to one of the Detroit organization's minor league farm clubs. Young protested the move, appealed to Owner James Norris

Lash Seeking 7th Triumph

DETROIT, Nov. 28 (AP) — Don Lash, the 26-year-old foot-racing marvel, turns the tables on himself again today.

As a vocation Lash spends his working hours pursuing criminals as a member of the Indiana State Police. Today, as an avocation, he plans to be chased by the country's top-ranking runners, in the national Amateur Athletic Union cross-country championship.

Lash has won the national A.A.U. harrier title six straight times, a record.

Barring a sudden and unexpected change in the weather, the field will complete under difficult conditions. Today workmen attempted to remove some of the snow from the course over the Meadowbrook Country Club. No sooner was their task completed than it started to snow again.

This will be the first A.A.U. cross-country over a golf course. The runners will run twice over a course 5,000 metres in length, covering approximately six and one-quarter miles.

Challenging Lash will be the two men who were closest to him at the finish last year, Gregory Rice, representing the South Bend Athletic Association, was second a year ago, while 29-year-old Joe McCluskey of Manchester, Conn., was third.

Seventy-four runners filed entries for the race, but because of the bad weather officials of the A.A.U. do not expect more than fifty to start.

Sr., and was given the outright release he asked for. He immediately signed with Montreal Canadiens.

He served with Detroit's Stanley Cup championship clubs of 1935-36 and 1936-37. He broke his ankle several weeks before the 1936-37 Stanley Cup playdowns and never fully recovered the rushing drive that had carried him to stardom. In his heyday he was regarded as one of the shiftiest puck-carriers in the majors. During his Detroit career he was captain of the Red Wings on two occasions.

'Possum Pie

KANSAS CITY, Nov 28—(AP).—Dinner walked in on Teddy Garner, a janitor, so he called police to ask if he could eat it. The officers found a large grey Opossum in Garner's quarters. They said sure he could eat it. So Garner had 'Possum pie.

First Blood For Amerks

O'Flaherty (12) of the New York Americans, skates out from behind the Montreal Canadiens' net after driving the puck past Goalie Gardiner for the first score of the game at Madison Square Gardens. H. Jackson (11) of the Amerks, and Young and Benoit, of the Canadiens, clutter up the ice in front of the net. The Amerks won, 2-1.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Out of a job, and asked to leave her boarding house because of the wide publicity she received as the result of an attempted prison break, Lona Ackerman is almost desperate because she cannot locate Jim Claridge, the only friend she has left. Just before Lona had sped to the penitentiary to see her dying father, serving a life term for murder, she and Jim had fallen in love. At the warden's house during her visit to the prison, two escaping convicts force her into the warden's car and make a safe getaway until Lona grabs the steering wheel and the car crashes. Only slightly hurt, she finds her father has died in the meantime. After taking his body home, she returns to the city. Finally Jim calls her and asks her to marry him. To escape further publicity, they decide to elope. Lona is recognized when they go for the marriage license and Jim slugs a photographer when he attempts to take their picture.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

IT WOULD BE an odd sort of wedding, Lona thought, as she sat beside Jim, and watched his strong hands on the wheel of the rented car he was driving. No music, no audience of hushed friends, no flowers. Just herself and Jim. She wondered, suddenly, if he had remembered the ring, and looked at his lean profile outlined against the failing twilight as he threaded his way through traffic out toward the open road. She wanted to ask him about it but, somehow, the words wouldn't come out. She was feeling shy and uneasy.

"Where are we going, Jim?" she asked, suddenly, as he brought the car to a stop at a busy corner. Her heart skipped a beat as he opened the door on his side, and she looked about her at the neighboring buildings. No church was visible, and she had a ridiculous feeling of reprieve.

"I'll be just a moment," Jim told her mischievously. "You're to wait."

He disappeared around the next corner and was back again almost before she realized he was gone. In his arms he carried—looking ludicrous against his dark suit and causing passersby to smile—an unwrapped bouquet of red roses. Tiny, fragrant buds of the sort Lona loved.

"For the bride!" he said, bowing gravely as he handed them to her.

"Oh, Jim!" She buried her face in the fragrant blossoms heedless of the thorns they might conceal. "How did you know I was wanting flowers?"

"Every bride must have flowers," he told her, grinning and pleased with himself, as he slipped back behind the wheel.

They rode silently after that, the fragrance of the flowers surrounding them with an aura of sweetness. Out in the open country, away from the bustle of the city, with its ever clanging traffic, the supper-time shadows were lengthening peacefully. It was good, riding along like this, Lona thought. Just she and Jim together, the breeze in their faces. She could have gone on and on.

It was before a rambling country parsonage, an hour's drive from the city, that Jim drew up finally, and stopped. With an air of finality he snapped off the throbbing engine and turned to her in the sudden, pregnant silence.

"We're here, girl," he said, softly, and something in his brown eyes made her catch her breath.

"Yes, we're—here," she heard herself repeating.

For a moment he pressed her hand silently. "Guess it's up to me to see if there's anybody home," he said, then, and heaved his long body from the car. "You wait."

He, too, was a little embarrassed as he went up the long, flower-bordered walk and onto the run-down porch, putting his feet down easy in an absurb effort to be quiet. In another minute he was coming back, grinning a little sheepishly.

"You're to come in," he told her, without meeting her eyes.

The roses in her arms seemed to double in fragrance as she walked beside him. Like going up a church aisle, it was, her steps measuring themselves with his, and a smiling white-haired man with a book in his hand holding open the screen door for them.

The preacher had called in his wife and a perspiring daughter from their kitchen work to be witnesses, and they greeted Lona with knowing looks, exclaiming over her flowers. The preacher cleared his throat as he leaved through his book, and then his voice came out deep and heavy, filling the silenced parlor.

"I do," Lona heard herself repeating fatefully. Her voice seemed to stick in her throat and she could only whisper. Jim, too, seemed to be having trouble getting the words out.

"With this ring . . ." the preacher was saying, and a sudden overwhelming fear gripped Lona. Had he forgotten? . . . He fumbled for an agonizing moment in his pocket, then, with a triumphant glance at her, produced a thumb-sized box. The gleaming circlet was set with tiny diamonds that sparkled as the minister held it up. On her finger it felt cold and hard and alien; she was conscious of it when the minister had pronounced his last solemn "Amen!" and Jim was bending over her, kissing her with shy lips.

"It's done, girl," he whispered to her in that brief instant before he surrendered her to the congratulations of the preacher and his womenfolk.

"Yes, it's done," she heard herself repeating a little stupidly, as if it were hard to believe.

Back outside, in the car, shyness seemed to possess them both. To hide it, Jim took refuge in the commonplace.

"Do you realize we've had no dinner?" he asked, starting the engine. "I'm hungry!"

"And so am I!" Lona echoed. Then, her eyes meeting his, they both laughed. "You've married a hungry woman, Jim," she told him. "It's going to keep you busy the rest of your life feeding me."

"I noticed an inn back down the road a ways when we came through. There's a sign says chicken. How about that for a wedding supper?" He was already turning the car in the minister's drive.

"It would be wonderful, Jim," Lona heard herself assuring him. Anything he wanted to do would be wonderful, she as thinking, in a sudden accession of tenderness and gratitude. Would it be like this always, she wondered, sitting beside him in the gathering dusk. To be taken care of like this, to have someone upon whom to lean, someone she could trust to make decisions. After what she had been through, it was almost too much to ask of life!

The inn, when they entered it, was a homey little place, its windows hung with crisp curtains, checked tablecloths on its tables. It made Lona think of the home she would like to have and of which she had, as yet, scarcely dared to think.

"It'll be fun, hunting a—a house," she brought out, shyly, her eyes meeting Jim's across the table as they waited for the farm girl waitress to serve them.

"A house!" He looked at her with longing in his brown eyes. "Do you mean you're really going to—to cook, and things like that? Keep house—"

"Why, of course I am, Jim! What did you think we were going to do?"

"I—I didn't know. I guess I thought—are you going to go house hunting right away?" He was like a small boy being promised a feast.

"Tomorrow," she promised, and then blushed, her eyes falling before the look that leaped into his. Tomorrow! She would be a different girl by then, she knew suddenly. Not a girl at all, but a woman. She swallowed back a lump that came to her throat and applied herself to the plate of chicken and biscuits the waitress set before her, without daring to look up.

Reading her thoughts, his hand came out across the table.

"It's been just a month since I found you, girl. Do you realize that?" His voice was tender.

"Just a month." She looked at him, then. "Oh, Jim, what if you hadn't! What if somebody else had come across me in the park that night? Someone who wasn't—like you?" She broke off, shivering.

"Don't, girl. Don't think of it!" The hand closed over hers firmly, warm and comforting. "I DID find you! And we're going to be together now and for a long time! As long as you want me."

As long as she wanted him! She kept thinking of that promise in the hours that followed. He was like a boy, she thought, as she lingered with him over the abundant meal and watched him light up a lazy cigaret in the lamp-lit dusk. A boy who wanted to be loved and wasn't quite sure he deserved it. As long as she wanted him, he had said. Not as long as he wanted her, as most men would have put it.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Toronto football commentators seems to think that Balmy Beach would have a better chance to win the Eastern Canadian honors from Ottawa Rough Riders if the issue had been confined to one game. They may be right at that but the Bammies have shown themselves a good road team and the two-game series should not bother them a great deal. They are likely to do about as well in Ottawa as at home because in either case they will be playing in strange surroundings if the expected crowds turn out for the playoffs. We like the Ponton machine for a number of reasons. In the first place it has team spirit to burn and that is a mighty handy thing to have around when tough games are in the offing. Secondly it is superior to Argos both in kicking and plunging so that in those departments the Bammies should not be outclassed by the powerful Ottawa Club. And finally especially in the backfield department it has plenty of reserve strength and will be able to keep a fast moving brigade of backs out there at all times.

* * * * * *

Of course the weather and field conditions may play a very important part in deciding the championship. The outlook at present is rather hazy. The ground will be scraped of its covering of snow but whether the playing surface will be frozen and slippery or else a sea of mud depends on what kind of weather turns up in the meantime. A muddy field would help the Riders who would merely have to play close-to-the-vest football and depend upon their tanks and Sammy Sward's kicking. Incidentally the same Sammy, according to Toronto reports, is likely to be somewhat on the spot Saturday. Beach players blame him for walking out on them and they will be gunning for the useful Mister Sward from the first kickoff. At that they will have quite a job because the former Beacher has been unreeling a lot of superfine football this season and he will try to turn it on full in his old home town and against his old club. They always do it.

* * * * * *

A lot of the outcry against the C.R.U. officials ignores the basic feature of the whole controversy. It was not the union but the Western conference that put their championship team out of running for the Dominion title. With the West taking the stand it did an East-West series for the Canadian championship was out of the question. But the C.R.U., could have, we believe, made an unofficial playoff possible without sacrificing anything. In view of the fan demand for a meeting between East and West and of the certainty that a large amount of money would have been raised for patriotic purposes the football moguls might have said something like this: "An official playoff for the Dominion title is out but if the Eastern winners want to play the Blue Bombers in a game to raise funds for war purposes we haven't the slightest objection." That would have cleared the way.

The Snow Brings Ski News

The staff of the Telemarker, the official organ of the Peterborough Ski Club has a very delicate sense of timing for the first issue this season arrived yesterday simultaneously with the first real snow storm of the winter. The big bit of news in the current issue is the Ski Club's war savings stamp campaign. It is simply this, that for every member signed up by the club this winter the club will buy a war stamp from the student body of the Peterborough Collegiate. The certificates that will be acquired through this plan will be used to start a sinking fund for the club's chalet at Bethany. The more members to join the Ski Club, the more war stamps will be purchased, an incentive to officers and members to work their heads off securing more members for the organization. There were 235 last year and it is felt this number can easily be passed.

* * * * * *

Incidentally the "old faithfuls" of the organization have not been idle between seasons, we gather from the Telemarker. The Bethany chalet has been treated to a generous application of paint, both inside and out and presents a very smart appearance. Some of the hard workers in the club have been spending their week-ends and other spare time to good advantage, with their axes and jackknives and as a result new trails and more turning space are available. The tow owners, too, have not been idle. They have done considerable grading and clearing and as a consequence skiing will be better at Bethany than ever before. There will be supervision this winter and only members will be entitled to the facilities that have been provided; another potent reason why every skier and would-be skier should line up with the club.

* * * * * *

Peterborough lads with a Popeye complex will not have to depend upon spinach to meet their needs. The weight-lifting class that is being reorganized at the Y.M.C.A. will give them all the training and practice they need in this interesting and muscle-building type of exercise. The class was started last year and a number of youngsters took advantage of the training with marked improvement to their physique as the result of the winter's training. Stan McBride and Cliff McInroy are in charge of the class and they will welcome all boys who are interested in weight-lifting and strong man stuff. It is a specialty in which training is not always available so that the opportunity offered by the class will probably commend itself to a lot of youngsters.

Leafs Have Nice Lead

There is plenty of hockey in the N.H.L. for the next four nights but nothing seriously threatens the position of the Maple Leafs at the top of the heap. Hap Day's men have opened out a nice lead and with a game with the Amerks in Toronto Saturday night coming up should hold their own or widen their margin. Tonight the Rangers who have dropped their last two games clash with their fellow townsmen the Americans and have an opportunity to make up some lost ground, although the Dutton clan are keeping punching and have been no pushovers in recent battles. Tomorrow night the second place Detroit Red Wings and the third-slot Chicago Black Hawks meet in Detroit. That looks like the old problem of the irresistible force meeting the immovable object because the Wings are always tough to beat at home and the Hawks have been setting a mad pace on the road.

* * * * * *

As intimated in this column in Wednesday's issue Ned Vitarelli and Don Coughlin have been going nicely with the Baltimore Orioles. There was further evidence of that so far as Vitarelli is concerned, for the little right winger came up with a sparkling exhibition against Washington Eagles, scoring two of the Baltimore goals in a 5 to 4 victory that gave the Orioles undisputed possession of second place in the Eastern Hockey League. This was the second occasion within a few days in which Ned has potted the old disc a couple of times. He is on a new line this season with Chick Webster and Bud Wychnenka, the latter a Winnipeg boy who also helped himself to a pair of useful goals last night. The Vitarelli-Wychnenka-Webster line is the ace forward division for Pick Hines' club.

DUKES AND OSHAWA WIN WHILE SAINTS IN TIE WITH THE FALLS

Edmison Paces G-Men Squad In 5-0 Victory

TORONTO, Nov. 28 — (CP). — If Ebbie Edmison of Oshawa isn't on the negotiation list of some National Hockey League club, he should be. True, he's small, but look at little Johnny O'Flaherty who played last season with Toronto Seniors of the Ontario Association.

Johnny, so the story goes, was overlooked because of his slim frame. Hockey experts figured he wouldn't last in the money circuit, although no one ever doubted his fighting qualities. So—New York Americans took a chance, grabbed Johnny this fall, and now he's right up with the leading N.H.L. scorers. He leads all freshmen players with four goals.

Edmison, who formerly performed with Brantford Seniors, looks like a second O'Flaherty. Last night he scored twice as Oshawa whipped the London Streamliners 5-0 to add to five points he picked up in his last game on Monday. Now he's leading the circuit in scoring with 13 points, made up of four goals and nine assists.

In other senior tilts last night, the Niagara district teams, Niagara Falls Brights and St. Catharines Saints battled to a 2-2 overtime draw, and Toronto Marlboros grabbed their first home victory of the season, edging Port Colborne sailors 4-2.

London's 7th Loss.

At London, other Oshawa scorers were Doug Maundrell, Johnny Thompson and Hal Cooper. It was the seventh successive loss for the streamliners, despite the addition of Aparky Weiler, a Woodstock product, and Boots Gothenn, a London intermediate.

At Niagara Falls, it was the fourth draw this season for the Brights, who scored both their goals in the first period on sorties by Blink Bellinger, who tried out with Toronto Maple Leafs this fall, and Mickey McQuade. Cooper and Bobby Walton drew assists on the first goal, and Art Stuart on the second.

Tom Forgie and Roy Heximer were the Waints' marksmen, Heximer scoring the tying goal late in the final period.

Marlboroughs took sole possession of second place with their decision over the Tars on the big surface of Maple Leaf Gardens. Toronto led 2-1 at the end of the initial session and punched home two more in the final frame before the Sailors notched their second.

Big Jimmy Drummond, smiling Eddie King, Edmonton's Opl. Eddie Shamlock of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and Scotty Mair were the Duke's scorers. Umbo Concessix and Young tallied for the canal town team. The Ports claimed a goal in the second period after the goal judge flashed his light but were overruled by Referee Army Armstrong.

Colville Just Misses Scoring Point That Would Have Tied The Game

M. Colville of the New York Rangers is blocked away from the Bruin net by Goalie Brimsek and Hill (11) of the Bruins during the Rangers-Bruins struggle at Madison Square Gardens. The puck can be seen bounding just past the goal. It was close, but not close enough. On the RIGHT are Clapper (5) and Shewchuk (12) of the Bruins and N. Colville of the Rangers. Bruins took the game 2-1.

Amerk Victory Means Hop Into 4th Place

TORONTO, Nov. 28 — (CP). — Marvyn (Red) Dutton's New York Americans, who have been pouncing in and out of the National Hockey League cellar, get a chance to climb from the last position tonight, when their play their second game of the season with their city rivals, the Rangers.

In fact, the last five clubs are so closely bunched in the standing that a victory for Americans would shoot them up into a fourth place tie with Boston Bruins at seven points apiece. By the same token the Rangers can assume a third place tie with Detroit Red Wings if they defeat the Dutton men.

Tonight's contest between the two New York clubs is the only one up for decision, although Red Wings play host to Chicago Black Hawks on Friday night and five games are scheduled for the week-end. Rangers won 3-2 in their first clash with Americans on November 19.

Dutton has one of the best men of this season's rookie crop on display in Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty, former Toronto Goodyears' star. O'Flaherty leads all freshmen players in scoring at present with four goals, being only one behind the best mark in this respect. Five players, Tony Demers of Canadiens, George Allen of Chicago, Roy Conacher of Boston, and Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon of Toronto, have five goals apiece.

O'Flaherty, in fact, has accounted for more than one-third of the Americans' goal total for the season. In eight games, in which Americans have won two, lost five and tied one, the club has managed to score only 11 goals.

Barons Wallop Ramblers 3-2; Hornets Win 6-4

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28—(CP). —The way things are shaping up it looks as if Cleveland Barons will finish up on top of the American Hockey League's western section in a breeze.

The Barons have played 10 games so far, winning eight of them, and now have a five-point lead over the Pittsburg Hornets, who have played 12 games. Hershey Bears come next with 10 points, while Indianapolis Capitals and Buffalo Bisons trail far behind.

Barons' eighth victory came last night as they won 3-2 over Philadelphia Ramblers. In other games the Hornets won 6-4 over Hershey, while Buffalo defeated Providence Reds 3-1.

The winning goal for the Barons was scored by Don Deacon, while other Cleveland scores went to Norm Locking and Earl Bartholome. The two Rambler goals were scored by Lude Wareing and Johnny Polich.

Johnny Sherf and Defenceman Mickey Blade each scored twice for Pittsburg, with the others going to Lloyd Roubell and Eddie Convey. Hershey goals were scored by Bobby Kirk, Lauzon, and Joe Krol, who got two. Shannon, Mercer and Klein scored for Buffalo, while the lone Providence goal was scored by Jack Shill.

Kaufmann Pilots Rochester Wings

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Charles Anthony (Tony) Kaufmann will manage the Rochester International League Baseball Club in 1941, President Oliver French of the Red Wings announced today.

Kaufmann was brought up from Decatur by the St. Louis Cardinal organization late last June, after Billy Southworth had been advanced to the managership of the Birds, and his successor, Estel Crabtree, was forced out of the reins by illness. He brought the Wings their first league pennant since 1931.

"I am happy to have Tony Kaufmann back as manager here," French said. "He did an excellent job under difficult conditions, and certainly deserved reappointment."

Betting Moguls Slip On Conn, Juggle Odds

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—(AP)—The charitable gentlemen who make the betting prices on fights ordinarily are about as dumb as a woods full of foxes and a room full of Einsteins—mixed together.

Yet once in a while they seem to think it's Christmas, even though the calendar doesn't agree, and come up with a set of odds that are about as reasonable as baking a cake with talcum powder for flour.

That's why there was a wild rush around the 49th Street betting district today as those charitable gentlemen came from behind their white whiskers and realized they were all out on limb in establishing Bill Conn, the Pittsburg pretty boy, favorite at odds of 1 to 3 that he can dissolve Lee Savold in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

Now Billy Boy should, by all indications, whip the Corn Country clouter in their 12-round fuss, particularly since Savold, at best, boasts only a striped record. But Lee has proved he can hit, and the betting commissioners have discovered long before now that a fighter who carried the old equalizer in his fists isn't a 3-1 shortender against anybody.

So the betting boys started the hedging process today. All along Jacobs Beach there was a quick-change job going on. Instead of inviting all bets, the fraternity suddenly realized it was loaded with Conn money. Of course the boys couldn't come right out and tell their customers they wouldn't accept any more bets on Billy. So they did the next best thing; they made you lay $6 to $1 if you liked Conn. At the same time they turned right around and continued to invite all the Savold money they could find.

Windsor Youth Shot In Chase

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 28— (CP). —Roland Croson, 19, died early today in hospital here a few minutes after he was shot by a policeman whose gun went off when the policeman slipped on the ice while in pursuit of Croson.

Police received a complaint last night that a prowler was alarming residents. Constables T. Renaud and G. Fitzgerald were despatched in a scout car. Police reports said that as they alighted from the car, a man began to run away.

When police arirved, Fitzgerald fired a warning shot in the air and when Croson did not stop, chased him over fences and down alleys. Both men slipped on the icy ground and fell several times.

Croson was shot in the region of the heart, hospital authorities said.

Police officials are conducting an inquiry.

MARTIN GAHAGAN MICHAEL GAHAGAN PATRICK GAHAGAN

The late Martin Gahagan, who was janitor in the C.G.E. office building, served in World War 1, and today three of his sons have donned the uniform to follow in their Dad's footsteps. Martin Gahagan, Jr., and Patrick Gahagan are with the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders at Lansdowne Park in Ottawa. The other brother, Michael, is with the Hastings, Prince Edward unit and was to have sailed but was confined to hospital with a severe illness. He is completely recovered now.

London Leaves Gave The Officers Thrilling Job

LONDON, Nov. 28 — (CP). — Boreg with inactivity, a group of Army and Navy officers formed their own air raid rescue squad, went out during the nightly raids and brought to safety many men and women trapped in the basements or shelters. In one case, they led a party which saved three women from a pub basement.

Two of the squad were in the Royal Engineers and another was a submarine lieutenant home on leave. One was from South Africa, another in the Royal Naval Reserve and the company included a couple of Americans who came here with the Canadian Active Service Force. They 'wangled" a truck and rescue tackle and got to work.

"We started this business partly because life is so dull for us people on leave here and partly for a more serious reason," an engineer officer said. "Our serious reason was that we felt the existing rescue service could usefully be supplemented by other technical knowledge and equipment.

"We wanted to show that if more army equipment were made available there were plenty of people willing and able to use it for rescue work in their own time. I could guarantee any night to get between 600 and 700 men to work in rescue parties.

"We have been helped by Dominion soldiers. There are hundreds of Canadian, Australian and New Zealand men just aching for a chance to do something."

Their work one night enabled a street to be opened. Bombs had hit a church, burying the verger and his wife in the ruins. They worked four hours removing debris. The party saved the wife, but found the verger dead.

One of the volunteer squad was shell-shocked in France and when given leave was told to avoid London because the excitement might be bad. He's wondering what the doctors would say if they knew how he had spent several nights.

It Was a Bullet

HAZELTON, Pa. Nov. 28—(AP).—Andrew Kupinewicz felt something strike his head while working in the yard three months ago, and told friends his young daughter playfully had tossed a rock. Recurrent severe headaches and insommia finally forced him to the doctor. A small calibre rifle bullet was removed from his scalp.

TAKE THE "LEAD" FEELING OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery — you tire quickly — feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today at your druggist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep. Copr. 1935, G. T. Pattett Co., Ltd.

Eskimos Wonder At The Nations' Anger And War

MONTREAL, Nov. 28 — (CP). — Father Stephen Bazin had a hard time explaining the war to his Eskimos far up in the arctic on Melville peninsula because they couldn't imagine people becoming angry enough to fight.

The 37-year-old oblate missionary who was 11 years in the far north without visiting civilization said he finally told his flock at Igloolik that the war came about "because one people tried to steal another's property."

"I told them that one people—Germany—tried to steal Poland," said Father Bazin. "I told them that the 'Big Boss'—England— and France tried to stop the theft and had to fight Germany.

"The Eskimos, who I believe are the most peace-loving and the happiest people in the world, know now that there is a war going on though they think still that it's strange. By nature they are very calm and patient. Anger is a grave crime with them."

During the long arctic winter, the temperature hangs around 50 below zero at Igloolik and blizzards last as long as a month, but Father Bazin said he'll be glad to get back.

He first went north as a missionary in 1929 and when he reached The Pas, Manitoba, last week it was his first trip out.

Father Bazin remarked on the changes that have come about during the years he had been away from civilization.

"Traffic moves terribly fast now. When I was in Winnipeg last week I walked about but was afraid to cross the street the automobiles moved so fast.

"Their shapes have changed since I last saw them. Clothes have been altered too."

The Priest who is broad and wears a thick black beard said he is not "greatly attracted to civilization—I hope to be able to start back to the Arctic by next July."

Out for Rest.

He explained that he came to Montreal for a rest and for treatment for stomach trouble—"perhaps caused by eating meat three times a day for so long."

"I must see a dentist, too, and an oculist—then I'm going back."

His mission at Igloolik, 1,000 miles north of Churchill, serves about 350 Eskimos spread over an area of almost 400 miles.

Father Bazin smiled as he described the Eskimos as a people who are "naturally democratic."

"They don't know anything about politics, but their very simple form of government can be called democratic. Its essence is the liberty of the Eskimos, their love of freedom.

"The leaders ar chosen for their ability usually as huntsmen or fishermen. At Igloolik, the leader is an old Eskimo who had great prowess as a huntsman. His son probably will succeed him because he is a very able huntsman, too.

"There is no question of the leader imposing his will, however. In council the men decide whether they should hunt or fish, where they should go, and what game they should seek.

"Everything is marked by happiness. They spent hours laughing and talking. They really have no worries. There is no such thing as a sad Eskimo."

Cadi Snowbound

PICTON, Ont., Nov. 28—(CP).—Snow-filled roads prevented Magistrate J. B. Garvin of Kingston reaching Picton where he was scheduled to preside to-day. As a result of the blizzard during the night many rural roads in Prince Edward County are blocked and going is heavy on others. Huge drifts were reported in many sections with a blanket of two feet in town.

Expect Chicago Stock Show To Break Record

CHICAGO Nov. 28—(AP).—Entry statistics proved today that the 41st International Livestock Exposition Nov. 30 to Dec. 7 would continue the big farm show's virtually annual custom of breaking its own records.

Manager B. H. Heide said the Exposition would have its broadest geographical spread this year, entries for the stock show and the grand grain and hay show combined having come from 36 States and five Canadian provinces, Alberta, British Columbia, Ontario, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

The war had a reverse effect on Canadian participation, he said. Instead of fewer Canadian entries and exhibitors there will be at least as many and perhaps more than usual. There were no important Canadian shows this year because of the war, so Dominion stockmen and grain growers apparently were determined to show in at least one big Agricultural Exposition, the International.

The biggest single judging assignment went to Canada, too, this year when J. Charles Yule of Carstairs, Alta., was selected to judge steers, finishing only when he awards the purple ribbon for the grand champion steer, considered the choicest award of the show.

Room Gets Scarce

A week ahead of the opening, Exposition officials encountered trouble finding room in the huge amphitheatre for all the animals entered. Heide said there would be at least 13,000 cattle, horses, sheep and swine even though two breeds of cattle, milking shorthorns and red polled, were eliminated this year. In 1939 there were 13,332 head.

Accent on youth is more than an idle phrase at the International, what with the junior feeding and judging contests and the 19th 4-H club congress which brings representatives of 1,300,000 boys and girls from most of the States.

Exposition exhibitors will take away $100,000 in prizes and realize about $1,000,000 from sales of animals. The public will see, besides the animal blue bloods and prize crops, 12 horse shows, sheep herding exhibitions, a National championship sheering contest and displays of how to buy, cook, carve and serve all manner of meat.

50 Million To Go On New U.S. Bases

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—(AP).—Navy Secretary Frank Knox announced today that President Roosevelt had allotted $50,000,000 for immediate development of a chain of air and naval bases on sites recently acquired from Great Britain in exchange for 50 United States destroyers.

At the same time Knox notified an additional class of naval and marine reserves, numbering 31,098 officers and men, that they should arrange their affairs so as to be ready for call to active duty at any moment.

Knox also announced that additional divisions of organized naval reserves were being called to active duty from New York and New Jersey for service with destroyers operating in the vicinity of the Panama Canal.

HAVELOCK

East Peterboro Teachers Hold Session

HAVELOCK, Nov. 28 (ENS)—On Tuesday afternoon Havelock Public School was the centre chosen for a group meeting of the Urban Teachers of East Peterborough. Teachers were present from Lakefield public school, two urban schools in Monaghan, namely, Mays and Confederation public schools, Norwood and Havelock schools and Inspector Copp was also present.

During the afternoon a general meeting was held for business, after which the teachers were divided into three groups, according to their respective classes.

At five o'clock thirty teachers sat down to a dainty lunch served by the Havelock staff. The color scheme of the tables was carried out in green and gold. Miss Roberts poured tea. Assisting in serving were the other teachers, Misses Watson, Wing and McNeeley.

This was the first teachers rally to have been held in Havelock.

Honor Betty Davis

Sixteen pupils from public school, junior and senior fourth classes, met at the home of Mrs. Davis on Friday evening last and tendered a little farewell party to Betty Davis, who leaves this week with her parents, to reside in Toronto.

During the evening a presentation of two lovely pictures and an autograph book was made to Betty, accompanied by a little note of regret at her departure from Havelock, and signed by all 16 girls.

On the same afternoon the Junior W.A. of St. John's Anglican church at their regular weekly meeting presented Betty with a large box of writing paper, and their best wishes for future happinss.

Herbie Davis was remembered when his school friends prior to his departure from town on Tuesday evening tendered him a surprise party, and presenting him with a shirt, tie and socks, accompanied by an address.

Harry Keswick and His Proud Owner

"Harry Keswick," twenty-nine years old next spring. In possession of his present owner, Richard Matchett, life-long resident of Cavan township, since he was purchased in his sixth year, from Archie Reynolds, of North Monaghan. Recently driven to Millbrook from the home farm, Eighth Line, Cavan, where he is spending his time, with occasional use both for driving and riding.

Horse 29 Years Old Is Still Able To Carry Master On His Back

MILLBROOK, Nov. 28.—(ENS)—Reading with interest the story of "Maude Keswick," and her two colts being trained on the Pife farm in Otonabee, which appeared in a recent issue of the Examiner, Richard Matchett, a well-known Cavan farmer has been led to mention his horse, "Harry Keswick," twenty-nine years old next spring.

Bought when in his sixth year, from Archie Reynolds, of North Monaghan, and continuously in the present owner's possession ever since, "Harry Keswick," whose grandsire was also "Keswick," has the somewhat unique record of having been driven by the proud owner, his uncle, and his daughter, and ridden by his granddaughter—four generations in the one family.

Carries Head High

Of a standard breed, this horse still retains the natural characteristic of his kind, namely, carrying head and tail erect, and Mr. Matchett has never felt it necessary to use a check rein on him. Chestnut in color, the hall mark of the large majority of this breed, trotting and pacing are both natural gaits of Harry Keswick. Driven with a loose rein, as the owner's wife is accustomed to use, he will trot all the time, but if the masculine side of the house takes the lines, and draws them tight, he paces from that to the end of the journey. In his younger years, very rarely could any other horse pass him on the road.

Mr Matchett, who is Cavan born and bred and has lived all his life in this historic township, was for several years a successful exhibitor of horses, and "Harry" is the seventh he has had of this breed, and the only one he has kept after it got into its 'teen years; the others were sold without difficulty, and at good prices, before reaching the age mentioned.

The Keswick of this article, who has now reached such a goodly age, is still on the home farm, and when the owner, who is now retired and living at Millbrook, goes back to his former home, he follows the established custom of riding him for the cattle, morning and evening, finding the horse ready and eager for this exercise.

"Harry" needs some "babying" now, and this apparently only his "boss" knows how to give, and surely, after the years of notable service which he has rendered, a good home, with plenty of feed and care, are assured this fine animal.

Home Near Docks Family Of 4 Dies In Bombing

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 28—(CP)—Mrs. Harry Stewart has learned that her sister and her entire family were killed in their beds during a raid over Gourock, Scotland.

The family were Mrs. John Barbour, her husband, and two boys, Jack 13, and Nicol 10. Gourock is in Renfrewshire near the busy River Clyde industrial area of Glasgow and Greenock. A military objective, half a mile from the tenement house is believed to have been the target of the bombers.

Mrs. Stewart first learned the news through a letter from her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hughes, residing not far distant from the raid. The letter was written Nov. 6. It said that the body of Mrs. Barbour was not found for 9 days.

The youngest boy, Nicol Barbour, was discovered still in bed but trapped in the wreckage. He called to his rescuers, firemen and members of the demolition squad to hurry up and also shouted that his big brother was beside him.

Nicol was taken out apparently unhurt but suffering from shock. It was not until half an hour later that the elder brother Jack was extricated. He was in a serious condition when lowered to the street on a stretcher and died before reaching a first aid post. The younger lad succumbed later in hospital from the effect of a shattered spine.

Freighter Aground

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Nov. 28—The freighter Cheyenne, aground off the west side of Rocky Mohawk Point between Gull Island and the Lake Erie mainland, is taking no water and is in no danger, E. C. Marsh, Port Colborne representative of the St. Lawrence Steamships Ltd., reported after visiting the scene today.

Marsh said a lighter from Buffalo would reach the stranded 250-foot freighter some time this afternoon. The vessel went hard aground in 12 feet of water off the Point, 20 miles west of Port Colborne, about nine o'clock last night at the height of a snow storm that swept Lake Erie and Lake Ontario.

Obituary

MRS. HANNAH SMITH.

BETHANY, Nov. 28—(ENS).—The passing of the late Hannah Fell, relict of John Smith, removed the oldest and one of the most highly esteemed life-long residents of this township last Thursday.

The late Mrs. Smith attained her 97th birthday on Sunday, October 20. For fourteen months past she had not been well, being nursed and cared for by her three daughters at the family home: Mrs. Elizabeth Reynolds, Mrs. John Ward and Miss Flo Smith.

Mrs. Smith was a life-long member of St. Paul's Anglican Church and a faithful worker in the W.A., and later years devoted her time to making comfortable mittens for the young children.

Mrs. Smith was born in Whitby, England, and came to Canada with her parents when only six years old, ninety-one years ago.

Nine children were born to her, of whom there survives: John, Henry, William and Robert, and three daughters: Mrs. Elizabeth Reynolds, Mrs. John Ward and Miss Flo Smith at home. One son, George, and one daughter, Mrs. Jewison, predeceased, also her husband.

Interment was made in the family plot in the Graham Cemetery a mile west of the village, on Saturday afternoon.

Six grandsons were pallbearers, which was very largely attended, attesting the high esteem in which she was held.

Rev. Mr. Mason, rector of St. Paul's Anglican Church, officiated at the home and graveside.

JOHN GARNET NORTHEY

John Garnet Northey, beloved husband of Ivy Leslie McIlmoyle, died suddenly at his home on Tuesday. He was in his forty-second year.

Born in Smith township he was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John James Northey, also of Smith. Here he lived all his life as a highly respected farmer.

His death came as a great shock to his many friends and neighbors.

Surviving are his widow, the former Ivy Leslie McIlmoyle, two daughters, Elva and Winnifred; one son, Gael, all at home; his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John James Northey; two brothers, Wellington R. and Warren L., all of Smith township.

The funeral was held on Thursday from his home, Lot 26, Concession 12, with Rev. Kirk and Rev. Belch officiating.

Pallbearers were six cousins, Stanley, Graydon, Elmer, Sherman and Kenneth Northey and Elmer Crapp.

Interment was in Lakefield cemetery.

MRS. JAMES ARMSTRONG

CAVAN, Nov. 28—(ENS). — The funeral of the late Mrs. James Armstrong took place from the family residence, Cavanville, on Sunday afternoon. The Rev. W. E. Honey, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Gibson pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, Millbrook, conducted the service at the home.

Interment was in the Presbyterian Cemetery, Millbrook, with the Rev. Raeburn-Gibson conducting the service at the grave.

The funeral was widely attended. Pall-bearers were Austin and Morris Williamson, John and Joseph Thompson. Delbert Armstrong and Charlie Gardiner. The many beautiful floral tributes, tokens of love and esteem, were carried by Rex and Frazer Carr, Clarke Armstrong, John Tinney, and Merle Carr.

Mrs. Armstrong who had been in ill health over a long period, passed away on Friday. She is survived by her sorrowing husband; two sons, Robert of Fairmount, Alvin of Peterborough, and one daughter, Mrs. Milton Carr (Margaret) of Cavanville.

JAMES B. MOORE.

HASTINGS, Nov. 28.—(ENS).—The township of Asphodel lost one of its most outstanding residents, in the death of James B. Moore, who passed away at his son's residence on Sunday afternoon, in his 82nd year, after an extended period of ill health.

The late Mr. Moore was born in Otonabee on the old Shearer homestead and was the only child of the late Anne Shearer and James Moore, early settlers in the community.

When an infant, his parents moved to Asphodel, to the farm now owned by Bert Buck. From here deceased first attended school in Hastings, then held in the basement of the Methodist church, and later in the present school building. After completing his studies in the local school he attended Albert College in Belleville. Fond of music, he was for some years an active member of the choir of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, with which he had a lifelong connection, being faithful in support and attendance as long as strength permitted.

Fifty-two years ago he married Anne Payne, who predeceased him seven years ago. Following their marriage they resided on the farm now owned by their son, and where his death occurred.

To their union were born two children, William B. of Asphodel and Eva, Mrs. D. A. MacKinnon of Flesherton, both of whom survive. He also leaves to mourn his passing eight grandchildren. One grandson, James Moore, is now in military training in Peterborough.

The funeral on Tuesday afternoon was largely attended by friends from Norwood, Dummer, Otonabee, Warsaw and the surrounding district. Rev. D. K. Perrie of St. Andrew's church, conducted the service.

Pallbearers were Messrs. D. Walsh, R. Walsh, L. Elmhirst, H. Edwards, Dr. J. H. Hess and W. M. Fowlds.

Interment was made in the Trent Valley cemetery.

Bacon Industry Big Factor In Grain Mart

TORONTO, Nov. 28—(CP)—Kenneth Morrison of Barrie said in an address at the convention of the Dominion Federation of Agriculture here Monday that Canada's hog industry "has grown to the position where it holds a place of importance in the marketing of our grains."

He added: "It is expected that within the next year we will market something better than 6,000,000 hogs and this will provide a market for 150,000,000 bushels of oats and barley, or the equivalent in wheat."

Since the outbreak of war Canada has sold 425,000,000 pounds of bacon to Great Britain, he said, this figure being far ahead of the previous record year of 192,000,000 pounds.

Cattle slaughtered in Canada for home consumption this year advanced 12,500 over the figures for 1939, although calf slaughtering was about the same. He noted that the export of cattle during the first nine months of 1940 was 84,000 head less than the same period last year.

Roof Off Hospital

One bomb tore off the roof of a hospital wing, killing some patients and a nurse in London, while at another point in the capital six bombs started a fire which could be seen for miles.

Raiders appeared over the south-west town at intervals of 10 minutes, scattering incendiary bombs, followed by high explosives.

An unofficial report from there said many raiders were driven seaward by a "terrific anti-aircraft barrage" before they could empty their bomb racks.

The Government communique, said the south-west town was under intermittent attack from dusk last night until 2.30 a.m., but "at no time were the raids on a heavy scale."

London's first alarm to-day sounded at 6.30 a.m. (1.30 a.m. E DT) and ended about an hour and a half later.

The Press Association said police and Home Guards were scouring the countryside in the vicinity of South Godstone, Surrey, for the crew of a Junkers 88 bomber brought down in the early morning hours.

Crew members were seen to bail out of the plane when it was crippled.

The people of Canada accepted the last budget, heaviest in Canada's history, with good grace and they were prepared for even heavier taxes in the next budget. They would accept these taxes also with good grace and always would, as long as there was no evidence of profiteering, patronage or lack of business ability in the administration.

The present government was in such relationship with the provincial governments regardless of the reports of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations, that it should be in a position to persuade the provinces to cut down, he said.

Debate Goes Slowly

Mr. Ealing was one of three speakers yesterday in the midweek half-day sitting as the throne speech debate moved along slowly. Because of that sluggishness, party whips now hesitate to predict that the debate will conclude before early next week. The House is expected to adjourn until Feb. 17 when the debate ends. Labor Minister McLarty continues the debate today.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House the main estimates for 1941-42 would be tabled as soon as the House reconvenes in February.

Two Ontario farmers held the floor the rest of the day discussing agricultural problems. L. E. Cardiff (Con. Huron North) said in his maiden speech that the farmers never have had a fair deal from any government, least of all from the present one.

The reason, he said, was campaign funds. Such funds were "much more conveniently collected in thousands of dollars than in smaller amounts," with the result that the big interests expected special assistance—"and get it."

Rural people realized that the present crisis called for more sacrifice and effort.

"It is still too obvious that the Allied governments undertook to fight this war as an economic war and with money, while the enemy used guns and ammunition," he said. "Tanks not sterling; machine guns, not foreign exchange; sabotage, not dollars, is his method.

"Surely we are living in a land of make-believe and sleight-of-hand speeches from some Government members when they pretend to assume in this dark hour that trade will move through normal channels."

Farmers, he said, had divorced themselves from the profit motive and were actuated by a determined desire to serve in the front ranks of production. However, they had to have enough to defray expenses and cover their overhead.

Bruce McNevin (L. Victoria, Ont.) said that while the bacon price under the new agreement with the United Kingdom gave the producer small chance of profit, the matter was settled as far as he was concerned if the agreed price was the top price Britain could pay.

The price probably would work out to an average of about eight cents a pound, liveweight, whereas it was 8.75 most of this year, and at the moment was 8.10.

While anxious to protect and preserve Canada's democratic institutions, he favored curtailment or freedom of the press if those steps were necessary to prevent undermining of the morale of the people and interference with successful prosecution of the war.

GOING TO HALIFAX

It was reported today that Lt. J. C. Green, dentist who has been conducting a Royal Canadian Dental Corps clinic at the local Armouries for the past three months has been ordered to Halifax to take over a new military clinic post. He leaves this week.

SUDDEN ILLNESS

Appendicitis overtook Gerald O'Toole of the United Cigar Store last night about one o'clock, and will likely keep him off main street until after the Christmas holidays. He went home in apparently good health yesterday evening, but was on the operating table soon after midnight.

NO INQUEST ORDERED.

There will be no inquest into the death of Mrs. Margaret McKinlay, Otonabee township, who was killed instantly on Highway 7 when struck by a car Wednesday morning. This is in line with the new policy under which there is no inquest in cases where a charge has been laid.

THE VACANT CHAIR

The parks committee of the council will meet without its chairman tonight, and one of the items of its business will be to appoint some person to undertake the setting up of public skating rinks and their supervision to which the late Alderman Stocker gave a great deal of attention.

BANQUET TONIGHT

Every past president of the Kinsmen Club except one has promised to attend the annual Past president's Night to be held in the Empress Hotel this evening. Lt. Don Scott of the Glengarry Highlander is expected along with Paul Johnston former manager of the Bell Telephone Company here.

EXTRA BUMPER

A few days ago Bob Juby thought he was being deceived by his eyes, for each time he pulled up behind a car in his, he would feel an impact, and though he could see that he wasn't close enough to hit the car in front of him, the fact remained that he had. Upon arriving home, after bunting cars all down the street, he discovered a fish container from Anthony's market had become hooked onto his front bumper, and since it was below his line of vision, he couldn't see it.

REBUILD A PIER.

More expense at the Wallace Point bridge. It seems there is a pier that needs rebuilding, and the cost will come out of various pockets, the Federal Department of Transport, the Ontario Department of Highways, the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, and the County of Peterborough. They have all left it to Peterboro to get the work started and done, and the other day it was decided at the county council meeting to advertise for tenders.

NAMED BY COMMITTEE.

Appointment of John Londerville as caretaker of the city hall was recommended for confirmation by the property committee Wednesday night at a salary of $1,250. He was engaged for this work temporarily after the death of George Grange, and he was chosen by the committee with eight other applicants seeking the job. The salary is the same as that which Mr. Grange was paid, and it was understood that Mr. Londerville would assume complete charge of the janitor services in the city buildings at Simcoe and Water streets.

BANK CLEARINGS

Bank clearings in Peterborough for the past week amounted to $566,946 while for the same week one year ago the total was $541,518.

ANSWERING THE CALL

It does not take the young skiers and sleigh-riders long to mobilize once Old Man Winter has sounded a few frosty notes. The slopes of Victoria Park were crowded with youthful coasters and skiers Wednesday night. Young Peterborough was sampling the winter and evidently enjoying it.

A WEEK'S REMAND

When a charge against Harry Carter of illegally selling liquor was called in police court this morning Crown Attorney McElderry, K.C., informed the court that accused's counsel, Cecil G. Frost, K.C., was busy in a Supreme Court case and had asked for a remand for Carter. Accordingly the case was enlarged until Thursday of next week.

HAD TO BE POSTPONED

A charge of cruelty to animals laid against a Harvey Township farmer who is accused of allowing cattle and a sow to starve to death had to be adjourned this morning owing to the inability of the accused to reach Peterborough. Provincial Constable David Silvester was informed by telephone that blocked roads in Harvey made it impossible for the farmer to be here today for trial.

ANNIVERSARY

A well-known George street merchant and hunter, and his wife, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary while hunting on Hay Lake on November 3. A considerate sister-in-law of the bride sent cake and cocktails to the couple. The event was to have been one of those secrets, but has finally come to light, the trip was a pronounced success in the hunting aspect, for a full quota of deer was brought home.

CEMENT WORK LAGS

The cold weather of the past few days has halted concrete work on new foundations in the city but builders are rushing brickwork and interior work on the new homes. In the Toronto and Hamilton districts, builders usually resort to cinder blocks or concrete blocks for new foundations and therefore are able to start houses in the coldest weather provided the excavating has been done. Local builders stick pretty much to the solid concrete type of house foundation.

SELLING IS BRISK

Purchase of parcels for soldiers and sailors on active service has caused a wave of pre-season Christmas shopping locally and storekeepers along the main street claim there was unusually heavy buying last week-end. This year many people want to take advantage of bargain prices before the rush of Christmas selling and as a result the shopping is a little heavier than last year. Pay-cheques are a little higher too which helps considerably.

SKI SCHOOL

With so much snow on the ground the members of the Peterborough Ski Club are turning toward the hills. With prospects good for a week-end of skiing, the matter of having a ski school on the snow will be discussed at the meeting of the club to be held in the showrooms of J. J. Duffus Company at 8:00 p.m. on Friday. The meeting has had to be postponed because of the fact that one of the instructors, Fritz Loosli, has been called out of town, it was to have been held on Thursday.

GETS DISCHARGE

The loneliest civilian in Peterborough today is Lionel Dalgleisch, formerly of Campbellford, who was discharged from the 3rd Field Park Company, R.C.E. this week. He was with them four months but a final medical examination revealed he was unfit for military service, and now he is back in civilian life, in good physical health but not good enough for the job of soldiering. He liked the life and feels lost trying to pick up the loose ends of civilian life again. He is 25 years of age and is looking for work in the city.

Summer Visitors Win Big Awards In Muskie And Bass Divisions Of Contest Conducted By Examiner

American tourists took a good share of the prizes in the Peterborough Examiner Lucky Strike Fishing contest, practically dominating the maskinonge division and winning the top prize for the largest small mouth black bass. The contest was a complete success with close to half a hundred entries, and only in one section was there any lack of entries.

This was in the large mouth bass division, and although many large ones were caught throughout the Trent waters and Kawartha lakes the fishermen or women neglected to enter them, so that there were only two in the division. The judges stretched a point here taking the third prize for the large mouth bass and making it a fourth prize in the small mouth division to give the youngest entrant in the contest a prize.

Women Winners

Women figured in the win column in several divisions, with Mrs. Lionel Monk of Park street south catching the largest pickerel a 10½-pound beauty in Stoney Lake. Mrs. W. S. Robertson caught a 5-pound, 14-ounce green bass in Belmont Lake to win first prize in that division and Betty Abernethy of Pittsburg fought a 22-pound, 14-ounce muskie to a finish in Stoney Lake to win third prize in the maskinonge section.

The feature entry of the contest was a lake trout caught in Papineau Lake by the Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Bishop of Ontario whose home is in Kingston. This fish tipped the scales at 25 pounds and was 37 inches long. He was fishing with Dan Goodwin, veteran guide of the Bancroft district. Bishop Lyons didn't intend to take the fish home, but according to stories from the north country, Dan Goodwin convinced the clergyman the parishioners would never believe him unless he brought home the fish and this was done. Trout of this size are uncommon in local waters but in the past ten years trout weighing up to 39 pounds have been caught just north of the Kawartha waters and in Haliburton.

Adams Sands, one of this city's top trout fishermen was the only one to capture two prizes. He grabbed first place in the brown trout division (German trout) with a 21-inch long trout caught in Shanty Lake near Bancroft. It weighed 3 pounds, 14 ounces. His 7-pound lake trout caught in the same lake took second prize in the lake trout division.

Choicest Fish Of All

The choicest fish of them all was the 27-pound muskie caught in Rice Lake during the first week in September by Lee Stachler, Box 5, Danville, Ohio, making his first trip to this district. He was fishing with R. C. Hoagland also of Danville and a Rice Lake guide and he took the fish home packed in ice.

The prizes amounting to $132.00 worth of fishing tackle were donated by Frank Edgar, manager of the Lucky Strike Bait Company, and although the rules did not specify that these baits must be used, nevertheless most of the prize-winning fish were landed using Lucky Strike tackle.

REVENGE?

Residents on Stewart street Wednesday afternoon were amazed to see a large police dog rushing down the street with a full-sized garbage pail held in its mouth. The dog had grasped the pail, not by the handle, but by the rim, and was losing no time in effecting a get-away, though it was not being pursued.

HE WAS BLUSHING

A story is making the rounds about a trainee from the city who came home a few nights ago, and changed into civilian clothes to take his girl friend to a dance. It happened that there was an officer although he recognized the trainee, did not reprimand him. The trainee had a few uncomfortable moments until the officer got off the bus, fearing he would be ordered back to camp at once. Military law forbids changing from army uniform into civilian clothes unless the commanding officer gives permission, which is often done in cases where there is a funeral or a wedding at the soldier's home.—McG.

Garbage Rate Is Unchanged

The garbage collection tax rate for 1941 was recommended at 7/10 mills by the property committee Wednesday night, the same as last year.

This reaching forward into the affairs of next year seems to be one of the few exceptions to an unwritten rule in both urban and rural municipal affairs that one year's council cannot or should not "legislate" for the next.

Alderman McCannan, chairman of the committee, said that he did not know why this exception was adopted, but the fact was that it had been going on from year to year.

The estimated expenditures for 1941 are $17,412.23, and with an expected surplus of $1,952.95, the amount which would have to be raised by taxes is $15,459.28.

The proposed rate of seven-tenths of a mill on the 1941 assessment of $22,084,694 would provide $15,459.28.

In proposing this garbage collection rate the committee assumed that the contract could be closed for $10,600. The other expenses are mainly at the incinerator.

Privates Want To Wear Kilts

The Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders have brought memories to at least one man in Ottawa with the skirl of the pipers. He is Major J. P. S. Cathcart, M.C., who is now Medical Officer of the Cameron Highlanders (2nd Battalion N.P.A.M.)

Many of the Scots of battle mood have drawn consolation from the fact that, though the highland regiments of the day have been stripped of the kilt, they maintain the pipers, and one of these is Major Cathcart.

Not long ago he was moved by the wail of the pipes in Lansdowne Park, and his mind turned back to the days of the Pipers of the 16th Battalion (Canadian Scottish). These pipers set an all time high for gallantry in the field, their decorations included one Victoria Cross, one Distinguished Conduct Medal, nine Military Medals, and one with Bar.

There are two pipe bands in Lansdowne Park at present, one is being organized by Lt.-Col. G. D. Gillie, M.C., officer commanding the District Depot, while the other one, of course, is that of the S.D. and G. Highlanders. In the Great War there were only about 100 pipe bands.

The Glengarians, like any other Highland Regiment, are proud of their pipe band. Many, who short years ago winced at the Pibroch, and likened the skirl to the noises of animals, are to-day among the most enthusiastic.

The kilt too is becoming more appreciated. It has been said that it may be arranged for all ranks of the Highlanders to have kilt. As it stands only officers, warrant, officers, and non-commissioned officers possess them. An interesting sidelight comes from Ottawa, where private soldiers are so fond of the effect of the kilt, that they have been, it is said, in the habit of renting them from the N.C.O.'s when on leave. All are entitled to wear the kilt, and it is more than apparent that all are anxious to do so.

Dr. W. Kirkconnell To Visit Peterborough

Dr. Watson Kirkconnell, son of the late Dr. Thomas Allison Kirkconnel who for many years was principal of the Lindsay Collegiate Institute will be a visitor to Peterborough on Friday when he is scheduled to address an open meeting of the Women's Teachers' Guild at 8:15 p.m. in the Y.W.C.A.

Dr. Kirkconnell has recently come to McMaster University, Hamilton, from Winnipeg and early this month he addressed the Toronto Canadian club. Those who heard his address declared it was the most encouraging and one of the most important that the club has heard since the commencement of the war. Dr. Kirkconnell is one of Canada's best informed citizens on what the European elements amongst our people are thinking and has won the confidence of Canadians of all racial origins.

He is also a literary artist of great skill and taste and has been selected as the broadcaster for the CBC period to be devoted to Canadian Book week.

Twenty years old, Ben Ackerman was a student at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and served for some time as a member of the Peterborough Rangers. He enlisted with the Canadian Navy earlier in the year, took a three months' course in radio in Toronto and since then has been in training in the East. Now he's at sea as a wireless telegrapher.

Vernon Graham Wins First In Trout Contest

Vernon Graham of Buckhorn, who caught a brown trout weighing 4 lbs. 8 oz. in Mississauga Lake, won first prize in the contest sponsored this year by Charles Kingan, president of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association.

Second prize in the contest went to Harold Dalliday, Prince street, who saught a 2-pound brown trout in the Cavan stream, fishing with worms last May. This fish placed third in The Examiner contest, but Graham did not enter his fish.

The first prize is $5 and the second prize is $1.

Mr. Kingan arranged the contest in an effort to determine whether any of the brown trout which were used to stock several streams and lakes in Peterborough county were thriving. The contest was restricted to Peterborough county.

Brown trout were formerly known as German trout because they originally came from Europe. They are beyond doubt the prettiest fish in Canadian water, not even excepting the beautiful speckled trout. Each year more are being caught and it is evident that the fish are doing exceptionally well.

Two years ago a small boy saw a fish splashing in a small pool in the Jackson Park creek near the Bonaccord street bridge, and he caught it with his hands. It was a brown trout and weighed two pounds. During the past summer Adam Sands, Alex Elliott, C. A. Salmonsen and Charles Lacheur all had nice catches of brown trout.

Norwood Soldier

Private Kenneth Thompson, Norwood, with Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders at Ottawa; son of Reeve J. R. Thompson and Mrs. Thompson of Norwood. He was one of the first recruits to join the battalion here last June. Pte. Thompson attended the Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational Training School.

Ask Raybestos $500 For Filled-in Ditch

The stretch of the Bethune street right of way between the property of the Raybestos Company and the Port Hope line of the C.N.R., extending from Rink to Perry streets, a strip of 38 feet in width will be offered to the Raybestos Company for $500, the Manufacturers' committee of the Council recommended last night, on Alderman Gordon's motion, seconded by Alderman Dutton.

Alderman Bradburn, chairman, said the company was looking forward to the need of additional space for further enlargement of their plant. They are now erecting a second unit this Fall, the first one already completed on the west side of their lot, and the other one, recently begun, on the east side and to the north of the property. If they acquire the Bethune street road allowance it would give them extra ground sufficient to enable them to make further expansion by means of a building that would be 60 feet wide. There is no immediate prospect in that direction, but the work done this Fall under the necessity of providing more plant accommodation is pointing to the probability of obtaining elbow room in anticipation of what the new year may possibly require.

The site was recently examined by Alderman Bradburn, Alderman McCannan and City Engineer Parsons. The strip that now appears as a street in the block from Perry to Ring street was for generations nothing but a ditch beside the C.N.R., formerly the Grand Trunk. When the company fenced in their property, they noticed that the built up ground along the east side was sliding away into the ditch. To obtain continuous level ground they began filling in the ditch several years ago, and actually created the street surface that is now occasionally used. It is 26 feet wide at Perry street and 38 feet at Rink street. This width discrepancy is explained by the direction in which the railway was laid.

Alderman Bradburn said he felt the city should meet the wishes of the Raybestos Company. The company had fulfilled all its obligations in Peterborough, "and they can't expand any further unless they get this property," he said.

The C.N.R., whose line to Port Hope was built many years ago along Bethune street, was consulted by the special committee, and their reply was that they would be satisfied if the city sold the strip to the Raybestos Company.

The committee's recommendation last night will be sent on to the council at its December meeting.

Your Plum Pudding Shows Britain Rules The Waves

Think of the idea of expressing Brittania rules the waves in terms of English plum puddings and Christmas cakes!

And to get some understanding of what British sea power and dominance means to you on King street or Armour Road or Keene or Hastings just imagine what your English plum pudding would consist of if you had to substitute something else for the dried fruits and nuts and other ingredients that come from over the seas!

That is just about the way Robert Ross, manager of National Grocers, illustrated the little ultimate effects of Great Britain's rule of the sea.

And what would you put in the Christmas cake in the place of the dried fruits and nuts and whatever does go into it?

It wouldn't be a pudding at all, not the full flavored "English plum" that always brings up visions and memories of Dingley Dell and the good companions of Mr. Pickwick.

"It really is surprising how much goods we are getting, and how little our supplies have been disrupted," Mr. Ross said.

"We have filberts from Sicily and Tarragona almonds from Spain; we have figs from Smyrna and Portugal. The nuts are expected to arrive in New York today. In the old days we used to get all our currants from Greece and most of the raisins from Spain, but we made a trade agreement with Australia and so most of those dried fruits have been coming from our Empire sources.

Dates from Turkey arrived on Monday. I don't know when we shall get olive oil. Our stock of the Italian oil is running down, and there will be no replacing it while the war is on."

In answering the Examiner's enquiry Mr. Ross was saying that business on the surface seemed to be much as usual; and he did not say that the grocery business "would hardly know there was a war on" to the extent that the British navy is keeping the sea lanes open, and so far all that Canada needs is the convoy system to bring in Christmas cake stuff.

And Mr. Ross was not handing out a little homily on the importance of the British navy. His facts told that story with simple eloquence for even the least acute of imaginations.

Every housewife in this country should be thinking of naval power and the British sailors when she mixes the plum pudding batter next month, and puts a big pan of Christmas cake in the oven to bake.

Sixteen-inch guns that command the sea reduced into such trifling but highly significant ordinary things as foreign nuts and figs, and dates and currants.

When Corporal's Joke Backfired

The "Canadian Veteran" brings to light a witty, and to all intents and purposes true, story. It concerns a private soldier who was not overly bright, and who asked his corporal how he might go about getting out of the army, he felt he had had enough of it.

"You can get out all right," said the corporal, "but you'll have to give two weeks' notice."

"Two weeks' notice," said the recruit, "well to whom shall I give notice?"

"You'll have to give notice to the King," said the corporal, "he's the man that your working for now."

The part that makes this a story is that the man did give two weeks' notice to the King, and when it was determined in the resulting inquiry, that the corporal was responsible for the deed, the corporal saw the joke in a little different light.

Driver Drops Dead While At The Wheel

BANCROFT, Nov. 28.—(ENS). — James Leach, 67, a farmer in the Vancleek Settlement, 12 miles south-west of here, dropped dead at the wheel of his car on Wednesday afternoon when on his way to Bancroft. Along with Mr. Leach at the time was a neighbor, D. Hawley. The car ran into the ditch but was not seriously damaged. Mr. Hawley returned home and it was some hours before the police and coroner were notified. Dr. O. W. Anderson, coroner, investigated along with Provincial Constable F. W. Palmeteer and they decided an inquest was not necessary.

Week-end Leave For Trainees

CORNWALL, Nov. 28.—Trainees at Canadian Military Camp No. 31 here will be permitted week-end leaves during the second training period, Lieut.-Colonel Rudolphe Larose, officer commanding, said.

Soon after the start of the first camp period it was decided to refuse the trainees permission to leave for home on the week-ends. This policy has been changed, Colonel Larose said, and during the training session now in progress half of the camp members will be allowed week-ends. They can leave Saturday noon, and will not be expected to return before six o'clock on Monday morning.

A varied sports program is being organized for the trainees at the Cornwall camp, under supervision of Lieut. W. T. Nixon, formerly basketball and football coach at Ottawa University. Camp engineers will start work on an outdoor rink, and other games will be played in the camp's large drill hall, now nearly completed. The camp's permanent staff, reinforced by trainees, will enter teams in local hockey and basketball leagues and inter-company groupings also are planned.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 — (AP). — Herbert Abram Baker, 59, president of the American Can Company, died Monday night at New York hospital after a month's illness.

Chemist, industrialist, and author of many scientific papers, Baker came to the United States from his native Canada in 1906. He was born in Harmony Corners, Ont., near Whitby.

Premier Wished To Show Kawartha Film To Members Of Ontario Tourist Associations

Alderman Roy's technicolor motion pictures, "The Call of the Kawarthas," will be shown at a dinner in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, Friday, December 6, which is being given by Premier Hepburn to representatives of tourist associations and Chambers of Commerce. The Premier has expressed his conviction that the province should make a special effort to attract American tourists in 1941, in the hope that they will open their purses and leave here a large sum of money which Canada could use to buy war supplies in the United States.

The Peterborough Tourist Bureau is the first in the provincial field with technicolor pictures of Ontario's summer playground attractions, and Douglas Oliver, head of the Ontario Tourist Bureau, recommended to Premier Hepburn that the Roy pictures should be shown at this dinner meeting as a fine illustration of what can be done in providing a form of entertainment to be shown across the border this winter.

Mr. Roy has had many requests for engagement of "The Call of the Kawarthas" throughout the district. One of them is from Marmora; others are nearer home, but all indicate a demand to see this picture. It is believe that the local Tourist Bureau may decide to show it throughout the district in the expectation of receiving some revenue to offset the initial expense.

Leeson Appeal Is Dismissed

OTTAWA, Nov. 28—(AP). — The appeal of Alexander Leeson of Havelock, to obtain damages from the Village of Havelock because of an injury suffered when he fell on an icy street in March, 1939, was dismissed with costs by the Supreme Court of Canada today.

Mr. Leeson alleged gross negligence on the part of the village. The municipality contended street-sanding operations had been carried out the day before Mr. Leeson was injured and that he was aware of the sidewalk conditions.

Last January Mr. Justice W. D. Roach in the Supreme Court of Ontario found in favor of Leeson to the extent of $3,280, covering damages and costs. The Ontario Appeal Court reversed this judgment and today the Supreme Court of Canada dismissed with costs Leeson's appeal against reversal.

Cottesloe Clubs Hold Joint Oyster Supper

COTTESLOE, Nov. 28—(ENS). — The joint clubs had a pleasant get-together on Thursday evening when about 50 met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Barr for a bountiful supper of oysters and sausages, with all the attending delicacies which go to make a real country supper.

When all had partaken heartily the dining room was cleared for dancing by the younger folk and games and music for the older ones. It being the date of the 40th wedding anniversary for Mr. and Mrs. Robert Patterson, the club had prepared a surprise and Mr. and Mrs. Patterson were presented with a beautiful Kenwood blanket. Taken completely by surprise they could only say, "Thank you, and come to visit us."

At the close of the evening's enjoyment, a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. and Mrs. Barr and the National Anthem was sung.

Mr. Rae Barrons spent the week-end at his home in Cordova.

He cited many instances of the church woman going and doing what no one else could. The singing of "Lond of the Lands," The National Antiem and Benediction closed the meeting.

Mr. Dave Barr, who is training in Peterborough, was home for Sunday.

Mr. Thistlewaite staged over for the night meeting on Sunday and was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Forsyth.

Fear Aftermath Of Conflict Worse Than War

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—(AP).—The Three Horsemen of the Apocalypse who ride behind war—Famine, Disease and Death—were said today to be already overrunning Europe.

In a report to Scientific Monthly, magazine of the American Association for the advancement of Science, Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor of Stanford University, said that the aftermath of the war may be worse than the war itself.

Throughout Europe and particularly in the countries conquered by Germany the problem of food is already becoming acute, he declared, and shortages are necessitating strict rationing of available supplies.

In Norway, Denmark, Belgium and France, he said, there will be inadequate supplies of wheat, meat, fats and oils because those available supplies have either been commandeered or used up by the armies, and farmers have not been able to work their lands.

The Refugee Hordes

In addition, Mr. Taylor added, "in most countries a special problem is the feeding of refugees."

On the heels of famine are bound to come thousands of cases of disease due to lack of food, neglect, poor housing, insufficient clothing and lack of fuel. Public health and other medical authorities paint a dismal picture of the coming winter for millions of Europeans of all nationalities.

Thousands of children, they say, will be born dead, thousands of mothers will die for lack of medical attention, diphtheria and pneumonia will kill other thousands, and if epidemics of influenza, typhus, typhoid fever, measles and plague break out—which medical men fully expect—the toll of death and suffering will be much greater than that of the war itself.

CAMPBELLFORD

School Grant Is $178 Less

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 28 (ENS) That the newly instituted noon hour from 12.00 till 1.10 is working out very satisfactorily members of the Board of Education learned at their monthly meeting, during which comment on the change was made in a report by Principal E. H. Greig and by High School Inspector Gray, who recently tabled his semi-annual report for the Board. Mr. Greig told the Board he had heard no complaint of the shortened noon hour which now enables the High School students to get out before 4.30 p.m.

The problem of blown fuses will be eliminated if the advice of Principal Greig is taken. He suggested that an extra circuit be installed in an effort to eliminate the overload that each year (particularly at commencement time) caused fuses to blow, leaving the school in the dark. On motion of J. A. Irwin and Dr. H. O. Richardson the matter was left in the hands of the Property Committee with authority to make the necessary alteration to the lighting system.

Mr. Loucks told the Board he had found an anvil of the standard 160 pound variety which could be purchased for ten dollars. This it was pointed out was required for the shop work course. No action was taken. J. J. Lewis Hay addressed the Board re the premium on the liability policy carried by the Board. Chairman A. G. Thompson waived the motion to pay the premium suggesting instead that it be included in the accounts.

A change in the proportioning of public school grants has resulted in the Board receiving $178.00 less than last year from the provincial grant. The 1940 grant, which has just been received according to the secretary, amounted to $1,132.68, against $1,300.00 in 1939. Following the custom adopted in the previous world war pupils in senior grades will be granted certificates if they discontinue school to take a position doing some essential war work. This will only be done with the recommendation of the principal stated Chairman A. G. Thompson, who drew attention to the policy authorized by the Department of Education. He emphasized the policy would only cover employment in essential war work, work on farms or enlistment.

$1,900 Surplus Expected By McCannan

Presenting to the property committee of the council last night a report of its work this year, Alderman H. J. McCannan, chairman, expressed the opinion that Peterborough has probably the lowest garbage collection rate of the cities in Canada—"certainly any place I have heard of has a much higher rate for equal services rendered."

Te rate this year was 7/10 of a mill which produced $15,172.75 to finance the work. "Indications are that despite some expenses for repairs at the incinerator there, will be a comfortable surplus of approximately $1,900 at the end of the year."

Alderman McCannan's report, recalling various improvements which were put into effect during the year, was a little innovation that can be readily passed on to the ratepayers.

"I would recommend," he said, "as I have for the past two years, that the council proceed at once with the erection of a new incinerator. While our present incinerator is doing an excellent job of disposal, it is old and may fail completely at any time."

Following the fire last year the upstairs market was completely re-established and re-decorated. The market this year has increased its business and popularity. Early in the year your chairman met with representatives of the county council and vegetable growers of the district and discussed improvements to the outside market, particularly some form of covering. It was agreed covering of the market must wait until after the war.

The committee has already made recommendations for next year in connection with the services of a market clerk.

Sold 100 City Lots.

Your committee continued the sale of city lots to citizens who agreed to build homes on such lots within a year. I feel that this home building has been a great civic benefit. Altogether approximately 100 city lots have been sold and the new homes are to be seen in every ward.

During the year the city hall furnace was equipped with a stoker. This will give better temperature control, easier operation and I believe over a period of years create a saving in fuel. To avoid building a new chimney the centre partition was removed, thus creating a flue 9½ x 23" which gave ample draft. This no doubt will remove the difficulties created by soot nuisance and heating which have existed for many years.

With the co-operation of the City Trust, storage quarters for the Police Department were made in the basement by using about half the space formerly used as a coal bin for storage of useless coal. This should prove of great benefit to the police keeping the offices and court room from being cluttered up with old exhibits and means that the police can carry on successfully in their present quarters for some time at least.

During the year the equipment in the city offices was maintained at high standard, several new typewriters being purchased. This maintaining of good equipment is important for efficiency, I believe.

Many Improvements.

I may report with pardonable pride that during my term as chairman of property many improvements have been made to the city offices, including the much-needed modernization of the city clerk's office, re-decorating of the Council Chamber, better lighting of the offices, an re-decorating of most of the offices. New steel filing cabinets were installed in the vault, also new furniture installed in the clerk's office and in committee room. New set of scales installed with neat finish around platform, lattice partition built next to scales to hide the unsightly tables and benches used in connection with the market.

I may say tht the caretaker at the market rest room, as the result of encouragement given him, now is making many of the minor repairs in connection with the building. This has reduced maintenance cost of the building.

The financial statement of my department as of November 8th, is set out below:

	Spent	Balance
Appropriation Garbage— $15,172.75	$12,079.58	$3,093.17
Market— 2,790.00	2,273.70	516.30
Property— 2,717.00	1,828.63	888.37
Withers' contract		$10,600.00
Pd. to Oct. 31, 1940		8,808.31
		$1,791.69

The committee complimented Alderman McCannan on his statement, and Alderman Bradburn added, "and for the able manner in which he has looked after the affairs of the property committee."

Alderman Dutton said: Alderman McCannan has done a first class job, and especially so as a new man coming into the council with little knowledge of the details of city property.

A Ghost Returns

No one ever thought that he would see the liner America on the high seas again after she was consigned to a graveyard in a Virginia port. But here she is going into dry dock in New York before being commissioned as a U.S. army transport. The liner was formerly the Hamburg America liner "Amerika." She was seized during the last world war and used as a troop transport. History is repeating itself as she once more arrives at quarantine in New York.

Build Britain To Its Victory New Peer's Job

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 25 — (CP). — Lanky, bushy-browed Lord Reith (Sir John), once plain John Reith, the successful Scottish engineer, has been charged with the mighty task of fashioning the greater Britain in the brave new world to follow the war, but in the meantime his job, as Minister of Works and Buildings, is literally to "build for victory." He is Britain's wartime building dictator.

With his raise to the peerage comes a wider interpretation of his new duties. While he acts as a construction arbiter, he is to be the "planner in chief" of the new Britain. He will consult with Government departments and any other necessary authorities, report to the Cabinet on plans to abolish slums and provide for rehousing on a tremendous scale in London and other thickly-populated centres.

Meantime, except for certain highly-specialized service jobs — such as airports and fortifications — his ministry will be responsible for erection of all new civil works and buildings required by another Government department. It will license private building and determine what structures destroyed by air raids shall be rebuilt first.

For War Production.

The ministry may arrange, by agreement with service departments or the Minister of Aircraft Production, to erect on their behalf new works and buildings not of a highly specialized character, such as stores depots, for erection of new private factories under the Minister of Supply or extension of existing private factories required for war production.

The Government's production council will lay down the general order of priority of building. Lord Reith will be a member of that council and responsible for the committee which says which buildings must come first. He will determine how the council's directions in this respect should be applied, but if his decision is opposed an appeal may be taken to the council.

Another of his jobs will be to investigate such questions as adoption of substitutes for scarce building materials or modify designs and specifications to speed up building. He is to make use of all research facilities and can call on departments retaining responsibility for buildings to prove that they are taking full advantage of the latest research developments.

Janetville Man Injured In Fall

JANETVILLE, Nov. 28 — (ENS)— Walter Walker, a resident of Janetville, suffered another unfortunate accident on Saturday evening when returning from his work at Bowmanville.

In the darkness of the night he tripped over his small son's wagon, which had been left on the cement walk and as a result his elbow was painfully injured.

Upon X-ray examination by Dr. Parker, of Lindsay, the member was found to be not broken but almost as seriously, as the socket had been driven up into the arm.

Mr. Walker will be off work for an indefinite period and this accident is particularly regretted because a year ago he suffered the loss of an eye as a result of a splinter of steel entering it while working in the woods.

Hall's Bridge WI Plans A Supper

HALL'S BRIDGE, Nov. 28—(ENS) —The regular monthly meeting of the Hall's Bridge branch of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. H. A. Shearer on November 19, with a good attendance.

The roll call was answered by each member giving a small jar of fruit or pickles, which will be sent in the baskets of cheer at Christmas time.

The business of planning a fowl supper was their discussed. It was decided not to have it till after Christmas. A crokinole party was planned for November 26 in the Buckhorn hall.

Current events were read by Miss O. Wilson, and were very interesting. The meeting was then turned over to the convener for peace and legislation. There followed a few minutes of community singing, after which the speaker, Miss Statford, from Havelock, was introduced. Her address was on peace.

Miss Statford told how a certain prince had asked Queen Victoria where did England get its strength and she replied, "From the Bible." The speaker stressed the point that God can and will give each one who seeks it, the peace that passeth all understanding.

Miss Swallow then gave a very pleasing piano solo. Mrs. Shearer had all join in for a few minutes in community singing, and then closed the meeting by singing the National Anthem.

The hostess and her helpers served a very dainty lunch.

OMEMEE

Institute Votes Red Cross $50

OMEMEE, Nov. 28 — (ENS). — The Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. W. B. Everson, with a large attendance of members who came early to quilt. The roll call was answered by "Roll call suggestions for the Coming Year." An interesting and instructive paper on "Diet" was given by Mrs. M. Hoard. A splendid report on Women's Institute rally held at Bobcaygeon was given by Mrs. E. Woods.

During the business period it was decided to send Bill Acreman, who is now in England, a Christmas box from the Institute.

The sum of $35.00 was voted to the Red Cross Society, along with the $15.00 profit from the Red Cross dance, making a total of $50.00. The work sent to Red Cross headquarters in Lindsay for October included one quilt, 24 pillow cases, eight pairs pyjamas, four hospital gowns, three scarfs, one sweater, and seven pairs of socks.

It was announced that the Christmas meeting would be held at the home of Mrs. T. E. MacPherson, with Mrs. H. Laidley and Mrs. W. Northey the program committee.

Lunch was served by the hostesses Mrs. J. Magee and Mrs. S. McConnell.

W. A. Meeting.

The November meeting of the Women's Association was held at the home of Miss Irene Faulkner. Mrs. Lamb read a selection on "Peace," with responses by the members of the society, followed by a short prayer by Mrs. Lamb. It was decided to give the usual Christmas treat to the Sunday School, and a committee was appointed to look after Christmas cheer for the shut-ins.

Following the business a piano solo was rendered by Miss Lily Race. A social hour was much enjoyed by the members.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lamb were guests on Saturday at the Rodman and Hickson wedding in Lindsay.

Plaunt Charges C.B.C. Board Shunning Facts

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—(CP).—Alan B. Plaunt of Ottawa who recently resigned from the Board of Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Tuesday issued a statement saying: "I remain prepared fully to substantiate the grounds for my resignation before a Parliamentary committee.

Mr. Plaunt's statement was in reply to resolutions adopted by the Board of Governors regretfully noting Mr. Plaunt's retirement and declaring "full confidence in the general manager, Mr. Gladstone Murray and the assistant general manager, Dr. Augustin Frigon."

Mr. Plaunt's statement said that by declaring full and complete confidence in Mr. Murray "the Board of Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is apparently still unwilling to face the demonstrable facts which led me to resign on Aug. 30 last.

"By failing to do so they are, in effect, condoning very serious internal conditions and irregularities as well as certain policies which are indefensibly partisan and harmful.

"The Board's statement is, of course, an attempt to whitewash the whole matter. The Board has, however, thus gone on record as accepting full responsibility for present deficiencies and for future results, and I am, accordingly, obliged to leave the matter in their hands. I can only repeat that I remain prepared fully to substantiate the grounds for my resignation before a parliamentary committee.

"I also wish to emphasize that my critical references to the Corporation's 'executive direction' were in no sense intended to include the assistant general manager, Dr. Augustin Frigon, as the Board of Governors well knows."

10 Cents A Name Register Cost

OTTAWA, Nov. 28—(CP).—It cost something over 10 cents to record particulars of age, occupation and ability of each of the 7,863,472 people registered in the National Registration last August according to a return tabled in the House of Commons yesterday.

The total estimated cost of registration—all accounts are not yet settled—was placed at $924,496. This included an outlay of $144,648 on printing.

The return gave the cost of registration in each electoral district and showed that in four Ontario districts, Halton, Lambton West, Lincoln and Perth there was no cost, probably because all persons working donated their services.

The most costly constituency to register was Nipissing, in Northern Ontario, where the outlay was $6,210. In two other Ontario constituencies London and Ottawa West, the cost was under $100.

Curb On Travel Keeps Duke In Bahamas

NASSAU, Bahamas, Nov. 28.—(AP).—War-time restrictions on travel outside the British Empire may keep the Duke and Duchess of Windsor from their hoped-for visit to the United States for several months at least.

Ever since the Duke came here as Governor three months ago, he has talked of a trip to his American-born Duchess nearby homeland. But so far, no opportunity has presented itself for combining such a pleasure trip with a tour for business reasons.

During wartime, the British Empire frowns on travel outside the area where sterling money is used. The Government, buying expansively for war needs, is attempting to conserve all its United States dollars for essentials.

A resident of the Bahamas, for instance, can get permission to visit the United States only for necessary medical treatment or some important business that will result in financial benefit to the colony or the Empire. Any attempt to stretch the restrictions purely for pleasure is considered unpatriotic.

Thus, the Duke, as representative of the Crown, can hardly pay a call on his American neighbors unless there appears to be some justifiable business reason for the journey. Of course officials feel that any such trip could be considered a goodwill job, justifying itself for the tourists it would attract to this winter resort.

But this role of good-will ambassador is one that the Duke himself has rath insistently avoided, on his expressed theory that he was sent here as Governor of a British colony and not for such extra-curricular activity.

The Duke himself says there is no trip in sight, unless the Government finds something specific for him to do in the United States.

Russo-U.S. Talks To Be Resumed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—(AP).—Diplomatic talks between the United States and Russia, interrupted by the recent Berlin visit of Soviet Premier Molotoff, will be resumed soon, informed sources said today.

Constantine Oumansky, Soviet Ambassador, was expected to see State Undersecretary Welles, probably some time this week, to take up the conversations where they left off shortly before Molotoff went to Berlin for talks with Hitler.

This was interpreted in informed quarters as a sign that Molotoff's Berlin visit had not impaired the negotiations which have been in progress here for several months looking to a general improvement of Russo-American relations.

The Welles-Oumansky talks have dealt mainly with trade and related problems with a view to adjusting these before going on to broader questions.

Gains on each side have been relatively small so far but both the United States and Russia were understood to desire to continue the conversations for the present in the hope of more tangible results.

Molotoff's trip to Berlin caused concern at the time in official quarters here lest it presage closer Russian alignment with the Axis, possibly as a partner in the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo front. But as yet there has been no surface indication either that Russia would join, or accede to apparent Japanese desires for a Soviet-Japanese non-aggression pact.

Dozen Indicted

DETROIT, Nov. 28 — (AP). — A special Federal Grand Jury investigating affairs of Michigan's State Government indicted Frank D. McKay of Grand Rapids, Republican National committeeman and former State Treasurer, and 11 others today on mail fraud charges.

One indictment charged that McKay and 11 others used the mails to defraud the State of "the honest services of its public officials" in a $500,000 shakedown of distilleries selling their wares to the State Liquor Control Commission.

New Experiences Due Under Peace Result Of War, Farm Women Told

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—(CP)—Mrs. O. G. Anderson of Wingham, Ont., president of the United Farm Women of Ontario in an address prepared for delivery yesterday urged members attending the annual convention here "to do more in keeping our women together and in making the voice of rural women a force in arousing public opinion against our ridiculous situation."

She said this situation was the presence of super-abundance together with want and poverty.

Although farmers were successfully producing the necessities of life and increasing volume where they considered it necessary, farm incomes were steadily decreasing, operating costs were growing and the general outlook was becoming more discouraging.

Farm women had even substituted for young men, called for military training, in the heavy farm work at home, she said. But monetary returns had not been satisfactory.

In calling on farm women's clubs to continue their work, she said:

"A co-operative way of life should be our great goal, and while we cannot help but gain inspiration from what has been accomplished towards this we are forced to realize that today international co-operation has almost ceased."

Must Keep Open Minds

"War conditions are creating a new set of values and we women must develop a new set of attitudes and judgments with which to handle them. To do this we must keep open minds. We must also train our vision to be far-reaching over and beyond the time of war into the time when we shall emerge into a new kind of life; for rest assured that life under future peace conditions will be something we have not before experienced."

The period following the war, at its best, would be a very difficult one, she believed.

"Let us keep this before us in all our wartime activities. Let us help to balance our coming year's work and indeed all our plans for the future," she said.

Mrs. Leonard Harman of Toronto secretary of the organization, said there were 45 organized United Farm Women's clubs in Toronto besides a number who shared in the family membership of the United Farmers of Ontario.

While she commended the co-operation of a number of the groups with such organizations as the Red Cross, she urged them not to lose sight of the primary purpose of the organization "in the rebuilding of rural communities and educating for a co-operative way of business."

Shocks Ahead

Los Angeles, Nov. 28 (AP)

THE NAVY has discovered a man who says he never has hugged or kissed a girl, eaten chicken or chocolate ice cream, or talked with a girl on the telephone. Ivan Whitfield, 25, also told a recruiting officer he never had smoked, ordered a meal in a restaurant, watched a prizefight, sent an affectionate letter or telegram to a girl, drunk liquor, danced, or stepped aboard a battleship or submarine.

Whitfield joined the navy.

"I might switch over on a few things," he observed.

Well Fed Hens Produce 'Grade A' Eggs

Consumers may feel reasonably assured that most of the eggs they buy on the local produce market as Grade A are as represented, but certainty requires weighing and candling. And that applies to any source of supply, market or retail stores, M. R. Mitchell of the Poultry Products branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, said Wednesday afternoon at the agricultural short course at Lakehurst in Harvey township.

Like the tree and its fruit in the parable, the best hens lay the best eggs; hens that are well fed look the part, and go about the business of providing the accompaniment of ham as if they were interested in laying only Grade A product.

Grade A eggs should, rather must, weigh on the average individually of 24 ounces to the dozen.

Candling indicates principally their albumen content, simply by the shadow of the yolk in the shell-full of albumen. If the outline of the yolk is generally round and also indistinct "that is because the thick albumen is standing up and holds the yolk in the centre," Mr. Mitchell said. "As the eggs go down in quality the percentage of thick albumen is less, permitting the yolk to come closer to the shell, and its outline becomes oblong in shape and is slightly visible.

Grade C eggs are used chiefly in cooking. The albumen is thin. It has been naturally watered down, letting the yolk drop to the bottom of the shell."

The buyer of an egg can tell its quality, chiefly in respect to its albumen quality, by breaking it for poaching. The so-called white, the albumen, has plenty of body to it, and the yolk nestles in the centre of it. An egg of low albumen content produces a skimpy white "collar," the natural substitute of water mixing with the water that is boiling.

Mr. Mitchell said it was possible to get some big eggs that were not as good as the smaller pullet produce, that is depending on their respective albumen content.

ealing for employment, jobless Spanish political refugees told the Mexican Government that they wanted work, not financial assistance.

Wins Grandmother's Prize

MRS. SHAW

FOR HER LOAF OF WHITE BREAD

At Canadian National Exhibition - 1940

Although Mrs. George Shaw won the first prize for white bread in the "Homemakers of Yesterday" contest, at the 1940 Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, this genial lady is very much a homemaker of today! Every week she bakes for herself and her husband at their farm home near Bolton, Ontario.

"I've been baking my own bread for forty years," Mrs. Shaw said when she heard she was the prize baker in the grandmother's class for women of 70 years or over, "and it's nice to know that I can still turn out a winning loaf." "I was careful," she continued, "to have everything just right for my prize bread and I recently gave quite a bit of thought and study to the modern methods of bread-baking. One thing that's certain is that you must have good flour. I have been using Robin Hood Flour for ten years. It's a grand flour; I wouldn't use any other. Robin Hood helped me win the prize. With this flour it is never any trouble to get your bread to rise. It comes up so easily when you set it. I am glad to see that the younger housewives are learning to bake with Robin Hood Flour because it's really easy to bake if you use a good flour like Robin Hood."

Here is the voice of experience speaking. With 40 years of bread-baking to her credit, Mrs. Shaw is still an active woman, who turns out big loaves of snowy white bread for her admiring family and friends to enjoy. And in her long baking experience she has found no flour to equal Robin Hood! Are you still hunting for the perfect flour? Why don't you try Robin Hood—the flour that prizewinners use? Try it for bread, buns, cake or pastry. Your money back plus 10 per cent. if you are not pleased with Robin Hood Flour.

Mother, 2 Girls Held In Theft; 5 Tons Of Loot

BRANTFORD, Nov. 28—(Special).—Five tons of stolen goods, including $1,500 worth of books, drinking fountains, water hose, atlases and other school equipment, were recovered yesterday by police following the arrest of a woman and her two daughters.

Remanded a week on vagrancy charges, when they appeared Wednesday afternoon before Magistrate R. J. McGillen, were Winnifred Miles, 53; Kathleen Miles, 21, and Dorothy Miles, 23.

A house on No. 2 Highway was raided by police officers. They said the stolen goods—loot from a dozen schools in this section of Ontario—were found all over the house. Three constables and three other men worked two hours to load the articles into a big truck. Police said some of the goods took the combined efforts of two men to lift.

For many weeks Ontario Provincial officers led by Constable Karl W. Farrow, have been investigating mysterious school robberies. The officers based their activities on the belief the thieves were members of a well-organized gang.

Hundreds of books are piled in Provincial Police headquarters here. They will have to be sorted before they can be returned to the schools that own them. Brooms and mops, dozens of them, pails and pots and pans are crowding Provincial officers for room in their offices.

H. L. Garner, general manager of the Examiner announced today that the fishing contest would be held annually, and the form for entering the contest will appear in the annual Vacation Edition published in the Spring by the Peterborough Examiner.

The contest was intended to stimulate interest in the Kawartha, Trent, Haliburton and Hastings districts as a fishing centre, and to give worthwhile publicity to the entire area and it achieved its purpose. Next year it is hoped that citizens, resort owners, business men and fishermen will co-operate to assure that the best and biggest fish caught in the waters shown on the back page of the Vacation Edition will be entered.

Judges for the contest were Alex L. Elliott, M.P.P., Charles Kingan, president of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association, Frank Edgar, manager of the Lucky Strike Bait Company and Pete McGillen, Examiner staff reporter.

Handling Of Rifle By Mascot Marvel To Regular Soldiers

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 28. — (ENS).—Jason Field, age four, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Field, Bridge street, and though the youngest member of the family comes by his desire to be in the army naturally, since his father—a veteran of the last war—is now serving with the Veterans Home Guard in Ottawa. Apart from members of 'B' Company there has been no more regular attendant at their drills behind the armories nor a more ardent admirer of the troops than Jason. Such was the frequency of his visits that the boys decided to make him their mascot, took up a collection, and bought him a complete outfit, including the rifle, and if some of the fellows who have just entered the C.M.T.C. for their training period could see this child do everything with a rifle from the slope to the reverse their faces would be red. He takes the salute with the guard, and even lines up with the boys on pay day to draw his allowance which has previously been handed the paymaster by one of the lieutenants in the company who has collected it from the boys.

Moutaches Are Becoming Popular Among Members Of Engineers

Moustaches are popular among the members of the 3rd Field Park Company Royal Canadian Engineers now stationed at Debert, Nova Scotia, and many will be sporting the upper lip tufts when they come home for Christmas.

Pete Vitarelli and Doug Mowry started the fashion and most of the boys have followed along, so that now almost the entire unit have moustaches.

Reports from the boys at camp indicates the food is first class and there is a fair amount of entertainment. There is a motion picture once a week in the big dining hall, and the units holds amateur shows. The Y.M.C.A. has a library in the camp where soldiers may obtain books, writing paper and writing supplies without charge.

Debert is a village about two miles from the camp, and Truro is the nearest large centre. At Truro there is artificial ice and many of the men have sent home for their skates or else purchased new outfits in the city. There is a half hour bus service between the camp and Truro, costing 35 cents return and twice a week the soldiers get leave until twelve o'clock.

Truro is dry, fact is the entire province of Nova Scotia is dry, but there is a wet canteen in the camp where the soldiers may purchase beer, and the usual dry canteens where soft drinks, cigarettes and sundries are on sale.

This unit has been mobilized since August 7th but it was not until a week ago that woollen gloves were issued to the men, and many a soldier had cold hands. There is no snow in the area but the weather is extremely damp and cold.

One soldier reports that several relations of soldiers send the Examiner regularly, and this is appreciated even more than a letter because it gives all the home town news.

The country is wooded with coniferous trees, and the camp is hewn out of a solid forest.

For most of the men washing their own clothes constitutes a problem as this is a chore they never did before, but they are learning fast and inspection requirements demands cleanliness so the soldiers have no alternative but chase the shirts into the wash tubs.

A gift of 160 pairs of home made socks from the Salvation Army at Peterborough was greatly appreciated by the men. The shipment came about a week after the unit arrived in Nova Scotia.

Special train rate from Debert to Peterborough and return is $20 and a great many of the men are planning on being home for Christmas.

Teaching Scientific Temperance In Public Schools Is Urged

Education in public schools was mentioned as perhaps the most important part of the movement concerning Scientific Temperance by Miss Connie Wagar when she spoke Wednesday afternoon at a meeting of the W.C.T.U. in the Y.W.C.A. Green Room. Tracing the history of scientific temperance, Miss Wagar said that it was first brought into prominence at the fourth annual convention of W.C.T.U. sixty years ago, when the first step towards the education of Ontario youth in the temperance question was discussed.

The subject was not added to the school curriculum, however, until 1893. Up until 1895 the development seemed to be forward, said Miss Wagar, but in 1900 instruction in day schools received a set-back when hygiene replaced the study of temperance. In 1921 the Provincial W.C.T.U. began to take a more outstanding interest in what was being done in the schools, resulting in the offer of prizes for Temperance poster design. Three years later the Minister of Education took an interest in the matter, the rules for prize essay and poster competitions were outlined, and for the first time this phase of the work was placed on a permanent basis.

Teachers' training institutions are the channel through which the W.C.T.U. hopes to reach its objects in Temperance education, Miss Wagar remarked in explaining what is being done at the present time. Some ways in which the organization might develop this objective were suggested, and included the distribution of reading and poster material among teachers; personal contact with teachers; and influencing teachers-in-training at the Normal School. Home education along this line was also stressed, as well as the presentation of films in the schools. "Last but not least in encouraging scientific temperance education," Miss Wagar said, "we must stress personal prayer, and suggested that it was during the formative years of boys and girls that the foundation of scientific temperance education should be laid.

Mrs. H. Rehill was in the chair for the meeting, and Mrs. H. Throop was at the piano. The Bible reading, given by Mrs. E. Manning, and prayer led by Mrs. J. H. Rowe, followed the opening hymn. Answers to a questionnaire entitled "War on the Drink Trade" were given by Miss Helen Bannister, recording-secretary, who, in reply to one question, "What can women do to help?" replied that women might write personal letters to Hon. J. G. Gardiner urging restriction of the sale of intoxicating beverages during war-time.

Mr. Leo Copp, Miss Helen Bannister and Mrs. H. Rehill were appointed a committee to mark Temperance papers sent in by Sunday Schools, and a program committee of Mrs. C. Wildman, Mrs. W. Boorman and Mrs. J. A. Spencer will be in charge of arrangements for the Christmas meeting, to be held the second Wednesday in December.

What's new? What did the school board decide last night? Did Mrs. "X" get her divorce? How was the concert? What's going on in Ottawa? London? Berlin? Moscow? Tokyo? Rome? Who was elected president of the Ladies' Auxiliary? What did the raiding bombers do today? Did copper go up or down? Who won the game?

What's new?...in politics, business, foreign affairs...in society, sports, fashions...in music, art and the theatre? We want to know...because we are curious by nature, because we like to be well-informed...and because we realize that each day's events may affect our welfare and our happiness.

Only in newspapers can we satisfy this constant hunger for the news. Only in newspapers can we get a quick, complete and accurate account of happenings at home and abroad.

Broadtail For Fur Beauty

By ALICE ALDEN

THERE'S ONE fur that goes its own sleek aristocratic way year after year, blithely oblivious of the mink and silver fox favored by so many women. This is broadtail, one of the most supple of all furs, and one distinguished by the most exquisite markings. So if you want to make a splurge select a broadtail coat for elegance and beauty. Dein Bacher of the Waldorf has just made up one of the most beautiful coats of the season in broadtail, fashioned on svelte princess lines, the fur handled like material. The slim bodice has tucks to the waist, the sleeves are wide at the wrist. It is collarless but has a gilet of the fur. For augmented opulence, a sable muff is worn with the coat.

Tested Recipes

(Conducted by Mrs. Mary Moore).

QUESTION: I enjoy reading your columns and appreciate the recipes and interesting data necessary to getting best results in making "good things to eat," but I would like to obtain a recipe for an inexpensive cake with currants, raisins, orange peel—no molasses or spices. I reckon it would be a sort of brownish cake. I have lots of recipes for cakes with spices and molasses—I prefer a change. Thanking you very much.—Mrs. S. L.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter.

Plain Fruit Cake (Without Spices).

One cup butter, 2 cups sugar, 3½ cups flour, 1 cup milk, 4 eggs, ½ teaspoon soda, 1 lb. best quality raisins, 1 lb. washed and dried currants, 1 lb. (or ½ lb.) finely sliced orange peel (or mixed orange and citron peel). Steam the fruit for 20 minutes, or gently boil in very little water to soften them, and add hot to batter last thing. Cream the butter and add the sugar creaming. Sift together the flour, soda and sift into butter mixture alternately with the milk, then add the beaten eggs and lastly the steamed or moist fruit. (This presteaming prevents fruit from sinking).

Bake in two paper-lined and buttered loaf pans for about 1½ to 2 hours at 25 to 300 deg. Fahr. Or steam 2 hours and bake 1 hour at 275 deg. Fahr.

We hope you like this recipe and that we may help you again.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 28 (ENS)—Energetic members of the I.O.D.E. decided at their semi monthly meeting to hold their annual Pot Luck supper on December 12th. A new innovation this year will be the invitations to wives of officers to attend the affair which is usually confined to members only. Forty-eight parcels have been sent to the boys with the C.A.S.F. serving overseas and arrangements are under way to send an additional eight to those from this district serving in various parts of Canada.

Saturday of this week has been set aside for the Navy League Tag Day and the entire proceeds will be donated to the league. Following some discussion it was decided to hold the draw on the various articles on which the Chapter has been selling tickets, Friday, December 13th. Six quilts completed during the past week will be included in a parcel which is being sent to air raid victims. Presiding for the meeting was the Regent, Mrs. G. A. Ironside.

A BAFFLING and unpredictable state of affairs, with things in all connections moving drastically at "sixes and sevens," is read from the very lively operations of the subtler planets. There may be great tendency to large, pretentious, and extravagant moves, inflationary, impulses reckless and strenuous, but with subtle or singular elements arising to disconcert and to thwart. By shrewdness, restraint and determination the balance may be turned to lucrative and productive climax.

Those whose birthday it is have a year of fine opportunity for major achievement, with gratifying productive results, if they will make efforts to check impulsive, extravagant objectives.

A child born on this day should have much ability and initiative, with rather inflated and extravagant ideals and ambitions. With waywardness properly directed, it may succeed in a big way.

57th Chapter To Aid Navy League

The 57th Regimental Chapter, I.O.D.E., monthly meeting for November was held Wednesday afternoon in the Officers' Mess at the Armouries with a very large attendance. Three new members were enrolled: Mrs. R. Payne, Mrs. Eric Roberts, Mrs. A. Riddle. The regent, Mrs. R. E. Clarke, presided.

Several letters of thanks and requests were read, including a message from the National President, urging members to contribute freely to the Navy League, "to which we owe a great deal in these trying times." It was decided that the Chapter would donate a sum of money to the League. A donation is also to be given in aid of the English women who have sought refuge in Canada, and now, according to the new defence regulations, are unable to attain money from home. The war convener, Mrs. Chill Turner, gave a splendid report of the work done in providing Christmas boxes for Peterborough boys overseas. The boxes were supplied by the five I.O.D.E. Chapters of the city. Those in the 57th Chapter helping with packing and mailing were Mrs. Chill Turner, Mrs. T. H. Floyd, Mrs. Wm. Langford, Mrs. F. Frape, Mrs. T. Griffin. A letter of thanks has already been received by one of the ladies from Corporal Wilfred Genge, who is on active service in Newfoundland.

Mrs. R. Cottrell, wool convener, reported that during the past month hundreds of knitted articles were sent to the boys overseas, including 105 pairs of socks. This is indicative of the untiring efforts of Chapter ladies. A letter was received from the Provincial President thanking the Chapter for its recent accomplishments. Another letter received from the Provincial Secretary stated that a German bomber which has been captured by the British would be on display throughout the country. This venture is under the auspices of the I.O.D.E. in Canada. Proceeds will be used to continue war work.

A bale to the Chapter's adopted school at Minden, Ont., is in the making, and will be packed and sent early next month by Mrs. C. McWilliams and her committee. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Tea was served after the meeting by Mrs. W. Hughes and her committee.

Proceeds of "Y" Aquatic Show For War Purposes

The aquatic exhibition which took place in the Y.W.C.A. Swimming Pool Wednesday night under the direction of Miss Caroline Littlefield, physical director, was a colorful performance of high dives, stunt swimming, and amusing clowning that afforded fun and thrills for spectators. Proceeds go to the Women's Auxiliary of the Civic War Service Council to be used for war purposes.

The well-known "Y" Silver Pinettes, in blue satin suits with the silver fish crest on the breast, staged the show, assisted by Al Marshall, 200-yard breast stroke champion and record holder of the Y.M.C.A.; Leonard Smith, back-stroke champion; J. Brown and R. Rogow, brought by Gordon Minty of the Y.M.C.A. Skilled in the art of clowning are Christ Hayes, who has done much tower-diving in Miami, Florida, and Stewart Heffernan, who was the only professional diver at the C.N.E. this year. Dressed in crazy suits, the boys kept the fun high with their amusing antics and breath-taking jumps.

A diving exhibition by the girls; a relay race between the Y.M.C.A. boys and four Silver Pinettes, Peggy Lawless, Isobel Young Ruth Dalliday, Ethel Barnes; interesting double dives by Hazel Dunford, Ethel Barnes, Lorraine Bradley, Iris Forbes, Ruth Dalliday and Isobel Young; a Paul Revere; a hunter's dive, and a long-plunge between the boys and girls, with the latter as victors, were included in a sparkling performance of water stunts. An interesting battle of the sea took place when the Graf Spee was scuttled by a submarine. The program also featured pyramid, ladder, windmill, planking, shadow swimming, double pin-wheel, a loop spiral down the pool, and mixed races that were skilfully executed and graceful to watch.

Miss Littlefield announced a big swim exhibition to be held in December, when there will be a mixed Junior and Senior competition for trophies. Silver Pinettes taking part in last night's aquatic exhibition were Mrs. P. Forbes, Mrs. Dunford, Miss Queenie Hope, Mrs. J. Spencely, Miss Ruth Dalliday, Miss Shirley Zacks, Miss Isobel Young, Miss Peggy Lawless, Miss Ethel Barnes, Miss Iris Forbes, Miss Lorraine Bradley.

Home and School Association News

PRINCE OF WALES SCHOOL.

Parents and friends of Prince of Wales scholars were given an opportunity of attending open house at the school on Wednesday afternoon, and the large number of parents who took advantage of the invitation proved their eagerness to become better acquainted with the teachers, and see the school in action. Welcomed in the hall by the principal, Mr. G. S. Mattice, and by Mrs. S. S. Harrison, president of the Home and School Association, visitors were ushered to the various class rooms by girls of the entrance classes.

The usual activities of the students were carried on for a period of half an hour, then school was dismissed and teachers and parents held informal discussions.

Mrs. Gordon Webb, social convener of the Association, was in charge of tea arrangements. An attractive tea table in the upper hall was centred by a silver basket of bronze and yellow chrysanthemums. Tea was poured by Mrs. P. Black, a former president of the Home and School Association. Girls from the Household Science classes creditably displayed the splendid training they are receiving under the supervision of Miss A. Jamieson by the pleasant manner with which they served their guests.

A pleasant feeling of friendly cooperation between the parents and teachers prevailed throughout the afternoon, and it was felt that a great deal of benefit to the children would be derived from the better understanding resulting from meetings of this kind.

Fish Dishes Served For Family

By MARY MOORE

Being the guilty party this time I am impelled to put myself on record so that I will serve more fish oftener. You see I like fish very much, —but my family like many others I have heard of prefer steak and chicken.

....and since it is such music to any mother's ears to hear praise of the dinner she has served, I serve them their precious steak and chicken, and am very apt to overlook the fish meals that are such excellent nourishment—high in mineral content—so high that we would be hard put to get an adequate supply of such minerals as iodine from any other source.

It is the variety that fish supplies that makes them a "must"—especially in the winter months when fresh fruits and local fresh vegetables begin to wane.

I hope you realize by now that I am talking about deep sea food. Naturally you know the best way to cook fresh water fish—not more than one hour after it is caught—over a camp fire in plenty of butter. Deep sea fish, while just as delicious, can stand some embellising and extending.

Only recently my curiosity was piqued enough to find out what the fuss over Fillets of Sole Marguery was all about—so I prepared the famous dish—it is a find for me—I hope you will try this recipe:

Fillets of Sole Marguery

Have your fish dealer fillet two soles for you and include the bones and other trimmings in the parcel. Wipe the fillets with a dry cloth and place in buttered dripping pan, sprinkle with salt and paprika and pour over them one-third cup of white cooking wine. Cover with buttered paper and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 15 minutes. In the meantime boil the fish trimmings in 2½ cups water until the stock is reduced to 1 cup. Melt 3 tablespoons butter, add 3 tablespoons flour and stir until well blended, then pour on gradually the fish stock. Stir until boiling, then add ¼ cup of the wine in which fish was baked and season with salt and pepper. Arrange fillets on hot serving platter, strain over the sauce, garnish with slices of lemon and sprigs of watercress or parsley. (When Rector created this dish he put some little neck clams and some lobster shells in the stock for the sauce—but I have tried to make this easily done for the average Canadian household). The wine in the sauce takes the place of lemon in many fish sauces.

Boiled Salmon Supreme.

Order a two or three-pound piece of salmon from the centre cut. Wrap it in cheesecloth to prevent breakage. Have a large pot of water boiling.—plunge the fish quickly and carefully into the boiling water, which has been salted. Cover and reduce heat to let it boil gently. When tender (a 3-lb. piece requires about 35 minutes), carefully remove from water and take off cloth, and try to remove skin in one piece. Place on hot platter and cover with the following sauce:

Velvet Egg Sauce (to be served with Fish):

One-third cup butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1½ cup fish stock (in which salmon was cooked), ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, yolk 1 egg, yolk of 1 hard cooked egg. Melt butter, add flour, salt and pepper, then stir in fish stock until thick, then add lemon juice and hard-cooked egg yolk which has been mashed to a paste or forced through strainer. Add beaten yolk last and serve immediately.

One pint of oysters does not go very far even when you stew them and I think the following recipe will help those cooks who want to serve oysters to their family but find a whole quart stretches the budget too much.

Jack's Oyster Ragout

Parboil ½ lb. honeycomb tripe in cut in 1-inch squares. Prepare 1 cup onions, cut in eights and boiled until tender. Melt 3 tablespoons butter and add 4 tablespoons flour, and pour on gradually while stirring constantly 1½ cups thin cream or top milk. Bring this to boiling point, add the tripe, onions (which have been boiled until tender and well drained) and 1 pint of oysters and the liquor on them. Heat through in top of double boiler. When ready to serve add the yolks of 2 eggs well beaten, about 1½ to 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon white pepper and some paprika. Serve hot in patty shells or on hot toast. A good hearty dish for oyster lovers.

If you know your guests well and that they like fish cocktails the following introduction to your dinner party is quite a sensation:

Using equal portions in each cocktail glass of raw oysters, canned shrimps and flaked lobster—all ice cold—pour over 2 or 3 tablespoons of the following cocktail sauce: Two tablespoons tomato catsup, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ½ tablespoon prepared horseradish, 12 drops Tabasco sauce, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon black pepper, 1 teaspoon grated celery, 1 teaspoon mixed finely chopped red and green pepper. Mix well together, chill for at least four hours,—pour over fish in glasses just before announcing dinner. Garnish with a wee sprig of parsley.

Shrimp Curry

Saute 1 small minced onion in 2 tablespoons butter until the onion is soft but not brown. Stir in 1 tablespoon fresh curry powder, 1 tablespoon flour, and 1 cup liquid—if canned shrimps are used use the stock drained from them and make it up to 1 cup with water. Put in top of double boiler and add 1½ cups shrimps and 2 tablespoons lemon juice and let heat through. In the meantime prepare fluffy boiled rice. Drain the rice well and serve it on hot plates—on each bed of rice place a serving of curried shrimps and garnish with thin slice of tomato or red pepper and parsley or cress.

Audrey's Clam Chowder

Our household is famous for this dish if for nothing else. Suate ½ cup chopped back bacon in just enough butter to keep from sticking. Add ½ Spanish onion chopped finely and saute 4 minutes, then add 5 medium potatoes in ½-inch cubes and 2 cups water and boil covered until potatoes are tender. Then add 1 can of coarsely chopped canned Canadian clams and their broth and 4 cups whole milk, and salt and pepper to taste. Let barely simmer covered to heat the milk and clams through. Two tins of clams and broth and 3 cups of milk may be used in place of 1 can and 4 cups milk.

Do keep fish dishes on your mind—use it at lease once per week, in this way you insure the nourishment of your growing family.

Full Skirted For Evening

By ALICE ALDEN

DESPITE ALL the talk about the popularity of the pencil slim sheath silhouette for evening, we notice that some of the smartest girls and nicest dresses favor the full skirt. The snug bodice with little puffed sleeves and a deep square of curved neckline, set off by a gracefully full skirt makes up a fashion formula that few girls want to resist. Priscilla Lane has chosen one for the holiday season. It is a dress that has plenty of sartorial interest. The fabric is an extremely heavy silk bengaline with a pronounced rib. The color is a beautiful and rich dark brown, this deep shade offset by the set-in broad waistband of flame red velvet. With it is worn a necklace of gold and topaze.

DOROTHY DIX

The Husband Every Woman Expects Would Be Paragon. Wife Thinks Her Man's Virtues Should Be Hitched to the Stars, and Great Is Her Disappointment When He Falls.

"I am miserably conscious," writes a man, "that I do not come up to my wife's ideal as a husband, and there are times when I catch her gazing at me with a I-wonder-what-made-me-do-it look in her eyes. All the other married men that I know seem to be in the same box that I am and fail to give entire satisfaction to their better halves. Yet, as such domestic animals go, we are pretty good run-of-the-mill husbands. We are moral and faithful, domestic and good providers, and we strive to please, but as we appear to fall down somewhere on the job we would like to know what's the matter with us and what sort of husbands women really want?"

Well, what's the matter is that women are human beings, and no human being ever got exactly what he or she wanted, even in a wife or husband, and the reason that no husband ever comes up to his wife's expectations is because he would have to be superhuman to do so. Every woman would like her husband:

To be ice to all the balance of the world, but fire to her.

Strong and masterful, but mush in her hands.

A ruler among men, but who meekly submits to her henpecking.

Handsome, but not such a good-looker as to present an invidious contrast to herself and cause people to say: "What on earth do you suppose made him marry that dowdy little woman?"

Charming to other women, but never charmed by them, and to tell her how bored he was with his dinner partner and how the flapper he danced with stepped on his feet.

Always ready to step out of an evening if she feels like having a fling among the bright lights, no matter what a hard day he has had.

Never to fail to punch the home timeclock on the dot. Never keeps dinner waiting. Never brings home unexpected company. Never, never stays downtown to play a little poker with the boys.

Ask permission to go to the corner drug store to buy a package of cigarettes.

Let her pick out his clothes and regulate his diet.

Eat what is set before him without criticism or complaint and make no ribald comments upon being fed out of paper bags and tin cans.

Never dream of such a thing as having any authority in the house which he supports. Let her push him around into any old place that she or the children are not using.

Welcome her family with open arms and spend money entertaining them, but don't presume to inflict his folks on her.

Call her temper nerves and soothe and pet her out of a tantrum.

Understand that a delicate, nervous, temperamental creature, such as she is, can't be expected to get up and get breakfast, or keep a clean house, or do anything to make a mere husband comfortable.

Be a good father. Work himself to death to provide his children with fine clothes, expensive schools, automobiles and trips, but take no part in their upbringing or forming their characters. Leave that absolutely to her.

Be a great lover. Keep on kissing her whether she stays kissable or not. Never cease telling her how beautiful and wonderful she is.

Never take anything she does for granted. Ballyhoo everything she does as a marvellous achievement.

Make plenty of money, but never let business interfere with his taking her to afternoon teas and spending the Winter in Florida and the Summer in the Mountains.

Never grumble about bills.

Never expect any co-operation from her, or any appreciation, or for her to do anything towards making their marriage a success.

That is about the kind of a husband that every woman would like to have, and it is no wonder she doesn't get him. He doesn't exist.

Urges Women To Discourage Feeling of Hate

Women were urged to give of their utmost to war activities, while at the same time discouraging any feeling of bitterness and hatred which might be hard to combat once the war is over, when Mrs. W. R. Morris, speaking briefly at the Salvation Army Christmas sale of work Wednesday afternoon, declared the bazaar officially open. Mrs. Mendell Braund read passages of scripture, and prayer was led by Mrs. J. Craig. Afternoon tea and supper were served, and in the evening music was played by the Temple Band.

The scarlet, green and tinsel which each year heralds the approach of the Christmas season were used effectively to deck the hall and tables with their attractive stock, and the cosy little tea room soon became the rendezvous of shoppers who had completed purchases of holiday gifts or delicious home-cooking.

Mrs. H. E. Hedge was again general convener of the affairs, and in charge of the tea room were Mrs. T. Rose, Mrs. G. Thomas, Mrs. A. Scott Mrs. W. Jones, Mrs. W. Butcher, Mrs. A. Wilson, Mrs. R. Routley was convener of the novelty table, assisted by Mrs. J. James; home-cooking was convened by Mrs. J. Richardson, assisted by Mrs. F. Grey; prize package stall, Mrs. S. Richardson; grocery stall, Miss Doreen Braund, Miss Betty Craig; apron stall, Mrs. Ronald Routley, Mrs. S. Winterbottom; fancy-work stall Mrs. M. Shadgett, Mrs. G. Routley; white elephant table, Mrs. J. Grieves; candy and ice-cream, Mrs. Lester Boorman, Mrs. Arthur Smith.

I.O.D.E. Gift Is Acknowledged

Another sum has been added to the amount sent to Lord Beaverbrook by the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire. This is for $13,000, which, added to the gift of $50,000 sent in October, makes a contribution from the Order of $63,000 for aircraft since the bomber which cost $100,000, was forwarded in September. A cablegram received from Lord Beaverbrook reads:

"I learn with gratitude of this further magnificent gift which you send us for aircraft. It is a renewed avowal of loyalty and a demonstration of faith that warms our hearts. Will you please convey to all the generous donors my deepest thanks, in sending which I know I speak for all our people. The generosity and resolution of the race in every part of the Empire carries with it an assurance of glorious victory which nothing can shake."

Defence Garbage Cans Cost $3.10

OTTAWA, Nov. 28—(CP). — The Defence Department paid from $3.10 to $3.95 each for 26,000 garbage cans ordered in September, 1939, Associate Defence Minister Power stated yesterday.

The question of price had been raised by Conservative House Leader Hanson. Mr. Hanson some days ago asked for reconsideration by the Defence Department of its decision not to disclose the price of the cans. At that time he said he understood some 900 of them were still in a storehouse in Saint John, N.B., although the Department reported them in use.

Mr. Power said there had been some misunderstanding in the matter. As to when the cans were put in use, Mr. Power said "a great question of interpretation arises." As far as the ordnance branch was concerned, the cans were in use when they were delivered to depot stores. They did not check up to find out when the cans actually went into use by the units.

Munitions Minister Howe said his Resides Quite Near Trafalgar Square

MOUNT CLEMENS, Nov. 28. — Mrs. Samuel Dunk, 10 Hubbard avenue, recently received a long-awaited letter from her sister, Mrs. Robert Ayers, in London, giving news of her family, who live in the heart of the northwest section of the British capital, just two blocks from Trafalgar Square, favorite objective of German bombs in the war.

Mrs. Dunk is a former resident of Peterborough and Lakefield, Ontario and her husband went overseas in the First Great War with the 93rd Battalion.

Excerpts from the letter follow: "My Dear: I expect you feel worried about us all here. But don't. We are able to take all that is coming to us. We would rather be wiped out than give in. I know you have your radio and that keeps you informed of all the news. I am very pleased you were out of it all as I knew you felt bad in the last war, and as you can guess this is just H——. Mum is very calm considering, and we mostly stay in our own homes to avoid the discomforts. If we survive this war I will write you a full account but, you know, now we can say very little.

"I must tell you the British have wonderful pluck, and are marvelous the way they carry on. In spite of the bombs the shops are all open and do trade.

To Be Asked to Dances Perfect Steps at Home

Don't Sit Out Popular Rumba

"A rumba! I'm afraid I can't dance that!"

The girl who doesn't go to dances much may think it's just no use to learn smart steps like the captivating rumba. But that's the way to be asked out more.

Teach yourself popular steps from diagrams. Practise at home. Then at your next party you'll make an impression. When a big evening is being planned men will remember your smooth, up-to-date dancing. Your telephone will be ringing.

You can so easily learn popular steps with diagrams such as we show for the Rumba Square. Try it, remembering to take short steps, to use your heels.

And of course you'll want to know the Conga, as well as the latest steps in waltz or fox-trot.

Our 32-page booklet gives footprint diagrams, easy directions for basic steps and new variations of the waltz, fox-trot, Westchester, rumba, Samba, Conga, tango, Peabody, shag and Lindy Hop. Has pointers on posture, leading and following.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO DO THE NEWEST DANCE STEPS AND VARIATIONS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THINK THOROUGHLY

HALF-BAKED thinking is frequently better than no thinking at all. If a player will merely do what seems the natural thing, the first thing that comes to his mind, he may blunder through. But if he pauses just a moment to reflect, he may get a bright idea, contrary to what is usual. He should not follow such a hunch, however, without first weighing it a bit as against the alternative course of action, or he may pay heavily for his shallow smartness.

♠ 9 6 3 2 ♥ A 7 4 ♦ 9 7 4 2 ♣ 9 3	N. W. E. S.	♠ K 7 4 ♥ J 5 3 ♦ A K J 10 6 ♣ J 10

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♦	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl

That crazy bidding is a fair sample of what some wild players do in tournaments when they think they need a few clear top scores to pull up a bad record they have made. North's diamond call was, of course, to prevent a lead of that suit, and it succeeded because West had so many he reckoned East's double was based on strength elsewhere. He led the spade 2, the A overtaking the K.

South, counting only eight immediate tricks, expected everybody at other tables to make 4-Clubs on the deal, so that he couldn't afford to get set. He struck for an early heart trick, hoping the A would be held up, but West came in with it and properly returned his diamond 2. East took it with the K, then thought a bit. With no side entries, he decided he had better set up his suit at once, so led the diamond J. As a consequence, the declarer got the rest of the tricks, making 5-No Trumps for a huge top score.

If East had thought a moment longer, he would have realized the diamond 2 was West's fourth-best, leaving the declarer only two diamonds. The play of his A then would have enabled his side to set the contract two tricks, giving the declarer a bottom score and his own pair the East-West top.

Poland Lives In Souls Of Her Women

By GLADYS ARNOLD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 28. — (CP). — One of the woman defenders of Warsaw, Mme. Sophia Arciszewska, now lives in a little street in Ottawa, organizing Polish women in Canada to aid refugees in England.

In her simply-furnished living-room are two small oil paintings on wood—perhaps the work of some primitive artist of the 13th century. Above the fireplace are three fragments of Greek sculpture, a tiny head of Minerva, a fine bas-relief impressed on a bit of stone more than 2,000 years ago, a bit of a perfectly sculptured torso.

These are the bits of beauty this Polish woman artist, interior decorator, and patroness of the arts in her beloved Warsaw in its golden days, carried with her out of Europe.

She is in Canada with her husband, Col. Arciszewski who carried a call to arms to all Polish citizens in North America. They escaped from Poland by going through Hungary, Yugoslavia, Italy, France, and from France went with Polish troops to England during the evacuation.

Mme. Arciszewska explained that in Polish the woman's name ends in "ska," the man's in "ski." A slim little woman, her dark hair parted smoothly in the middle and knitted at the back, she embodies that intense faith in the future of her country which drew praise from Agriculture Minister Gardiner. Just returned from the United Kingdom, Mr. Gardiner told The Canadian Press: "Canadian soldiers have told me their admiration for the Polish aviators knows no bounds. Nothing stops them—they have such marvellous confidence in the future and victory."

Recalls the Siege.

Mme. Arciszewska left Warsaw in April of this year. She knew and experienced all the horrors of Nazi siege. "Four times we evacuated the same patients from burning hospitals," she said. "We would just move them to another hospital when incendiary bombs would be dropped on the new one."

After the first few days of siege Warsaw's anti-aircraft and fighter plane defence had been taken care of by the enemy. There was no defence against Nazi bombing. "We did not give up until we had been days without electricity and gas and no water or food," she said.

Mme. Arciszewska told how soldiers were offered poisoned cigarettes and candies by German women disguised as Poles. She read a notation in a small notebook, written September 20, 1939:

"A continuous road of exploding bombs deafens morning prayers. I said to them (hospital patients), 'Good morning, boys, I have come for inspection. D'd you sleep well?'

"'Sister, I dreamed about Poland—Poland in the month of May—its flower blossoms—all wrapped in delicate scent,' said one, his eyes sparking with temperature.

"I went down. There was suddenly an awful noise, a terrible blow shook the whole building and broke all windows. I ran upstairs. A bombshell had hit the window of the second floor. On the staircase I found five nurses carrying out five killed soldiers. Among them I recognized the one who last night dreamed about Poland in the month of May."

Mme. Arciszewska, her face strained and tight, described later how German soldiers made people dig up the graves in all the boulevards along the streets where people had been hurriedly buried.

"They thought they were hidden munitions and arms," she said. "They were only the broken bodies of our children. I see the little Scouts yet — mown down because they wore a uniform which is international and stands for Christian principles."

Mme. Arciszewska's organization is known as the Committete for Polish Refugees. In addition to organizing Polish women in Canada to aid refugees in England, its aim is to build up a spiritual bond between Poles and British Allies.

Mme. Marie Frankowska, now in Montreal, has just been made treasurer. She is the wife of the Polish naval hero who defended Gdynia, the Polish port, for many days after the war ceased. He died recently in a German concentration camp, Mme. Arciszewska said.

Reeve Shearer Protests Squatter Cases

Reeve Wallace Shearer of Harvey Township reported several facts to the County Council last week regarding the squatters' settlement on Federal Government property west of Burleigh Falls. What he said was almost an exact repetition of a statement made a year or so ago about the same place, and he amplified it with the information that nothing had been done by the Department of Transport although they had promised to send an inspector to see what should be done.

Mr. Shearer said that the boy, Gerald Johnston, was recently admitted again to Nicholls Hospital. He had a temperature of 104 when he was brought to the hospital, and out of compassion for him the superintendent had a bed set up for him in a corridor.

"He should be in a hospital for incurable cases," Reeve Shearer told the Council, and the fact that the county has been contributing to an institution of that kind brought the suggestion that some inquiry should be made to find out whether they would take him at the county's request.

Deputy-Reeve McIlmoyle of Smith moved, seconded by Reeve Norman Lean of Durleigh-Anstruther, that Warden McColl and Reeve Shearer be authorized to write to Senator Fallis and Senator Duffus and to Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., urging the Department of Transport to take some action for the improvement of conditions at the Falls community.

It was briefly restated that the land on which about a dozen families are living is owned by the Dominion Government, and that they have permitted those people to remain there. It was said that they have no taxes to pay, contributing nothing to Harvey, but the township is liable for their care as medical patients of a hospital when they become ill.

"The Council sent a deputation to Ottawa to see the Department about those people, and we were promised that an inspector would be sent here to look over the place, but so far no one has shown up. They are living there just as they were, and something should be done about it. People of Harvey Township do not feel that they should be financially responsible for them."

It was also said in a discussion of this problem that there is no school accommodation for the children of the community, and that is a social problem which the Government should recognize. Another statement was to the effect that some of the people there formerly lived at the Indian Reserve, accepted some bulk sum when they left it, no longer receive any annuity from the Government, and to repeat the Council's opinion "something should be done about it instead of leaving the settlement as a charge against the township in any emergencies."

A Pimple Covered Face Kills Many a Romance

The lives of many young people are made miserable by the breaking out of pimples, and you probably know of cases where a promising romance has been spoiled by those red, white, festering and pus filled sores on the face.

The trouble is not so much physical pain, but the mental suffering caused by the embarrassing disfigurement which very often makes the sufferer ashamed to go out in company.

The quickest way to get rid of pimples is to improve the general health by a thorough cleansing of the blood.

Burdock Blood Bitters helps to cleanse the blood and with the blood cleansed the complexion should clear up.

Western Port Liverpool Gets Battered

Merseyside Casualties Reported High; AA's Do Great Work

LONDON, Nov. 29—(CP).—Germany's raiders singled out Liverpool, one of Britain's great cities and her chief western port, for their heaviest hits in last night's trading of air blows.

Britain's ports, through which the vital commerce of this island kingdom must flow, apparently have become the focus of Nazi raids.

By picking out Liverpool, shipping centre for the industrial Midlands, the Germans added another to the lengthening list of British ports recently bombed—among them Bristol, Plymouth and Southampton.

Besides "the main wave of the attack" on Merseyside, a joint communique of the Air and Home Security Ministries disclosed that German bombs fell on "a large number of isolated points in the southern part of England."

But nowhere outside of the Merseyside and northwest, it said, were casualties or damages heavy and even there "the numbers of killed or injured are not as great as might have been expected."

Although damage was done to many buildings and some "serious" fires were caused, reports said the raiders were met with such violent anti-aircraft fire they literally were blasted away from their targets and were unable to smash their main objectives.

The Press Association said the damage to Liverpool was not heavy and that fires set by incendiary bombs were brought quickly under control.

Hit Sub Lair

London, Nov. 29 (AP)

BRITISH bombers struck last night at German plants producing the submarines which prey on Britain's shipping, the air ministry disclosed today.

The submarine shipbuilding yard at Stettin, on the Baltic Sea, and a factory at Mannheim which turns out U-boat engines were chief targets of the Royal Air Force's thrusts into Germany.

The ministry's news service said the bombers made a round trip of 1,300 miles in the raid on Stettin and on a synthetic oil plant at Polita.

Duesseldorf, industrial city in western Germany, was another point concentrated on by the R.A.F.

A GROUP of Italian prisoners landed here today under military escort from St. John's, Nfld., bound for an internment camp in eastern Canada. The number of Italians was not revealed.

German and Italian prisoners held in Newfoundland were said to be "getting along badly" together because of taunts by the Nazis over Greek successes in Albania. It was decided to separate the Italians and Germans to avoid trouble.

U.S. Traffic Toll Expected Up 2,000 In '40

CHICAGO, Nov. 29 (AP)—The National Safety Council predicted today that the 1940 United States traffic toll would exceed last year's, possibly by as much as 2,000.

Heading into the dangerous Christmas season, the United States has a 10-months' toll of 27,360 deaths, compared with 25,750 in the same period of 1939, the council said.

In October occurred 3,560 deaths, four per cent more than 3,420 in the previous October, the report added.

The December traffic toll, usually the year's worst, zooms upward for three reasons, the council said: (1) bad weather and slippery roads; (2) darkness during evening rush hour traffic swollen by Christmas shoppers; and (3) more drinking during the holiday season, plus hurry, confusion and excitement.

July, with a three per cent decrease, was the only month of the past 13 that has shown a reduction from the same month a year previously.

More Destroyers For Alaska Road?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—(AP).—The possibility of Canada granting the United States a "corridor" for a highway to Alaska, over which troops and supplies could be moved in an emergency, was mentioned today in speculation on the terms that might be involved should any additional American warships be transferred to Britain.

There was no confirmation in official quarters that the release of additional United States naval vessels was under consideration, or that a grant from Canada for the proposed defence highway might figure in such a transaction.

Talk of such a development was heard, however, in the discussion

Rumania's Terror Rule Sees Legation Resign In London

LONDON, Nov. 29 (CP)—Majority of the Rumanian legation staff in London has resigned in protest against the reign of terror being carried on by the Iron Guard in their country and a formal statement is expected from the legation later.

The resignations were written as reports reached authoritative quarters here confirming press stories of Iron Guard violence in which more than 64 persons have been killed.

One informed source commented: "Affairs in Rumania are just bloody and it seems the government is doing nothing to stop the violence."

The violence was described as particularly severe in Bucharest where the Antonescu government is either unable or unwilling to do anything to keep the Iron Guard extremists from avenging the slaying two years ago of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, founder of the Iron Guards.

It was recalled that Antonescu protested the government's inability to handle the green-shirted extremists in September when Capt. John Edward Treacy, Canadian engineer, his wife and three British oil company officials were arrested by Iron Guards and roughly handled. Capt. Treacy and his wife were released recently.

Meanwhile, the press reported without official confirmation that Queen Helen had returned to exile and that young King Michael may follow.

Iron Guard killings were reported continuing and there was some speculation here whether a new government might be established to stamp out the violence.

Fear Anniversary

BUCHAREST, Nov. 29.—(AP)—With German and Rumanian military forces ready to help quell Iron Guard terrorism, Rumania faced posible danger today of new incitement for the Green Shirt extremists who have taken more than 64 lives in the past three days.

Tomorrow will be the second anniversary of the slaying of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, founder of the Iron Guard and the "martyr" whose death its blood purge was to avenge.

Before dawn today thousands of Rumanians—men, women and children—waited in line for a chance to file past the green-draped coffins of Codreanu and the 13 lieutenants killed with him in Jilava prison Nov. 30, 1938, during the reign of King Carol.

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)

THE United States treasury disclosed today that the British government spent $315,749,000 of its American capital assets to buy war supplies here during the first year of the war, and at the end still had at least $385,719,000 of cash on deposit in American banks.

These cash resources were exclusive of the gold held for British account. More than $4,000,000,000 worth was shipped to the United States from various parts of the empire in the first year of the conflict. The great bulk of this was British owned.

2 German Ships Dash Again From Tampico

TAMPICO, Mexico, Nov. 29 (AP)—Two German merchant ships, apparently bent on an attempt to run the British blockade, steamed out to sea today.

The 5,033-ton Idarwald entered the open sea, sailing eastward, at 8:19 a.m., while the 6,031-ton Rhein followed several miles in her wake. They had found haven here since early in the war.

Both ships were reported carrying limited cargoes of fuel and provisions.

These ships were among four which tried unsuccessfully to dash to sea Nov. 15, turning back when they sighted warships offshore which they believed to be British. Later it developed that United destroyers had been on neutrality patrol in those waters.

The crew of one of the ships in the earlier dash, the 4,137-ton

Jail Sentence Of 4 Months Is Tacked On

Magistrate Finds Case Smacks Of Nazi Fifth Column Tactics

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 29—(CP).—Convicted today on two charges each under Defence of Canada regulations, Clarence Leeson and his wife, Agnes, were each fined $200 and sentenced to four months in jail, with additional terms of three months if the fines aren't paid. Trial of the couple was held about a month ago, and judgment was given by County Magistrate C. W. Hawkshaw.

The parents were arrested after two of their children refused to take part in patriotic exercises in suburban Merwin Heights school. They were charged with advocating the principles of Jehovah's Witnesses, an illegal organization, and with making statements intended or likely to cause disaffection to His Majesty.

It was the heaviest sentence imposed in district court since the sect was ruled illegal. Previously, three young women received terms of three months for continuing to be members of the sect.

There had been several adjournments in the case, and application of A. B. Siskind for further delay was opposed by Crown Attorney Norman Newton. Mr. Siskind represented defence counsel J. L. Cohen, K.C., of Toronto, who again was unable to appear today.

"Every courtesy has been extended Mr. Cohen," declared the Crown.

6 Blackshirt Destroyers Flee Bombers; 10 Planes Bagged

ATHENS, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Fierce bombing of Italy's sea gateways into Albania and a rout of six Italian destroyers bombarding the British-defended Greek island of Corfu were announced today by the Royal Air Force.

"Bomber aircraft carried out raids on Santi Quaranta (Porto Edda) where destroyers bombarding the island of Corfu fled on approach of our formations," said a communique apparently covering action yesterday and last night.

Shipping at Porto Edda was attacked and "bombs were seen to explode on wharves," said the R.A.F. communique. At Durazzo, another Albanian port, and Elbasani, an inland base, "all the bombs fell in the target area but the results were not observed due to weather conditions."

Two of the British planes "failed to return to their bases."

One was a fighter lost in collision while in combat with an Italian plane which also crashed in flames. The British pilots bailed out but had not been found.

10 Planes Downed

Ten Italian planes in all were downed in the last two days, including seven out of 20 fighters surprised by a R.A.F. fighter formation over Southwestern Albania yesterday.

"Our aircraft at once attacked and in less than a minute seven enemy aircraft were shot down," the communique said.

Greek information from the front suggested that the defeat of an Italian "Regiment of Death"—picked Fascists sworn to die rather than retreat — may have been greater than at first reported and that the Italians may be in full flight up the coast.

This front, in the region of Argirocastro, Italy's last remaining advanced base which the Greeks have been threatening, admittedly was the centre of the "most serious resistance" and it was acknowledged that the Italians still were counter-attacking at some points.

There was no indication of the fate of Argirocastro or other towns in the path of the Greek advance.

On the centre and north sectors, Greek forces were said to be consolidating their gains to avoid the danger of stretching their lines too thin in mountains easily snow-locked.

Flee Brief Channel Skirmish For Shelter Of Guns In French Port Of Brest

One British Warship Reported Damaged With Hits Scored By Britons Among Light Nazi Craft Out Scouting

LONDON, Nov. 29—(CP).—A British warship was damaged and "damage was inflicted upon the enemy" in a clash between light forces in the English Channel early today, the Admiralty announced.

The Admiralty communique said the "enemy" units retired at high speed towards Brest, German-held port in France, when pursued by British naval forces.

The communique said:

"In the early hours of this morning contact was made in the English Channel between our light forces and those of the enemy.

"The enemy units retired at high speed towards Brest, pursued by our forces. It is known that one of our units sustained damage.

"A report has been received that damage was inflicted upon the enemy, but the extent of this is not yet known with sufficient certainty to enable an announcement to be made.

"Further details will be made known as soon as possible."

As Berlin Tells It

BERLIN, Nov. 29 (AP)—German sources claimed today their destroyers torpedoed two British destroyers and sank four other vessels in an attack close to the English coast at the western end of the English Channel, returning unscathed to their bases after a battle with British destroyers.

(There was no confirmation from London.)

The sunken vessels, the German's claimed included one of 9,000 tons, another of 3,000 tons and two smaller craft.

The action was said to have occurred yesterday.

Raid On Dodecanese

LONDON, Nov. 29 (CP)—Attacks by British naval planes on the Dodecanese Island of Lero and on the Libyan port of Tripoli were reported today by the Admiralty.

A communique said fires were started in the waterfront area of Port Laki, on Lero, and a ship was hit.

Another ship was hit at Tripoli, it reported, and fires started there were visible from 60 miles away.

First Hand Look Carries Ralston To U.K.

LONDON, Nov. 29 (CP Cable) — Hon. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Minister of National Defence, has arrived in London for an extended visit, determined to see the battle of Britain at close range and consult with officials of the British armed services and the government.

"Canada is resolved to contribute not only all her strength but her most effective strength, and the Canadian government wants, by consultation and collaboration with United Kingdom government, to ensure that Canada's participation represents the best teamwork we can devise," Col. Ralston said.

He added that Canadians have no illusions about the grimness of the days and years ahead.

Col. Ralston was accompanied by Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, chief of the Canadian general staff, and Col. A. A. Magee, senior executive assistant to the minister.

(The party's safe arrival in London was announced last night.)

Col. Ralston plans to discuss with Hon. Vincent Massey, the Canadian High Commissioner, Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian forces in Britain, Maj.-Gen. P. J. Montague, senior officer Canadian military headquarters in London, and the Canadian divisional commanders and their staffs, matters affecting the administration, training and employment of the Canadian troops and their co-operation with those from other parts of the commonwealth.

British officials will be consulted regarding war plans for the present and the future and Canadian formations on the British front line will be visited.

"Our visit will help in preparation for the tasks in front of us," Col. Ralston said. "We welcome the opportunity of mingling on this battlefront not only with the men of the services but with the civilian fighters—the men and women and boys and girls of Britain.

"They have already given the world a demonstration of fortitude and staying power which is unbeatable."

5 AXIS PLANES DOWN

LONDON — (CP). — Five Axis planes were shot down over Britain today, while the Royal Air Force lost two fighter planes, the Air Ministry announced.

Corvettes Beat The Freeze-up

OTTAWA, Nov. 29 (CP)—A number of sturdy Corvettes, anti-submarine warships built in Canadian shipyards, have reached eastern Canada ports well ahead of the freeze-up, D. B. Carswell, director-general of shipbuilding in the Dominion, told The Canadian Press today.

"Canadian shipyards are awaiting the final word to begin the construction of 18 cargo ships for Great Britain," said the director-general, who works in the Munitions and Supply Department.

"They will be 9,500-ton ships and 12 will be built in eastern tidewater ports and six on the Pacific coast. They should be ready for delivery next October."

Mr. Carswell, a veteran of the shipbuilding industry who has stepped out and established new production records himself when occasion demanded, said he was pleased with present progress.

"Five Corvettes and one Minesweeper were launched between Nov. 16 and Nov. 23 in Canada," he said. "That's a pretty good showing for one week."

Ready for Spring

These ships will be fitted with engines and be ready to take over active service when the Spring breakup comes.

Mr. Carswell said the building of cargo ships would not interfere with the steady flow of Corvettes, 54 of which have been ordered by the British Government and 10 by the Canadian Government. Quebec and Montreal shipyards were putting in additional ways to look after the

'Amazons' Help Slaughter 3,000

By J. WES. GALLAGHER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

SALONIKA, GREECE, Nov. 29.—(AP).—An "Amazon Company" of Macedonian peasant women who helped the Greek army defeat 3,000 Italian troops by rolling rocks down upon them from the peaks of the Pindus Mountains was described today in a Greek dispatch from the Epirus front.

The correspondent quoted one middle-aged farm woman, Helen Codjamani, who was wounded in the fighting, as telling him:

"A sergeant who passed through our village wanted to know the way to the chapel of St. George. We told him and when he started off about 100 women took the trail after him. When we neard the chapel, we saw Greek soldiers. When the officer saw us he got very angry and ordered us to go back, but we started shouting, "We shall not go back. We want to fight with you."

"Since they wouldn't give us guns, we got hold of an ammunition magazine and trench mortars, and we followed the soldiers to the high peaks of the mountains.

"During the night other women joined us and we took our places on the plateau of a mountain called Pournara.

"Next morning at 10 o'clock, Italians appeared in a ravine below us. Our soldiers let them advance. When about 3,000 of the enemy thus entered the gorge, our soldiers started shooting. I cannot describe what followed.

The Italians began to scatter and ran in all directions. Then we went into action and appeared at the

Mystery Ribbon

London, Nov. 29 (CP)

THE Daily Mail reported today the possibility that a new "mystery weapon" is being tried out against German night bombers.

It said London observers had noted a peculiar horizontal beam of light flashing in the sky during barrage operations.

Sometimes the beam was seen at 10,000 feet, and again at 20,000 feet, cutting across the rays of the customary searchlights on the ground.

It seemed to be narrower than the searchlight rays and was a sort of bluish-white ribbon which disappeared for periods and then flashed a half-dozen times in one minute.

Stethem Named Head Of Camps

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—(CP).—Appointment of Col. Hubert Stethem as director of internment operations succeeding Brig.-Gen. E. de B. Panet, was announced yesterday by Hon. Pierre Casgrain, Secretary of State. Colonel Stethem, who was recently promoted from the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, was assisted to Brig.-Gen. Panet from the outbreak of war and since the latter's appointment as Officer Commanding Military District No. 3, Montreal, has been acting director.

Colonel Hubert Stethem is a native son of Peterborough. He was born in this city and his father, the late George Stetham, had a hardware store in the city for many years.

Spain to Feed Hungry Italy?

Playing Convoy the Reason Duce's Fleet Caught Off Sardinia

(By GUY RHOADES.)

The presence of Italian warships in the Sardinian locality where part of the Royal Navy's Mediterranean fleet attacked them Wednesday remained a puzzle today, but there seemed at least two possible answers.

The Italians might have been seeking to prevent British convoys from reaching Malta or Greece with supplies, or they might have been convoying ships of their own with supplies shipped overland across non-belligerent Spain.

It was noted, however, that neither the Admiralty statement describing the rout of the Italians, nor the extravagant Italian accounts of the affair, made any mention of merchant ships being in the neighborhood. That, of course, does not necessarily mean they were not there.

It is highly probable that Italy has been attempting or will attempt to get supplies via Spain, for the Italians appear to have stepped into two wars with thoroughly depleted stocks of everything needed to keep at least one home front in operation.

The United States Department of Agriculture issued an illuminating report today, predicting that the Italians faced a winter with a great number of the poorer classes already suffering from malnutrition.

The department credited the British blockade with having cut off more than 80 per cent of Italy's imports and said that Italy's economic structure was severely disorganized.

During this winter, the American authorities said, it would not be surprising if the Italians had to endure five or six meatless days a week.

Mussolini's people appeared in an additionally tough spot because they can import very little agricultural produce from their neighbors. Their ally, Germany, has taken care to collar all the surplus these other Eurpean countries can release.

It is interesting also to note the Blockade Now Has Nation Shy Of Fats, Oil, Meat

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—(AP)—The British Mediterranean blockade has been so effective, the United States Agriculture Department reported today, that Italy faces the winter deprived of many sorely-needed foodstuffs and agricultural raw materials.

By barring the gates of the Mediterranean at Gibraltar and at Suez, Great Britain has cut off the sources of more than 80 per cent. of Italy's imports, the Department said.

"This blockade is so effective in stopping the flow of supplies needed by Italy," the Department said, "that it has more severely disorganized the Italian economic structure than anything else the war has ac-

Writer Finds Greeks In Pogradetz, Claims Of Booty Mild

(The following despatch is the first independent verification that Pogradetz, Albanian town 20 miles north of Koritza, has been captured by the Greeks. Its capture has not been claimed officially in Athens although it was reported on Tuesday in London. The Greek command said at that time only that its forces had "overshot" it.)

By PETER TOMPKINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

POGRADETZ, Albania (via Athens), Nov. 29 — (AP). — Greek official communiques have been on the conservative side both as regards Italian casualties and the amount of booty taken.

Every Albanian village and all along the coastal sector through which I have travelled to this little settlement 20 miles north of Koritza, I was amazed by the number of truck, motorcycles and guns littering the roadside, to say nothing of the quantities of war materials already collected by the Greeks.

I can also understand now why the communiques have been so reserved about the present situation. In reality, there is no front, and fighting, spread over a wide area far into the snow-covered mountains, is being carried on mostly by small units. These detachments operate more or less independently and communications are so poor it is impossible for commanders even in the immediate sector to know the exact situation.

Military leaders even in this advanced post are unable to tell just how far beyond here their forces have penetrated into the wild mountains. They say, however, that their forces far to the north and west of Pogradetz are meeting no concerted resistance. They say there is some rearguard action but, for the most part, the Italians are retreating faster than the Greeks can advance.

I am writing this despatch on a typewriter used only a few days ago by an Italian officer who apparently left hurriedly. A half-

SHANGHAI, Nov. 29 (AP)—Chinese notables and partisans of the Chinese puppet government were believed to be among the casualties when a train en route from Shanghai to Nanking for tomorrow's "recognition" of the Wang Ching-Wei regime was derailed.

The Japanese military authorities claimed no Japanese or Chinese officials were aboard, but Chinese reports said otherwise. Casualties were put at 100 dead or injured, with unconfirmed Chinese reports ranging as high as 100 dead and 300 injured.

Fleet Bombers Also Torpedo Cruiser, Fire 2 Others; One British Cruiser Is Hit

British Gunfire Damages Two Destroyers; Italian Planes Drop 30 Bombs Around Ark Royal Without Damage

LONDON, Nov. 29—(CP).—The Admiralty account of the latest Mediterranean clash between the Royal Navy and Italian sea forces gave the fleet air arm a major share of the credit today for damage inflicted on six Italian warships.

The Admiralty's statement on Wednesday's fight off the Island of Sardinia, issued last night, said torpedo planes hit a 35,000-ton battleship of Italy's new Littorio class and a 10,000-ton cruiser of the Bolzano class, while dive-bombers scored "very new misses" against two other cruisers, damaging one of them.

Another cruiser was reported "seriously on fire aft" and two destroyers were damaged by gunfire.

Another eight-inch gun cruiser was disclosed to have "reduced speed immediately after" an attack by torpedoing swordfish planes, but the Admiralty did not say she was damaged.

It announced damage to a British cruiser but said it was slight and that the ship remained in service. Seven men were killed aboard her.

During the course of the chase which was carried to within a few miles of the coast, British planes from the aircraft carrier Ark Royal attacked repeatedly, the Admiralty said.

"One force of Swordfish aircraft carried out a torpedo attack on the enemy battleships and one torpedo was seen to hit a battleship of the new and powerful Littorio class," the communique reported.

"Another force of Swordfish attacked an enemy unit consisting of three eight-inch-gun cruisers, one torpedo hit was almost certainly obtain on the rear ship—a 10,000-ton ship of the Bolzano class—and the leading ship of this formation was observed to have reduced speed immediately after this attack.

"A force of Skuas (naval dive-bombers) dive-bombed a formation of three six-inch-gun cruisers of the Condottieri class. Two very near misses were obtained, and it appears that one of the enemy cruisers was damaged."

A Fascist destroyer of the Grecale class was seen down by the stern, listing heavily, and another destroyer was listing slightly and losing way.

Ottawa Elects Laurier

OTTAWA, Nov. 29 — (CP).—Appointment of Hon. Robert Laurier as Minister of Mines in the Ontario Cabinet has been overwhelmingly approved by the electors of Ottawa East provincial constituency.

By a clear majority of more than 9,000 votes, 48-year-old nephew of Sir Wilfrid Laurier was elected in yesterday's by-election in the riding to take the Legislative seat held by his predecessor in the cabinet, Hon. Paul Leduc.

His two opponents, Pte. Alex Denomme, Social Credit, and Aldege Scott, Independent Liberal, polled only slightly more than a tenth as many votes as the official Liberal candidate.

When counting of ballots ended for the night, Returning Officer Joachim Sauve, K.C., said that with 187 polls of 188 reported, the vote stood: Laurier 10,147, Denomme 626, Scott 324.

complished."

In a report on "Italian agriculture under Fascism and war," the Department, using confidential information said to have been obtained through diplomatic channels, told how Germany's Axis partner has resorted to strict rationing in an effort to make available supplies last as long as possible.

"The restrictions on food consumption," he report stated, "are heavy for an agricultural country like Italy, even in time of war." Great numbers of the poorer classes were said to be suffering from malnutrition.

The Department said that Italy, upon her entry, apparently expected the war to be of short duration.

"It was only after more than a month of warfare, when the Italian Government became less certain of the duration of the conflict, that genuine alarm was felt and more inclusive rationing was adopted."

Not only have Italians felt the pinch of food shortages, but higher prices as well. The report said prices were 40 per cent. higher than when Great Britain and France declared war on Germany.

Its overseas trade shut off by the blockade, Italy must now rely on sources of supply that may be reached only by land, especially Germany, Switzerland, the Balkans and Northern Europe The Department said, however, it was difficult to see how these countries could supply Italy with such products as rubber, cotton, wool and jute. Moreover, they have no coffee and export little meat, and their excess cereals and fats must be sent to Germany.

It Will Get Worse.

"Thus the lack of fats, oils, meats —the three food products in which Italy is most deficient—may become more serious as the British blockade continues," the report said. "In this case the Italian people may expect much stricter rations and possibly five or six meatless days."

Meat supplies are already so scarce, the report said, that consumption is permitted only on Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays. Coffee drinking by civilians has been prohibited, available supplies having been requisitioned for the armed forces.

The monthly ration per person of olive oil, a major item in the Italian diet, now is one pint.

The Department said bread is being rationed in restaurants at 2.8 ounces per person per meal in "luxury and first-class" restaurants and 5.3 ounces in "second, third and fourth class" eating places.

The report said that the effects of the food shortage, though not yet serious for the country as a whole, were "very acute" in some sections of Southern Italy and the islands. Reports from Sicily indicate, it said, that two months after institution of the blockade, bread already was being mixed with the meal of horse-beans.

Many Are Buried

Wave after wave of raiders swept inland from the Irish Sea and spread over the northwest area.

At several points in Liverpool rescue workers dug in wreckage for victims trapped in their bombed homes. A number of persons were believed buried under tons of debris in one place. Two persons were killed in a direct hit on one public shelter.

In many streets there was not a window left intact in buildings and residences.

One district of Liverpool which was heavily attacked in the first days of the concentrated attacks on the Merseyside area was most seriously damaged.

A police station, a movie theatre, a block of flats and a bank were among the damaged buildings but casualties in Merseyside were described as "amazingly slight, in view of the length of the raid and the method of indiscrimnate bombing by relays of planes."

Liverpool's populace praised the heroism and efficiency of its fire department and auxiliary fire service which tackled fires set by uncounted incendiary bombs dropped by the first raiders and put them out before the glare could guide the follow-up waves of bombers.

Chinese reports said the train was carrying an official party to the scheduled signing tomorrow in Nanking of a "peace treaty" between Japan and the Chinese puppet regime headed by Wang Ching-Wei.

The railway has been under Japanese military operations since the Japanese capture of Nanking Dec. 14, 1937.

It was considered possible here that foreigners were aboard the wrecked train, including American newspapermen en route to Nanking for the treaty ceremony, but an accurate check could not be made immediately.

The wrecking was interpreted here as an effort by followers of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's government to discredit and trouble Wang's regime.

Wang's administration, preparing for the formality of recognition by Japan tomorrow and treaty signing, was disclosed yesterday to have sent Chiang a "last exhortation" that the Chungking government stop fighting and join in peaceful co-operation with Japan.

Mr. Newton said that in recent trials involving Jehovah's Witnesses, Communists and illegal picketing, "the defence always seems to originate in the same spot, and it looks like a vicious tieup."

Magistrate Hawkshaw stressed Canada is going through "troublesome times," and he found that through the actions of the Leesons their children "had been taught to disrespect the Crown and the Flag."

The children involved were a girl of nine and a boy, seven years old. They were sent home from school first on September 20, allowed to return, and suspended a few days later when they still refused to sing the National Anthem. Arrest of the parents followed.

Members of the sect have had "clear and explicit warning," Crown Attorney Newton maintained, in urging the Maximum penalty for the Leesons.

"And what do we find?" he asked. "As if by pre-conceived plan, children throughout the province have decided they will not take part in patriotic exercises in school.

"Norway, Holland, Belgium and France were undermined, betrayed, conquered and destroyed because Nazi Germany was clever enough to take advantage of any group or sect that spread discontent.

"In Canada there has been some studied defiance of the law, in distribution of pamphlets and in other ways. There must be subversive influence behind it. It may be these people are gullible fools who allow themselves to be used after warning has been given, but at the same time an example should be made of them."

reports of feeble Italian resistance to the Greeks and the report of Italian prisoners desperately trying to give away their money in return for food. They are often described as emaciated and hungry. That may be one of the reasons for their poor showing.

If Hitler has collared all the spare food in Central Europe, Mussolini will have to look elsewhere. He might look to his old friend, Spain. His legions helped Franco win the civil war. Franco has not much food to spare, but if Mussolini can pay the price, undoubtedly it could be shipped into Spain, because Spain is not subjected to blockade.

Supplies could be unloaded at west coast Spanish ports, moved by rail across Spain and reshipped from Eastern Spanish ports.

It is just possible that was why part of the Italian fleet was caught off the west coast of Sardinia, far from the scene of action in and around Greece.

Much preliminary work is necessary in building a cargo ship, it was explained. The exact shape and length of the steel required has to be ascertained and ordered from the steel plants. Accordingly, while this is going on the ways can be installed so there will be no particular delay.

"When we start making cargo ships there will be no let-up in Corvette construction," Mr. Carswell declared. "Every shipyard now is working to capacity, except in one or two instances where there is a shortage of supplies or other difficulties which cause temporary hold-ups.

"We have planned what every shipyard will do. It will entail some extensions to shipyards, but for the most part they are doing this themselves.

"It will not require much additional labor. The labor situation is pretty fair."

Longer Week Is Predicted By McLarty

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—Labor's sacrifice to the war effort may be a longer working week and less overtime pay, couple with possible drafting of men in non-essential industry for work on essential war production.

The House of Commons yesterday heard Labor Ministry McLarty mention the possibility that concessions in hours and wages, long fought for by workers' organizations, might have to be sacrificed.

But the minister emphasized that, so far as the government is concerned, these sacrifices would be only temporary.

The chief proponents of labor interests in the House, members of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation group, and all others listened with close attention to the minister's speech and there was little interruption.

Angus MacInnis (CCF Vancouver East) asked if labor, after the war, would "have to go through the same fight they had over the years to get these rights restored."

Mr. McLarty replied that Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the government as a whole were on record that labor was co-operating in the war effort and "any concessions made by labor in this emergency would be for emergency only."

It was the government's accepted obligation that "when labor was

She had been afflicted with a heart condition for some time. The late Mrs. Brown, who was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Porter, was born in the township of Hungerford, 75 years ago. On May 10, 1894, she was married to John Brown, and since that time she had made her home in this immediate vicinity. She was a faithful member of St. James' Anglican Church.

Nazi Bombers Make Attack On Liverpool

LONDON, Nov. 29 — (CP). — German bombers delivered one of the heaviest attacks yet last night on the north-western port of Liverpool, the Press Association said early to-day.

Flying in waves and assaulting Liverpool for several hours, the raiders dropped both incendiary and high-explosive bombs on the city and surrounding Merseyside district.

The Press Association said, however, that a heavy anti-aircraft barrage kept many of the attackers away and that damage was chiefly to "house property." One bomb struck near a public shelter. "A few" deaths were reported.

London's own anti-aircraft boomed intermittently after midnight. Here the German air force reverted to the use of heavy bombers. Other raiders fanned out over Liverpool, East Anglia, the Midlands, and both South-east and North-east England.

But if the shift of tactics resulted in heavier bombardment it could not be ascertained amid the continuous pounding of anti-aircraft guns of all calibre. In that din no bomb explosions had been heard late at night.

To all appearances it was just another of the night raids which tax the wits of aerial technicians. It followed a day of fighting, the extent of which was symbolized in a statement of the Air and Home Security Ministries with this score:

On the problem of defence against night raids, the magazine Aeroplane said the answer could be expected "but not at once and probably not before next winter."

Five invading fighters shot down; six British fighters lost.

CompanyHonors Major Honey

Major R. C. Honey, Officer Commanding O. Company of the Prince of Wales Rangers, was presented with a large silver tray by the officers, non commissioned officers and men of A company, at a company dinner held in the Officers Mess of the Prince of Wales Rangers last night.

The prize for the best marksmanship in the Company as displayed on the miniature range was presented to the winner, Pte. Don Weese.

A toast to the Regiment was proposed by Lieut. Jack Smith, and replied to by Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C.

Guests for the dinner included Col. Dewart, Lt. Col. M. H. Park, Major J. McGrath, M.M., Major V. Eastwood, M.C., Major R. J. Bolton, Captain J. Morley and Lieut. R. Dixon.

Ald. Wilson Heads Parks Committee

Alderman Wilson was appointed chairman of the parks committee last night, taking the place of the late Alderman Walter Stocker until the end of the year.

The remaining work of the parks committee is to set up the public skating rinks and supervise them, and it was felt that this duty would fit into the general affairs of the Board of Works.

Alderman Dutton showed the finance committee a drawing of bronze tablet with the lettering in relief which is being proposed as a memorial to the late City Clerk, Simon R. Armstrong. The design received the approval of the members who generally said that it admirably represented their idea of what such a memorial should be. The drawing is to be submitted to a special committee of former mayors of the city, and if they are of the same opinion as the members of the council the bronze tablet will be ordered and will be placed in the council chamber.

Alderman Roy offered a framed portrait of Mr. Armstrong if it should be the desire of the council to hang it over the tablet. No definite decision was made last night, but some opinion was expressed that the tablet should stand by itself, and that Mr. Roy's portrait could be hung in the office of the city clerk.

TORONTO POULTRY

TORONTO, Nov. 29 — (CP). — The dressed poultry market remains quietly steady, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. Though sales are slow, there is a fair volume going into local consumer channels, the demand having been somewhat better this week than for the previous week, mostly for heavy chicker Offerings are plentiful and the surplus is being packed for storage. Fowl are the exception, and receipts of this kind of poultry are on the light side.

A few geese and ducks are arriving.

The demand for turkeys, which are being offered in greater volume, is not so keen and in consequence quotations on these birds are being shaded.

The general quality of arrivals is showing improvement, more noticeable in turkeys.

It is reported there was some effort made to reduce prices, but this did not materialize and quotations are practically the same as last week.

Supplies of live poultry are not so heavy and prices are unchanged.

Wheezing in the Chest Points to Bronchitis

The principal symptom of bronchitis is a dry, harsh, hacking cough accompanied by a rapid wheezing and tightness across the chest.

There is a raising of phlegm, especially in the morning. This phlegm is at first of a light colour, but as the trouble progresses becomes yellowish or greenish.

You may find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy to help stimulate the weakened bronchial organs, relieve the inflammation, soothe the irritated parts, loosen the phlegm and mucous, and aid nature to easily dislodge the morbid accumulation.

Gale Sets RCAF Plane Down Near Fenelon

LINDSAY, Nov. 29—(ENS).—On Tuesday afternoon an R.C.A.F. plane made a forced landing ten miles north of Fenelon Falls. The plane, which had been flying at an altitude of 19,000 feet through a storm, landed in a stoney field. The pilot was on his way to Gravenhurst and had lost his bearings. He was taken on to Fenelon Falls by a motorist where he 'phoned to Camp Borden. Another plane arrived a short time afterwards and the pilots changed planes. Both machines continued their flight, but not before a goodly number of farmers in the district had arrived at the field to learn what it was all about.

The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon of one of Lindsay's most popular residents, in the person of William Mills. For a number of years he was the genial ice maker at the local curling rink. Vandals Wreck School House

BANCROFT, Nov. 29 — (ENS). — The schoolhouse in Section No. 1 Dungannon was broken into by some vandals who had no regard other than destruction. Contents of the pupils' desks and teacher's desk were strewn all over the room. Canned goods which are kept in these rural schools for the convenience of the children in serving hot lunches were stolen. Rice and flour which evidently was of no use to the ransackers was scattered over the entire room. The contention is that the same thug or thugs who help up the teacher of this school on November 4 on a lonely section of the road between her boarding place and the schoolhouse are responsible for this later development. Other sections of this district are also feeling the brunt of these marauders for the home of John Anderson was broken into and two dozen quarts of preserved fruit was stolen. Mrs. Gardiner, who lives close to the school, reports quite a number of her chickens missing and William Garrett's poultry house was visited and turkeys stolen, which all seems to probe that these menacing individuals are remaining in the district and keeping under cover of the woods and pilfering by night. Provincial Police Officer S. W. Palmateer is investigating.

Terrorists Rule Rumania

It is a matter of weeks since German troops entered Rumania, and they are on ground there where no other power is interfering with their plans. On the face of things Rumania has a Rumanian Premier, Ion Antonescu, former head of the Iron Guard movement, patterned after the Nazi movement of Germany.

When King Carol was in power he fought openly against the Iron Guard, and it is possibly quite correct to say he used direct and strange methods of getting rid of their leaders, among them being Corneliu Codrenau. Along with a dozen others he was shot and buried in the prison yard.

The Iron Guard is in control in Rumania today, and Premier Antonescu has no more control of the situation than the humblest resident of our own city.

The Iron Guard is reported to have "entered" the prison at Jilava where there were 67 political prisoners, including ministers and officials of the former government of King Carol. There is not a word telling of any resistance to their entry, and prisons in that land are heavy and ponderous structures through the doors of which one does not pass with ease.

The meaning is that the Iron Guard, and not the Government of Rumania, is in power. Antonescu had previously assured the wives and families of the arrested men that they were safe and in no danger.

In truth they were in such a perilous position that they were called from their cells by name, and as they stepped into the corridor they were shot. And they numbered sixty-seven.

The boy king of Rumania, Michael, knew nothing of what was taking place, and if he had known he could have done nothing about it.

The belief is that Premier Antonescu had a good enough knowledge, but he was powerless to prevent it. So the power in the land does not rest with the King nor yet with the Premier. It is in the hands of the Iron Guard which any one can join who has the price to purchase a green shirt. That in turn can be described by only one word — terrorism.

There are plenty of German troops in Rumania. Thousands of them. But they do nothing about it. If the Rumanians desire to engage in a slaughter where Rumanians will kill Rumanians it appears to be of no interest to them. It will leave more room and more supplies for more Germans.

Rumania today is paying the price for having had its former King Carol making trips to Berchtesgaden to confer with Hitler. He appeared to be filled and buttressed by the belief that Hitler would save him from the Russians and see that his neighbors did not pour over his boundaries which had been liberally extended by the Allies at the conclusion of the last war. Rumania's reward has been that at pistol point she was forced by Germany to hand over a large section of Transylvania to Hungary, and today the terrorists are at large and uncontrolled.

Prisoners Of War

Lt.-Col. H. Stethem, assistant director of internment operations in Canada, made known that a flood of letters had arrived suggesting means for dealing with German prisoners of war in Canada who escaped.

There were a number who would use the simple but quite effective method of shooting them as an example of what might happen to others.

One suggestion frequently made was that the sign of the swastika should be tattooed on the hand of each prisoner so he would be readily identified.

A section of the dear general public always knows how to do things which bother officials, but the public making these suggestions ignores the plain fact that the treatment of prisoners of war is somehing about which Canada can make no new regulations, because it is all dealt with in international agreement.

It is not possible to clip off the hair from a prisoner of war to make him look like a prisoner. If he is recaptured after escaping the most that can be done is 28 days in solitary confinement.

The prisoner of war is apt to be fairly well used in any land because if he is maltreated the chances are that the same sort of treatment may be inflicted on the prisoners of the country which does the maltreating. For instance—if we started putting the pressure on German prisoners in Canada it might not be very long before Germans would be levelling off the score by taking it out on any Canadians who might be held prisoners in Germany.

However, as long as people care to write letters about such matters we suppose it is good for the sale of postage stamps if nothing else.

Perhaps They're Stubborn

Always are there people who insist on having their own way, and there was a demonstration of that in the Ottawa East Provincial by-election. Premier Hepburn had named Robert Laurier a member of his cabinet as Minister of Mines, and the Conservatives stayed out. But Pte. Alex. Denomme stayed in as a Social Credit candidate, and Aldredge Scott decided to stay in an an independent Liberal.

At 11.40 on election night it was stated Laurier had 10,147 votes; Denomme, 626; Scott, 324. What happened after that to add to the figures does not matter.

What possible purpose could have been served by a Social Credit candidate even if he had been elected? It looks much like a man who had decided he was going to run no matter what happened, and we cannot believe that feeling comes from sincere conviction or the hope of working some worthy change.

There was no prospect of upsetting the Government in a by-election; there was no chance of making even a slight change; so there was no reason whatever for forcing an election.

An Impressive Document

A document 128 years of age is at the moment in this office through the courtesy of H. E. Helson of this city. It is an indenture drawn in the days when an apprenticeship was a serious affair, attached to it being all the significance and wordage of a document of state or an international alliance.

This one, dated November 2, 1812, has to do with Elias Rendell, a youth of fifteen years, who was going to Newfoundland to learn the art of keeping books, or as is stated in the indenture, "to learn the art, trade or mystery of an accountant after the manner of an apprentice."

It would seem that the lad had almost sold himself, body and soul, to the employer, the Messrs. Crawford & Co. of St. John. It was provided:

"The said apprentice his said master shall faithfully serve, his secrets keep, his lawful commands everywhere obey; he shall not waste his master's goods or lend them to others; he shall not contract matrimony within the said term of four years.

"At cards, dice, or any unlawful game he shall not play whereby his master shall be damaged; he shall not absent himself day or night from his master's service without his leave, nor haunt ale houses, taverns or play houses."

The master was bound to instruct him in the trade, and to provide "for said apprentice sufficient meat, drink and lodging, and he was also to pay him 20 pounds for the first year, 30 for the second, 40 for the third and 50 pounds for the fourth and concluding year. The indenture required five signatures and three seals to make it binding, all of which are attached and as readable as can be after a lapse of 128 years.

Today we might be inclined to call it tough, but it came from a period when discipline was known and recognized, and when one would probably be well trained and entirely competent at the expiration of his apprenticeship. There is the possibility that we have swung too far in the other direction.

Concerning Garbage Cans

One can possibly learn something almost every day, and the lesson for the current period has to do with when a garbage can has been wandering through garbage can can be wandering through the pages of Parliamentary Debates for several days. Whether Mr Hanson was thinking of getting one or not is not stated, but he was insistent about asking what they had cost. There were 26,000 of them, and they had been ordered in September of 1939, and several times he has veered around again to inquire what a government-purchased garbage can actually costs. The information was not given out instantly, and it appeared as though the censors and the experts might have had to go into a huddle to consider the matter. Finally the information came that the cost had been from $3.10 to $3.95 each, and for that price we should think one should be able to get a ripsnorting sort of a garbage container.

But there is more, so let us be on with the lesson. Mr. Hanson reported that some 900 of these were sitting in a storehouse in Saint John, N.B. (Or whatever it is that a garbage can does when it is in a reclining position). And while they were thus sitting the Department had reported they were in use. Surely there was a national problem. A regular old thumper.

But then Minister Power explained it was all a matter of interpretation. As far as the Ordnance Department is concerned the garbage cans—or anything else we presume—were considered to be in use when they had been delivered to depot stores.

It would not be possible or advisable to have a man puttering about with a pencil and a book making note of the day and hour (daylight or standard time) when some one came forth and dumped waste matter in the $3.10 to $3.95 containers. Hence we have the complicated situation where a garbage can can be officially in use and unofficially not in use at one and the same time.

As Mr. Hanson has discovered it can sit in a store house down by the sounding sea and brazenly declare—or some such thing—that it is in service, whereas its broad and capable $3.10 to $3.95 dimensions have not yet felt the impact or the clout needed to dislodge that portion of the contents which insist on adhering to the bottoms of all garbage cans, even those of the lowly $1.50 variety.

Thus we know more about garbage cans. They can be in service and not in service at the same time depending on which department is doing the reckoning.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Latest German order has cut off direct train service between Geneva and Paris, and it is of no use going down to the station and making a row about it.

President Roosevelt is going to move to ban strikes in defence industries, and Mussolini is going to pass a law to prevent Greeks from interfering with his war plans.

The old rule used to be "In time of peace prepare for war," but Britain has been placed in the peculiar position of being at war and preparing for war at the same time.

The old Spanish custom of eating late and staying up later has been ruled out by the government to conserve electrical energy. But the young people of course could stay up even if the lights were turned out.

The Danes used to have a dish of whipped cream and rich cheese of which they were fond. That has gone because so many of their cattle have been killed. The Germans, you understand, went in there to protect the Danes.

An Aylmer veteran of the last war was fined for wearing the uniform of an officer. Possibly nothing more than human vanity seeking some channel of expression, but that particular channel cost him $25.

Elaine Barrymore has been divorced from her actor husband John. She is wife number four and is 24 years of age. In her suit she claimed she had suffered mental anguish and lost weight. Perhaps Elaine might try living in some of the conquered countries of Europe.

A speaker at the Cleveland Engineering Society made this statement: "Today it takes only 1,500 men to throw as much metal on the target in a given time as 20,000 could throw on the target in the last war." It is indeed fortunate for the world that they do not always throw it on the target.

In Amerillo, Texas, 16 inches of rain fell in 24 hours and then it began to freeze. There was no power, no lights and no water. If a fire started the water would not have been forthcoming to fight it. An organized community may be very modern, but it can also become mighty helpless.

PINK SEDAN

¶ Down South my pink sedan should go, when comes the time for cold and snow, I found that out before; it's no use taking it apart, to find out why the thing won't start, for I'd find out no more.

¶ I know my pink sedan is old, that's why it suffers from the cold, 'twill hardly turn at all; it used to spring to life quite smart, no trick at all to make it start, in days of early fall.

¶ But each degree the weather drops, more often pink sedan she stops, nor acts like how it should; and when it stands alone at night, why all its innards get so tight, that it is stalled for good.

¶ I pour hot water on the thing, to make it feel like days of spring, and then I crank some more; I choke the thing for all 'twill take, to see what difference that will make, it's stubborn as before.

¶ If I could head down south I know, my pink sedan would hum and go, it never would be still; I know that it would show some speed, as much as any man would need, when coasting down a hill.

¶ I simply have to make it go, to help me quickly to and fro, I know it needs a change; until we come to days of spring, I think I'll have to park the thing—beside the kitchen range.

Japan Does Not Wish War With United States

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Under the heading, "Philippines Must Choose Independence or Not," the China Weekly Review published in Shanghai, quotes Francis B. Sayre, Uncle Sam's high commissioner in Manila, to the effect that he "believes the United States government would be ready to consider sympathetically any Filipino proposal for a change in the Independence Act"—that is, the act, passed by Congress in Washington, under which, shortly, the islanders are to acquire absolute freedom, with no Americans strings attached. But, on the other hand, the U.S. is to be freed of responsibility as to their future national integrity.

Frances Sayre

In the same article, however, the Shanghai weekly refers to a message to the Filipino people from Senator Millard E. Tydings in Washington, in Washington, informing them that, if there's to be any departure from the independence program, "it must be suggested to the United States by the Filipinos themselves."

The China Weekly Review, being exceptionally well posted as to conditions in its part of the world, speaks with a deal of authority. So does High Commissioner Sayre, as U.S. representative in Manila. The assumption is that he wouldn't have expressed himself as he did unless he'd been authorized to do so from Washington. Senator Tydings, on his part, was especially influential in getting the Filipino Independence Act through Congress, and doubtless knows what he's talking about, too.

PICTURE CHANGES

Of course, as the Review remarks, the theory is that the Filipinos, who predominantly wanted independence when the act was passed, may be decidedly afraid to go it alone today, considering the "present situation in the Far East." In other words, it's surmised that they must be apprehensive of being grabbed by Japan.

If the U.S. insist on letting 'em go, they're off American hands, and they always have been a liability. If the U.S. hangs on to 'em they may be inviting trouble presently with the Japs. Yet it does seem like a mean trick to cast 'em adrift in such an emergency. Surely, though, it certainly appears reasonable to ask 'em to speak for themselves.

I've had occasion, once or twice before, to refer to Dr. Vincente Villamin, a Filipino lawyer and economist who, in the capacity of a Manila newspaper correspondent, has been in the United States for some time. Now I refer to him again, because he's a particularly competent authority on the subject in hand. Naturally he knows his home islands like a book. He also is intimately acquainted with Japan and China, not to mention the rest of the world, for he's travelled everywhere. He's almost like a Filipino ambassador in the U.S.

Dr. Villamin isn't a Philippine independence advocate. On the contrary, he's been in America largely as a spokesman for the Filipino element which has opposed it all along, mainly upon economic grounds, and also because he thinks the U.S. has given his archipelgao a better government than it's likely to provide for itself.

JAPS DON'T SEEK WAR

But the doctor doesn't believe the Japanese are the least bit thirsty for a fight with the United States.

"It stands," he says, "to reason. If they get into a fight with the United States, they'll have against them China's enormous man power on one side, and, on the other side, America's vast resources. They're not crazy enough to invite such odds. Neither could the Axis help 'em in such a conflict. Furthermore, Russia would surely hop on 'em.

"If we Filipinos get out from under Uncle Sam's wing, the Japs are likely enough to try to annex us, but not while we stay American.

"By their tie-up with the Axis they do, indeed, hope to get French Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies. But can't take even those if you Yankees say, 'No,' in a tone of voice to convince 'em. China has 'em about played out already. They still seem impudent, but it's a bluff.

"When they framed up that deal with the Axis they did it as a forlorn hope. That dicker with the Axis is the best proof that the Japs are about all in."

FELLOW OR ALIEN?

I WROTE last week of Mr. F. G. Friedlander, the new Fellow of Trinity, who at the time of his election was residing in an internment camp somewhere in Canada, having been transported thither from a similar institution in this country. I learn that the Home Office has now decided that Mr. Friedlander can now safely be liberated, and will be free to return to this country if he chooses. I should be interested to know at whose expense he will travel, and in particular whether a Government which sent him to Canada in the style befitting an interned alien (Austrian, not German) will bring him back in the style befitting a Fellow of Trinity.—London Spectator.

• Bombing Those Old Soldiers

AMONG the 500 or so old soldiers at Chelsea Hospital are veterans of the Zululand and Matabele campaigns and of the Egyptian wars of the eighties. Many who are there now were too old, 25 years ago, for the first German war, but they have been tasting the second.

Three times during the past few weeks bombs have fallen on the Wren buildings of the hospital. One smashed its way into a dormitory, another struck the infirmary a glancing blow, a third missed the guardroom, but was near enough for the blast forcibly to turn out the guard. There were no casualties.

The ex-Hussar who showed me round had ridden with the first relief column to Khartum. Now, because he is only 75, he looks after his seniors. He had shepherded the really old men out of the dormitory that was ruined a few minutes later. They were too old to climb down into the excellent underground shelters, so he stood with them under a sandbagged staircase. "That wasn't very pleasant for the old fellows," he said, "was it?"

But none of them has since gone sick with shock. Nor has any one of those who were carried out of the infirmary—not even Private Rattray, of the 24th Foot. He is a hundred years old, and, very properly, too old to be bothered by journalists. Bombs do not bother him to the same extent.—Manchester Guardian.

• Takes A Long Time In Quebec

MOST PEOPLE in the English-speaking provinces of Canada have known from their school days that vestiges of the seigneurial system continued to exist in Quebec; most of them are also aware that these last traces passed into history this month. We should be greatly surprised, however, if it has been generally realized how widespread the feudal method of land holding really was.

According to an article in The Sherbrooke Record, the historic last payment of the seigneurial dues, the "rentes constituees," was made by approximately sixty thousand French-Canadian farmers. This number represents about a third of Quebec's rural population. The "rentes" were paid to two hundred and forty-five seigniories.

The system had its beginning in Canada in great grants of land made by the French kings during the century and a half following the discovery of America. In return for the grants the seigneurs were obliged to perform military service and pay a "quint" to the Crown if the seigniory changed hands.

When Quebec passed into British hands, the system was of course in conflict with English land-holding laws, but in spite of agitation for its abolition then, it was retained under the British policy that there should be as little interference as possible with the language, laws and customs of the people of New France. In 1854, nearly a century after the deaths of Wolfe and Montcalm, the legislature of Upper and Lower Canada passed the Seigneurial Tenures Abolition Act, but this piece of legislation by no means abolished the entire seigneurial system.

The Act released the habitants from practically all their feudal obligations to the seigneurs except the payment of a fixed rent, and they were given the chance to release themselves from the rent by purchasing their farms by a lump payment if they so desired or were able. Only a relatively small proportion of the habitants took advantage of the opportunity to own their lands outright, hence the large number who have regularly paid their "rentes constituees" throughout the years.

The final legislative action which ended the system was taken at the last session of the Quebec Legislature. An Act was passed authorizing the purchase by the province of all seigneurial rights. A commission was set up and funds were borrowed to buy out the seigneurs at an estimated $3,200,000.

In future, instead of paying their annual "rentes" to the seigneurs, the habitants will make annual payments to their municipalities. The payments, which amount to six per cent of the capital represented by the "rente" which they have previously paid, will be used to retire the loan with which the province purchased the seigneurial rights. When the loan is paid off, the habitants will hold full title to their property—property which in most cases has been occupied continuously by the same families since the original settlement of New France. — Kingston Whig-Standard.

• Free Transportation for Soldiers

From Parliamentary Debates

Mr. FRASER (Peterborough West): The other day the Prime Minister (Mr. Mackenzie King) said he felt the awful seriousness of the war. If that is so, I wonder why he has not tried to keep up the morale of the soldiers who are training in this country, many of them without proper equipment, by giving free transportation on the railways. In any event they should be given free transportation on their own railway. They have been paying for that railway ever since they were knee high to a grasshopper; every time they bought a stick of candy they helped pay for it, and even though they are in training they are helping to pay for it today. There is no reason under the sun why those men should not have free transportation. Of course such transportation would have to be within limits; it might be only on authorized passes and perhaps only three or four times a year, but they should have it. I do not think one hon. member would be opposed to that, or is there one who might be? I do not think so. I think all hon. members are for the soldier, and I am glad they are.

I have before me clippings from papers and magazines concerning free transportation. I shall not read them all, because I know that most hon. members have received some of them. There is one, however, I should like to read, and it is as follows:

In response to an appeal that soldiers in active service ranks be given free transportation on railways the Hon. J. L. Ralston, Defence Minister, has replied that this is without precedent. Even Mr. Ralston must know that this is a most feeble excuse for refusing the enlisted men, whose pay does not permit such luxuries as travel on the people's railway.

In this statement he is not entirely correct, for in Britain leave for soldiers is accompanied by free transportation to their destination. If precedent must be followed, here is precedent.

We do not recall any precedent for Lieutenant Robert Davies and his engineering squad which removes time bombs at the danger of being blown to bits at any moment. Nor is there an established precedent for a mad rush to air raid shelters when enemy planes come overhead with their cargoes of death.

I have here an advertisement paid for by the Liberal government in Ontario, and at the bottom I find these words:

Special request to motorists. When driving along highways these increasingly cold days and nights, give our soldier boys a ride.

Red tape can be cut. All that is necessary is that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mackenzie King) give the word. The soldiers throughout the country are waiting for that word, and I sincerely hope that they get it before Christmas. I mentioned this matter in the house on June 28 and again on July 22. This is November 25; I wonder how much longer the men will have to wait.

TRIED EACH OTHER

TWO magistrates were summoned for exceeding the speed limit. When they arrived at court there were no other magistrates present, so they decided to try each other. No. 1 went on the Bench and the case proceeded.

You are charged with exceeding the speed limit. Do you plead guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty."

"You will be fined five shillings."

Then they changed places and again the plea was "guilty."

"Hmmm," was the response. "These cases are becoming far too common.

Grant Of $750 Recommended For V.O.N. Work

A grant of $750 to the Board of Health to assist in the establishment of a branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses at the beginning of the new year was recommended to the council by the finance committee Thursday night on Alderman Gordon's motion, seconded by Alderman Ovens.

The committee's responsive action followed Alderman Dutton's review of the successive steps by which the engagement of the Victorian Nursing Order is now approaching the final stage. He said it was hoped that the change would be made at the first of January, and to assist in its financing the council would be asked for a grant of $2,500 next year.

The Peterborough Health Association was transferring its main interests to the new public health service, and would not ask for the $1,000 which the council has been granting that body in recent years for its public work.

"They will now do only border line work," Alderman Dutton said. "They have received bequests amounting to $10,000 and the Association intends to use the interest from that investment for providing milk, cod liver oil and other such help for the care of needy cases."

Mr. Dutton also spoke briefly of the splendid work that has been done by Miss Helen Anderson under the direction of the Peterborough Health Association, and as she would now come under the new health establishment her experience would be valuable. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company was going to co-operate with the city and the Victorian Order. Their own nurse was being given another appointment, and for the same kind of care and nursing attention the company was willing to pay 75 cents for each visit by a V.O.N. to policy-holders, and if at the end of the year it was found that the average cost was 90 cents the company would make up the difference. These receipts were expected to pay for another nurse, of whom there would be three altogether.

The public health service of the Victorian Order of Nurses in its local branch would be free to those persons who could not afford to pay for it. If others could pay only 25 cents a visit the nurse would collect that charge, and so on up to the ordinary fee which would be determined.

Cost Of Beginning.

"We shall have to provide an office and supplies and some surgical instruments and it has been estimated the cost at the outset will be more than $1,000," Alderman Dutton said. "We are asking the council for a grant of $750 to assist in buying this equipment and have it ready when the nurses are about to begin. Personally I am profoundly impressed with the value of the Victorian Order's work. The infantile and maternity mortality rates are nothing for Peterboro to be proud of, and it is said that this is due to lack of pre-natal and post-natal care. I believe it will be all to the good to have a chapter of the Victorian Order of Nurses working here."

Special Committee Is Appointed Discuss Exhibition Debt

Mayor Hamilton and Alderman Gordon were appointed by the Finance committee of the Council Thursday night to confer with the Peterborough Exhibition Board about their petition for a grant of $3,818.76 to wipe out their remaining indebtedness, with an accompanying request for provision of $706.87 a year to meet fixed charges on the Exhibition property for which the directors will have no income as a result of the military authorities assuming the grounds for a training camp.

Alderman McIntyre asked whether the Exhibition Board was consulted during the negotiations which ended with a decision of the government to locate a camp here.

Mayor Hamilton said that representatives of the Exhibition had been notified of the progress of the arrangements and were present. "The military authorities read more into our first letter than was intended," His Worship said.

It was recalled that the Council suggested that the Exhibition Park might be of use after the Exhibition as a temporary camp for the Glengarry Highlanders if they were going to be kept in Peterborough during the Fall, and that the grounds would be available to them without cost.

"Apparently they took the meaning that they could have the park free for an army training camp, and this proposal was suddenly made to us, and had to be decided in a very short time," Mayor Hamilton said. The Council, the Exhibition Board, the Prince of Wales Rangers, and the Exhibition Park trustees were all represented at the conference with the visiting military officers.

Alderman McIntyre said he understood that prior to the Exhibition there was some suggestion that the park might be used for the Rangers' camp and for a time it seemed that the Exhibition might be cancelled. If that had taken place the only claim on the council would have been for incidental advertising costs.

Mayor Hamilton said the Exhibition made money this year, and instead of paying the prize money in full the directors paid off their note at the bank.

"I think it would have been better if they had left the note at the bank," Ald. McIntyre said, "and we could have made a small grant to them yearly until their note was retired."

In regard to the action in paying off the note, Alderman Bradburn said that the directors could have been held personally liable for the debt, and their estates, in the case of death, would have been liable for a proportionate share or even for the entire amount. An example of that possibility could be understood in the death of Mr. Denne, and if the question of personal liability had arisen it would be brought against his estate.

"I think we should go into this question with the Board," Alderman Bradburn proposed, and on Alderman Dutton's motion, seconded by Alderman McCannan, that assignment was left with Mayor Hamilton and Alderman Gordon.

His Worship remarked that the Council was not unsympathetic to the Exhibition Board.

"The fact that Mr. Morrow gave this park of 28 acres to the city and that he was here with Mr. Denne at the last meeting, makes me feel that we should give this matter careful consideration," Alderman McCannan said.

Cottesloe YPS Meets

COTTESLOE, Nov. 29 — (ENS)— The Y.P.S. met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Nelson on Tuesday evening. The evening was stormy, but the missionary program presented in dialogue by Mae Webster and Margaret McDonald told the story of the African missions and the great influence the missionary has on the lives of the black race. Laura Nelson gave a reading on Temperance, a fitting climax to the teaching of the Sunday School lessons. The Bible study period was in charge of the president, Don Clysdale. After the meeting a social half-hour was spent, while the play for the Christmas concert, December 18, was practised. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Webster.

Greek Success Temporary Audience Told

Success of the Greek troops in stemming the Italian advance while heartening is only a temporary victory, the Rev. E. J. Springett, Dominion Commissioner, British Israel Federation, told a large audience at the Legion Hall Thursday night.

Mr. Springett declared that all of the Balkans will eventually be drawn into the Axis orbit despite any attempts which would be made against the Nazi and Fascist steam roller. He went on to describe the splendid resistance of the Greeks as most encouraging but this too according to his ideas will soon crumble when Nazi mechanized units come to the aid of the hard-pressed Italians.

"Russia is the great enigma in the present world struggle but it must not be forgotten that while Russia may not be sticking close to the axis partnership, she is certainly not pro-British and will eventually be lined up against the British Empire."

The well-known speaker elaborated on this statement pointing out how, according to the Bible, the nations of the earth would line up for the final struggle. According to him, Russia, Germany, Italy, Japan and the Balkans would be a solid block of resistance to British supremacy, and he added to this the statement that Turkey will do exactly as Russia tells her and is not to be depended on as a British ally."

"The eastward movement of the war is all according to plan which we have been reiterating for years. The final scene of the conflict will be in Palestine and the moves now taking place in the Near East point to a rapid approach of the "battle of that great day of God Almighty."

He suggested that the conditions which brought about this great crisis are an indication that human government and administration in all departments of our social order has become too great a task for human wisdom. The end of the crisis, he said, would result in the final destruction of the forces of evil and aggression and the setting up of a new world order under the sovereignty of Christ.

Westclox Club Presents Comedy Skits

Two short comedies packed full of fun and presented by a group of players who appeared to enjoy the performance almost as much as their appreciative audience, provided plenty of entertainment in the Lyceum Hall Thursday evening. The Westclox Social and Athletic Committee was behind the effort, and proceeds are to go to the Hospital for Sick Children and the Hospital for Consumptives.

The comedy skirts, "A Mad Breakfast" and "When You Marry The Navy," were directed by Malcolm Latimer ,and will be presented again tonight. H. Matthiessen was assistant director; Russel F. Kitchen, business manager; Frances Wells, accompanist, and John Howson in charge of stage arrangements. Choral singing between presentations by a bevy of pretty Westclox girls was well received, and numbers included such patriotic songs as Gracie Fields' favorite, "Wish Me Luck as You Wave Me Good-bye" and "When the Lights of London Shine Again."

The playlet, "A Mad Breakfast," which opened the program, had an amusing plot it wouldn't be fair to disclose before the second presentation, except to say that when a well-to-do gentleman of excellent social position decides to visit a private home for the insane in order to investigate and study, advertising that pay regarding such information will be generous, things are bound to happen, and do, in fast, furious and hilarious sequence!

Two colored porters, "Lasses" and "Flatnose" were really the stars of the evening, in a brief bit of repartee that included the usual "wise-cracks," except that they were better than most, and performed with genuine talent.

"When You Marry the Navy" was exceptionally well played, with Marjorie Goldie taking the honors as the girl who not only married her dear little "Dicky" (so called because he "loved the water so"), but apparently the entire navy! There are a number of complications before two more pretty girls succumb to the fate of draping over a rail watching for the Fleet (and their husbands) to come in, but their hearts rule their heads in the end and the story concludes with a rousing chorus of "God Bless the Navy!"

The cast in the first comedy included Phyllis Webster, Olga Preston, Mary Mongraw, Alice Pruner, Ruth Murray, Edith Abraham, E. J. Hotston, Arthur Winslow, William O'Toole, Oscar Sloan, and in the second presentation, Audrey Garside, Marjorie Goldie, Peggy Gallon, Ann Davis, Eunice Armstrong, Eileen Jeffries, Kay Edwards, Emile Armstrong. Oscar Sloan was "Lasses" and Romeo Mongraw "Flatnose."

Taking part in the choral singing were Eileen Jeffries, Marjorie Goldie, Dorothy Theobald, Olga Preston, Peggy Leonard, Emily Liddell, with Viola Sexsmith as soloist.

Obituary

MRS. JAMES J. WEYER

The funeral of the late Mrs. James J. Weyer was held from the family residence, 213 Park street, north, Saturday morning last, and proceeded to St. Peter's Cathedral for mass which was celebrated by Rev. Earl T. Grant who also delivered the sermon. Rev. Francis Grant, D.C.L. was also present in the sanctuary.

During the time that Mrs. Weyer's remains were resting at the residence, many spiritual offerings and floral tributes were gratefully received by her sorrowing husband and family.

The pall-bearers were the three sons, John A. Weyer; Sergt.-Major James V. Weyer, 4th Field Battery, R.C.A.; Private William Weyer, headquarters staff, N.P.A.M., Training Centre No. 32; also Alfred M. Beaupre, Joseph Kelly and John Fanning.

The interment was made at St. Peter's Cemetery where Rev. J. V. Master, D.D., read the prayers.

Those attending the funeral from out-of-town were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Beaupre (Mrs. Beaupre is a daughter); Miss Marion Weyer (daughter); Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Beaupre; Mrs. Victor Ruttle, and Mrs. H. C. Beaupre, all of Kingston; Mrs. J. J. Ware and Mrs. Scanlon of Toronto; Mr. John Fanning and Mr. and Mrs. Benoit of Lakefield.

MRS. LOUIS ANTHONY.

On Monday morning a large number attended St. Peter's Cathedral to pay their last respects to the late Mrs. Louis Anthony, Sr.

The solemn funeral mass was celebrated by Rev. James Greenan, with Rev. Earl T. Grant as Deacon and Rev. J. V. Masterson, D.D., as sub-Deacon.

Father Greenan's sermon was most consoling to the family and relatives and most fitting for the occasion.

During the time Mrs. Anthony's remains were resting at the residence, a great many came in steady procession. The very numerous spiritual offerings and floral tributes received were most gratefully appreciated.

The pall-bearers were three brothers of the deceased, Harry, Frank and Albert LaFave, T. Guerin, H. Bird, and S. LaFave.

The interment was made at St. Peter's Cemetery, where Rev. P. J. Kelly, LL.D., read the prayers.

Those attending from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. F. Fuller and family of Detroit, Michigan (Mrs Fuller is a daughter), Harold Lawrence, Charles Smith and Louis LaFave, nephews, all of Toronto.

Oddfellows Hold Banquet For Fathers And Sons

"We Are Our Brothers' Keepers," was the subject of an address at a Father and Son banquet in the Oddfellows Hall, Thursday night, by Charles Shaw of the A. Wander Company Limited.

Our thoughts make the man, the speaker said, and it is not the man that counts, it is the man within the man that is important. A chain is as strong as its weakest link, and no stronger, Mr. Shaw said, and asked the members of the lodge, since their insignia is three links, "What kind of links are you?"

The principals of the democracies will be preserved, it was said, if the teachings of the rituals of the order of the Oddfellows are put into practise, and if the members will try to seek divine guidance in practising their creeds.

The objectives designed by those who are motivated by brute force will never be achieved, the speaker said, for history records similar attempts at world domination have failed.

"The British Bloods will oppose and defeat the aggressor nations."

"Freedom and progress must be re-established in the world; we must be doers, not getters."

The real need of the Dominion of Canada, and probably the world as a whole today, said the speaker, is education. Industry is facing a real problem, and finds itself confronted with a formidable task.

Privileged Place

"Britain may thank God for her privilege among nations, and for her traditions," were the patriotic words of the speaker, "others are jealous, and would seek to destroy these traditions, but they will never enjoy them; time will prove that right is, as always, right."

Nazism, through aggression, has destroyed its own security. Embargoes may be placed upon physical needs, but cannot be imposed upon minds and hearts, Mr. Shaw said.

Canada, with her magnificent manufacturing facilities is a tower of strength to the Empire, the greatest the world has ever known."

"This is our war, and though there may be busy and hard times ahead, we are ready for them.

Leaders Needed

"We need leadership," Mr. Shaw said. "The number in the rank of our leaders of our country must increase. The times offer opportunities as never before; opportunities to all men." In defining leadership, and listing some of the qualities a leader must possess, the speaker mentioned, roesight; a leader must see what must be done, and must possess the capacity to do it without being told; he must be able to act quickly, and he must have courage.

The splendid program included a toast to the fathers, proposed by Bom McKinley, and replied to by Alec McKinley; a toast to the sons by William Constable, and replied to by Wilton Hilliard. Jack Smith, referred to as "Smiling Jack," led the singing, and was responsible for a vocal solo, with Charles Shaw at the piano.

A vote of thanks was extended to the ladies, who prepared the supper, and was replied to by the president of the Rebekahs.

A display of the art of sleight of hand was given by Robert Hardie, to the delight of all present.

NATIONALS REGAIN CITY LEAGUE BOWLING LEADERSHIP

White Tops Off Pitching Honor For 1940

CHICAGO, Nov. 29 (AP)—Ernie White, ace southpaw of Columbus Red Birds, captured top honors among American Association pitchers for 1940, official averages showed today.

Pitching 136 innings, White lead the field both in the percentage column and the earned-run averages for hurlers taking part in 20 or more games. Charley Wagner of Louisville was the nominal leader with his mark of nine victories and one loss, but appeared in only 11 contests.

White won 13 games and lost four for an average of .765. The Columbus left hander had an earned run average of 2.25.

The honor of pitching the most complete games went to Bob Logan, Indianapolis left hander, who had 24. He also faced the most batsmen, 1,033, and tied with John Lindell of Kansas City for the most victories, 16 each. Frank Melton of Columbus issued the most bases on balls, 139, and struck out the most batsmen, 142, as he was winning 10 games and losing the same number.

Harry Kelley of Minneapolis allowed the most hits, 295, while Walt Tauscher of the same club appeared in the most games, 53. Jimmy De Shong of Milwaukee allowed the most runs, 161, tied with Johnny Marcum of Toledo in the most earned runs allowed, 132 each, and made the most wild pitches, 19. The "losingest" hurler was Charles Marrow of Milwaukee, who dropped 19 games while winning eight.

Billy Conn Is Choice To Win Honors

NEW YORK, Nov. 29—(AP). — Looking ahed to the one "big shot" against Joe Louis next summer, Billy Conn, the ambitious Pittsburger, and Lee Savold from Iowa, tangle to-night in Madison Square Garden for twelve rounds or less.

With the supply of available heavyweight challenging material rapidly dwindling to the point where there doesn't seem to be enough around to meet Louis' demands through 1941, the winner tonight is almost a cinch to meet up with the Brown Bomber next year.

Promoter Mike Jacobs has long had a desire to put the Pittsburg pretty boy in there with the Bomber when he grows up to that size. Conn still is able to make the light-heavyweight limit, but in recent months he has put on a pound here and another there, so that he may conceivably be of the heft to toss in with the big fellow next summer without the authorities intervening.

Like Conn, Savold is a "picture" fighter who attracts the customers. This is evidenced by the fact Promoter Mike expects some 14,000 to 15,000 fans on hand to-night, compiling a gross gate of about $35,000, which is not to be sneezed at these days.

Savold definitely can punch, particularly with a solid left. While he's a long-shot underdog to-night he is by all odds the toughest heavyweight the light-heavyweight champion has taken on since he invaded the "big league."

This corner, however, likes Billy boy this time. Although only 175, Conn has proved he can handle heavyweights of Savold's size — about 185 pounds. He knocked out Bob Pastor and he trounced Al McCoy in his most recent outings.

Savold, on the other hand, is on the up-grade at the moment, after a couple of years of getting nothing but bruises for his time in the ring. He has made only one previous appearance in Madison Square Garden, knocking out Jim Robinson early this year.

Westclox Take Four Points From Grafton's

Fred Martin's Nationals rolled off 3407, with new pins, to win first place again in City League team scoring at Duffus Alleys last night. Four of the six matches staged ended in 3 to 1 decisions while two teams were turned back by the 4-0 route when Westclox and Raine's blanked Grafton's and Centre Theatre. F. Worsencroft of Raine's was the high individual performer for the evening with 761 while two big singles went to Tommy Miller and Walter Crary. Miller nailed a 355 game and Crary a 332.

Brinton Ladies turned in their third straight win in the challenge match when they defeated a Mercantile League team three straight games.

By FRED D. CRAIG

Plenty of entertainment is coming up for basketball fans tonight and tomorrow night with the Ladies' Softball League holding the boards in the Y.W.C.A. gym tonight and the hectic Y.M.C.A. league staging its usual sizzling doubleheader on Saturday night. In this evening's twin bill at the Y.W.C.A. both Y teams will see action against each other in the first game. In the second fixture tonight Quaker Cubs make their debut for the season, tackling the team that beat their sister organization last week, the Westclox girls. Both games promise to be lively battles. The program for this evening is somewhat changed from the announced schedule. Quaker Aces and St. John's were to have met in the first game but this clash has been postponed and will be played sometime within the next two weeks. Instead the two Y.W.C.A. squads have been tossed in against each other and there is natural curiosity as to how the Cadets will fare against the more experienced Gym team.

* * * * * *

Tomorrow night the Y.M.C.A. League will cut loose with another pair of thrill-packed games. Defiants who have opened up a two-game lead, by winning three in a row, the last two in overtime, are billed to meet the powerful Wellingtons and the fur should fly. Defiants by winning this battle can cinch a playoff berth; on the other hand the Iron Dukes are in a three-cornered tie with Spitfires and Hurricanes and need a win to keep out of the last spiot. In the second end of the double feature Spitfires and Hurricanes, each gunning for their second win of the season will clash and it will be a case of no quarter asked or given in this duel between two very evenly matched clubs. So far in this dizzy loop the teams have been battling along with not more than a basket or two between them when all the returns are in and Saturday's doubleheader is almost certain to dish out the same kind of fast, close and exciting basketball.

* * * * * *

Swim enthusiasts will find something decidedly worth while seeing at the Y.M.C.A. pool when a swimming meet will be staged by the swimmers of the Toronto Broadview and Peterborough Y.M.C.A. Al Marshall, Canadian 200-yard breast stroke champion will lead the Peterborough senior team, the other members of which are Ralph Rogow, Jim Brown and Leonard Smith. The Peterborough juniors will be headed by Gordon Wallace and Don Pinch. Among Broadview swimmers seen in action will be the 160-yard junior free style team that broke the Canadian record a short time ago. In addition Coach Gord Minly has lined up a stellar attraction in Stew Heffernan and Chris Hayes, professional divers, who put on an exhibition of straight and burlesque diving that should prove highly entertaining. The whole bill is full of interesting events and the first aquatic program of the winter season rates a big crowd.

Tomorrow's Battle

The prospects, so far, are for a fast field at Varsity Stadium Saturday afternoon when Ottawa Rough Riders and Balmy Beach clash in the opening game of the home-and-home series that will decide Eastern Canada honors. The conditions should not do the Ponton gang any harm. Of course the fleet Tommy and the shifty Daley will find the going in their favor but the Bammies have some fast runners in their own right and they are not likely to do any crabbing because the gridiron is not a sea of mud. Underfoot the conditions should lend themselves to fast football but unless there is a sudden shift to milder weather the fans look to be in for a beating. However the Canadian sport-lover is a tough hombre and a few degrees of frost at a football game are not likely to keep real enthusiasts away from what promises to be one of the best exhibitions of football dished out anywhere in the east this season.

* * * * * *

As for a stab at the result we're going right out to the end of the limb and call Balmy Beach to win by a small margin. There is always, however, the chance that the Beach machine will develop stage fright. They are not used to being in the limelight. Usually they go on knocking off the opposition and attracting little attention and less box office business while their fellow townsmen, the Argonauts, get most of the headlines and nearly all the customers. Now the Argos have faded from the scene and the neglected orphans from the O.R.F.U. have moved right to the centre of the stage. It's something new for the Bammies and that is the only element of doubt in the whole setup. However, we do believe that they will allow that condition to get them down. They'll likely be out there tomorrow with the throttle wide open.

* * * * * *

Many football fans, here and elsewhere, are counting upon taking in the game via the air waves. It is assumed that the CBC which broadcast the Big Four final series will continue to serve the big army of football set-owners who are demanding that they be supplied with an adequate air report of the Ottawa-Balmy Beach clash. Incidentally while we are on this point an orchid or two should be passed on to Roy Dilworth for the fine job he has been doing in his play-by-play description of recent Big Four battles. Broadcasting Canadian football is not the softest job in the world but Dilworth, by his quick and accurate story of the play, has been making it sound easy. Next football game you are at just try to glimpse what defense formation is being used by the defending team, what players are in the secondary and tertiary and then in the next second or two endeavor to describe who gets the ball when snapped and what happens. It is a little test that will illustrate the difficulty of play-by-play descriptions over the air.

The Rangers Drop Another

The New York Rangers who used to regard games with the Amerks as just a formality are probably changing their minds about this time. A few days ago the Patrick men clashed with Red Dutton's melange and although they managed to eke out a win the game cost them the services of Art Coulter, star defenseman for at least a month. Last night the Rangers again tangled with the Amerks and this time they not only did not win the argument but Alex Shibicky, their clever left wing player was badly damaged by a crash into the boards and a possible fracture of the shoulder. The game itself was a gruelling battle with Rangers taking their third loss in a row 2 to 1. They led 1 to 0 until the last period on a goal by Watson but Murray Armstrong and Harvey Jackson scored on assists from Egan in the final session to give the Amerks a much-appreciated win.

In spite of his size and the crashing manner in which he can plough through an opposing line Tony Golab, Ottawa half is one of those brittle birds who is always breaking something. Last season injuries kept him out of a number of games and already this campaign he has run into a lot of tough luck in the shape of casualties. Now on the eve of the first battle for the Eastern honors it has been discovered that the big fellow broke a rib last Saturday in the battle with Argos and as a result he will not be used against Balmy Beach tomorrow unless it is absolutely necessary. It may be found imperative to toss him in there at that and under the weather and field conditions likely to prevail tomorrow there are nicer places to be with a cracked rib than in a football game.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Bill Calladine scored the first goal for Philadelphia last night as the Ramblers defeated the Hershey Bears 4 to 1....Piedmont League umpire has been awarded $4,500 damages as the result of an automobile accident. It is a good job the case did not have to go to a jury just after a close decision against the home team ....Oshawa have climbed up to fourth place in the senior group.... Harry Hurst, Montreal lightweight has still to lose his first professional fight. Last night he scored a technical knockout against Billy Bullock in Washington....Detroit and Chicago clash tonight in an important N.H.L. game. The teams are battling it out for the second berth in the league standing and there should be plenty of action in this particular clash.

Don Lash Wins For Seventh Time

DETROIT, Nov. 29—(AP). — Don Lash, the former Indiana University trackman, accomplished the expected yesterday as he ran away with his seventh straight National Senior Amateur Athletic Union cross-country championship.

Lash covered the 10,000-metre course at the Meadowbrook Country Club in the startling time of 30 minutes 25 8-10 seconds, almost two full minutes better than the mark of 32:17.2 that he set in 1934.

Also lacking in surprise was the convincing victory of the New York Athletic Club in the team event. The victors placed five men in the first nine for a total of 23 points, 27 less than the total scored by second-place Michigan Normal.

Michigan State College was third with 70 points, and the Shanahan Catholic Club of Philadelphia, fourth, with 83 points. Last in the team race was the Norfolk Young Men's Association, of Roxbury, Mass., with 99 points.

The Millrose Athletic Association of New York did not defend its team title.

Lash and fifty-two other runners started the race over the snow and ice-covered course, and of the 26-year-old Indianian's challengers only one—Gregory Rice, formerly of Notre Dame—was able to offer a serious threat to the champion.

Rice, one of the leaders from the start, stayed close on Lash's heels when the Indiana State policeman took the lead after a mile and one-half of running. He was only 100 yards back at the end of five miles but lacked the kick to better Lash's finish and wound up in the neighborhood of 200 yards back.

In third position almost two minutes behind the winner was Luigi Reccali of the New York A.C., who put on a nice finish to nose out Tom Quinn of Michigan Normal.

It marked the second straight year that Rice has trailed Lash to the tape. In 1939 at Newark Rice was only 20 yards behind.

STAFFORD, Kas., Nov. 29.—(AP) —Mrs. F. L. Heyens walked in on three men holding up her husband in his gun shop. Ignoring their shouted "hands up!" sheopened fire. One surrendered. The other two fled, but were captured after a 90-mile an hour chase by sheriff's officers.

AMERICANS SET THE RANGERS BACK TO CLIMB OUT OF CELLAR

Jackson Scores Payoff Tally In 2-1 Victory

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The point has been reached where it hardly would be amiss to have an ambulance on hand outside Madison Square Garden in New York every time those two Manhattan rivals, the Rangers and the Americans, meet in National Hockey League combat.

The New York clubs have met only twice this season, but out of those two encounters has come a heavy list of casualties. The hospital charts seem to indicate that Rangers have suffered most, to the point where their chances of finishing up in the top flight might be endangered.

The first meeting between the teams, on November 19, resulted in a 3-2 victory for Rangers and two casualties to each side. Those sent to the sidelines for varying lengths of time were Defenceman Petei Slobodian and Goalie Earl Robertson of Americans and Defenceman Art Coulter and Forward Dutch Hiller of Rangers.

Robertson and Hiller have returned to action, but Slobodian is likely to remain on the sidelines for another three weeks while a fractured cheek-bone mends and Coulter is likely to need another two weeks for a broken bone in his right shoulder to heal properly.

The loss of Coulter has taxed the Rangers' defence heavily, for Coulter is recognized as one of the steadiest rearguards in the league. But Rangers suffered an equally heavy blow last night, as Americans topped them 2-1, when Alex Shibicky was injured near the end of the second period.

Fear Shoulder Break.

The clever left winger, one of Rangers' better scorers, was taken to hospital to be X-rayed for a possible break in his right shoulder. Shibicky was hurt in a mixup along the boards but said he did not know who toppled him.

The Americans gained their victory, one which sent them hurling out of the cellar into a fourth-place tie with Boston Bruins, through goals in the third period by Murray Armstrong and Harvey (Busher) Jackson. The Ranger goal was scored by Phil Watson late in the second period, while Jackson's winning tally came with less than two minutes of the game left.

The winners were without the services of Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty for the third period. The former Toronto Goodyears' amateur entered the contest with an already-injured knee, which received a further buffeting during the first two periods. He gave way to Squee Allen for the last session.

The all-New York clash was the only game up for decision last night, but to-night Chicago Black Hawks invade Detroit for a game against the Red Wings. The Wings can consolidate their hold on second place with a victory, but would be forced to share the runner-up spot with the Hawks if the Hawks win.

Sports Spice

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, Nov. 29—(AP).—Tattle tales: Lou Nova has a magazine piece coming out next month that will be a shocker—to some folks—also, Arch Ward, the Chicago sports editor, has had a brand new set of fellers from the pro footballers. (You'll recall he turned down a $25,000 a year bid a year ago)... Everybody around the Giants thinks the world and all of Gabby Hartnett, but they say he's out of the picture as boss farmer at Jersey City ...Billy Conn is 1-3 over Lee Savold tonight—just the same, a lot of guys on Broadway have the idea the good-looking Pittsburgher may get tagged for once.

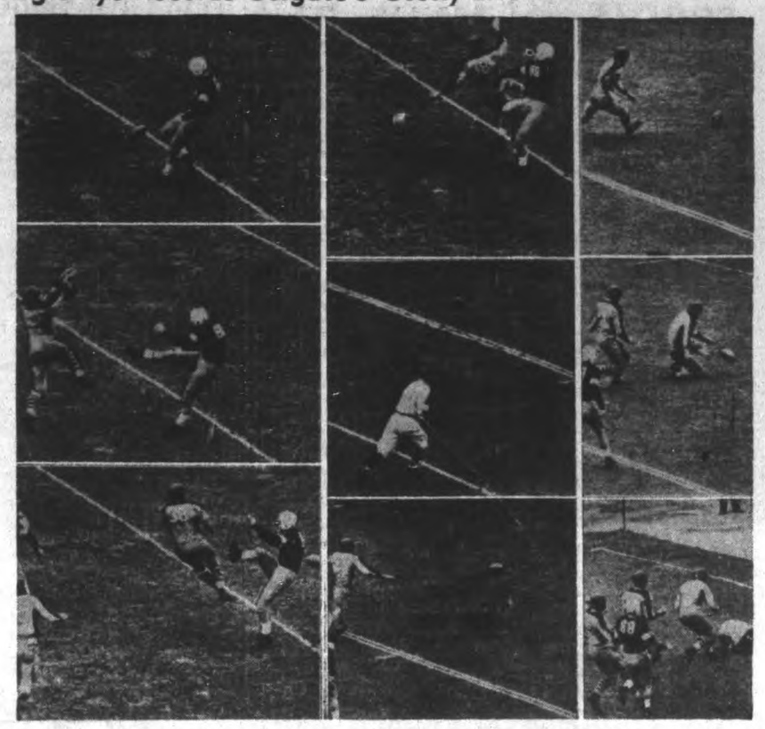
Today's guest star:

Jack Miley, New York Post: "I see by the papers that Col. John Reed Kilpatrick of Madison Square Garden is going to try to bring back honest rassling, which is a much tougher job than bringing back my bonnie to me—and they've both been away about the same length of time ...If he succeeds this will be the most stupendous single-handed achievement since Houdini made the elephant disappear, and then had to retire because he couldn't think of a bigger trick to use as an encore."

The all-America:

Nominations for our own all-American football team: Spirit of Notre Dame, eyes of Texas, marriage of William and Mary, hard of Knox, dead of centre, holdem of Yale, poo-poo of Purdue and hall of Columbia.

Magic Eye Records Colgate's Costly Error



Lou Little's Columbia Lions were trailing Colgate 7 to 0 in the first quarter of their game at Baker field, New York, when a Columbia punt put the Red Raiders of Colgate deep in their own territory. Carl Kinscherf, of Colgate, dropped back to punt out of danger—but he didn't drop back far enough and Justin McIntyre, Columbia's right guard, came through to block the punt, and knock the ball into the end zone where Columbia End Barber fell on to it for a Columbia touchdown. The play is shown here by the magic eye camera. As the series starts we see Kinscherf swinging his foot to connect with the pigskin—and also see McIntyre coming into the picture with arms overhead to block the punt—the next picture shows him just at the moment he batted the ball down. Then as other Columbia players come into the pilture Kinscherf and McIntyre seem to do an adagio dance while the ball bounds beyond them. One of the field officials races the ball as it bounds over the goal marker. Players of both teams race after the ball with End Barber (41) in the lead. As the ball quite quietly bounds around in the end zone, End Barber rounds it up, and falls on it to bring up six points for Columbia. Columbia won the ball game 20 to 17. Their first victory in eight games with Colgate.

Odds Slackening As Beaches Threat Rises

TORONTO, Nov. 29 — (CP). — The longer one studies Toronto Balmy Beach football club, the more convinced the observer becomes that they carry as potent a challenge as Ottawa Rough Riders, the Glamor Boys of Eastern football, have faced all season.

They clash here tomorrow in the first game of a two-game, total-points series for the Eastern and Canadian Rugby Union championship, and the odds on Ottawa have been falling since the first of the week as the Balmy players' confidence spreads.

It is impossible to tell from their season's play if the Balmies are really a great football club, great enough to lick the Interprovincial Union's two-time champions with such "name" players as Tony Golab, Sam Sward, Andy Tommy, Murray Griffin, Dave Sprague and Bunny Wadsworth, to mention only a few.

But their record shows eight straight victories and their goal-line uncrossed in the last two play-off games against Sarnia Battery. They have yielded only 12 points in the eight Ontario Union games while scoring 99. The question of the opposition's calibre, apart from Sarnia, is the only cloud to mar these achievements.

Their line is big, fast and strong, led by Bob Reid, Cec Foderingham, Bruce Barron, Gord Shields and George Downard. Their backs are versatile. The left-footed Bob Porter may have to yield something, but not much, to Sam Sward's kicking distance, but there is no surer safety man than the big, amiable Porter.

Crowe Among the Threats

Don Crowe, Jack Frizelle and Bill Drinkwater are all young and fast-running backs, rounded into a fine attacking unit by the plunging of Frank Seymour and Johnny Manson. They have an amazing variety of plays breaking from an unusual T-formation.

These are the men who will carry the mail for Beaches against a machine which subdued classy big four opposition without a great deal of trouble. The Riders have everything Beaches possess and it seems to be a question of which club can execute the work better.

Against a line that charges as fast and hard as Beaches, the Ottawa end run may boomerang into the fumbles that have plagued Riders all season. That the Ottawa line is far from impregnable was shown when Argos went through to block two placement field-goal attempts last Saturday.

Beaches will miss Syd Reynolds, stricken with appendicitis last week. He is a great downfield tackler and a defensive master against an end run. Andy Tommy, Riders' greatest scoring threat, will be all the harder to stop because of Reynolds' absence.

With cold weather holding, it appears as if the teams will play on a dry but rock-hard surface. This observer thinks Beaches will win the first game, but not by enough to take the round in Ottawa's Lansdowne Park the following Saturday.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press).

Phil Watson of New York Rangers shoved a half-dozen other players out of the National Hockey League's Big Seven last night by scoring a goal as his team lost 2-1 to New York Americans. The point picked up by the Ranger player sent him into a fifth place tie with George Allen and Mush March of Chicago Black Hawks. Another Ranger, Bryan Hextall, gained an assist on Watson's goal and went into a third place tie with Gordie Drillon of Toronto. Both Drillon and Hextall are a point behind the leaders, Syl Apps of Toronto and Syd Howe of Detroit.

The leaders:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Apps, Toronto	5	5	10
Howe, Detroit	4	6	10
Drillon, Toronto	5	4	9
Hextall, Rangers	4	5	9
Allen, Chicago	5	2	7
March, Chicago	3	4	7
Watson, Rangers	2	5	7

Berwick Marathon Is Won By Brown

BERWICK, Pa., Nov. 29.—(AP).—Ellison (Tarzan) Brown, Narragansett Indian from Westerly, R.I., outran a field of 22 competitors today to win the thirty-first annual Berwick marathon over a snow-covered, rugged 9¼-mile course.

Brown, who led most of the way despite pressure from Leslie Pawson, Pawtucket, R.I., was clocked in 50:35, good time for the course, made treacherous by snow, ice and highway construction.

Pawson finished fifteen yards behind the leader, and was more than fifty yards out in front of Edward Blackwell of Philadelphia, who came in third.

Lou Gregory, Cleveland, N.Y., school teacher, who won last year, failed to finish to-day.

Indians Battle Springfield 1-1 Overtime

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 29. — (CP) Both Cleveland Barons and Springfield Indians might command the due respect accorded to leaders in their respective American League sections, but each evidently is just another hockey club to the other.

Both have been rolling along at a merry clip to open wide margins at the top of their divisions,—Cleveland in the western section and Springfield in the eastern. The pair clashed last night, and after 10 extra minutes, the result was still a stalemate. Playing on the home ice of the Indians, the section leaders battled to a 1-1 overtime draw. Springfield drew first blood when Fred Hunt lifted a backhander into the net half-way through the second period after a scoreless first frame, but Norm Locking tied it up at 14:38 of the third period on a pass from Joffre Desilets.

The battle was a costly one for the Indians, who are leading their section by five points over the second-place New Haven Eagles, as Centre Max Kaminsky suffered a probable shoulder fracture. The draw left Cleveland with a clear margin of six points over the idle Pittsburg Pirates in the western section.

Three other inter-sectional games were played last night. New Haven moved a point closer to Springfield by whipping Buffalo, 6-1; Philadelphia Ramblers kept a point behind New Haven in third place with a 4-1 victory over Hershey Bears, and Indianapolis Capitals scored the only triumph for the western section by defeating Providence Reds, 2-1.

At New Haven, the Eagles scored two counters in each period, while holding Buffalo to a single tally in the second session. Marcel Tremblay and Gus Mancusco counted the opening period goals while Jack Cain and Polly Drouin scored in the second period after Tony Hemmerling had counted for Buffalo.

The Eagles finished the scoring on tallies by George Mantha and another by Drouin in the last period. Farmed to New Haven just before the game by the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens, Defenceman Tony Graboski helped in one of the Eagles tallies.

Indianapolis meanwhile kept well ahead of the cellar-dwelling Buffalo in the western section with their close victory over Providence, last place team in the eastern division. Playing at home, the Capitals went two goals up on counters by Carl Liscombe and Buck Jones in the final period before Normie Mann scored for Providence.

A crowd of about 7,100 at Hershey watched the home-town Bears lose to Philadelphia Ramblers. The first period was scoreless but the Ramblers went into a 2-0 lead in the next on counters by Norm Calladine and Herb Foster.

McCreavy cut the lead to one-goal early in the final frame but tallies by Lude Wareing and Johnny Polich gave the Ramblers a clear margin in the closing minutes.

YPS Of Omemee Prepares Play

OMEMEE, Nov. 29 — (ENS). — The regular meeting of the Young People of Trinity United Church was held on Monday evening, with Christian Culture convener Miss Christina Connell in charge. Eleanor Sherin read the Scripture lesson and Miss Marion Rea read a commentary on the Scripture.

In the absence of Roberta Deyell, Eleanor Sherin acted as secretary. Plans are under way for a three-act play to be produced during the winter and for a pageant for Christmas Sunday evening. Christina Connell took the topic for the evening, giving a splendid paper on the life of Neville Chamberlain.

An amateur contest was held by the young people with the following taking part: Eleanor Sherin, Charlie Brooks, Mrs. A. Pitts, Mary Faulkner, Lily Race, Verna Gardiner, Marian Rea, Edith Graham, Hazel Wilson, Dick Vaughan, Alvin Pitts, and Rev. R. M. Patterson.

The regular meeting of the Anglican Young People's Association was held in the basement of the church on Monday evening, taking the form of a presentation for Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bent. Mr. Johnson acted as chairman for the evening. A short program included an instrumental by Miss Lenore Jamieson, and a treasure trail quiz conducted by Jane Magee. George Stephenson held a contest on old sayings and their authors, and Horace Hill gave an interesting reading. Mr. and Mrs. Bent were asked to take chairs at the front of the room and Horace Hill read the address, and Miss Margaret James presented them with a beautiful trilight lamp. Mr. Bent thanked all for the gifts. A social half-hour was enjoyed.

On Tuesday evening the Evening Branch of the Women's Auxiliary met at the rectory for the annual meeting. Miss Lenore Jamieson gave the treasurer's report showing pledges paid in full. Miss Irene Clemett gave the Dorcas report, and Miss Patricia Hunt said she would look after the altar linen for the next two months.

List of officers for 1941 is as follows: President, Mrs. G. H. Johnson; secretary-treasurer, Miss Lenore Jamieson; study book, Miss Patricia Hunt; Dorcas secretary-treasurer, Irene Clemett. The president then closed the meeting with the grace, after which dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Chester, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Williamson, Misses Marie Chester, Mildred Annis, and Harry Burgess and Jack Williamson attended the Dairy Association banquet held in Toronto last Wednesday evening.

A Woman Spoils It

Santa Fe, N.M., Nov. 29 (AP)

IRVING RUBINE, agent for Warner Brother's "Santa Fe Trail" premiere, had a big scene staged to photograph Arleigh Nave, local Indian trader whose hair hangs to his shoulders in best frontier style. To his appointment came Nave, freshly sheared and barbered, with the sheepish exclamation, "Say, I've met a girl here."

Plan To Rescind Pin Ball Bylaw

The city bylaw licensing pin ball games is going to be rescinded, according to a recommendation of the legal committee of the council last night. When that is done they will revert to the supervision of the police authorities and the Crown Attorney. City Solicitor Huycke said court judgments affirmed that the municipal act did not permit licensing of personal property, and that pin ball games were declared to be the personal property of the premises in which they were operated.

Dance halls, billiard rooms and other stated enterprises of that kind were licensible, but there was no mention of the pin table that consume heaps of nickels.

It was said that under the criminal code there was no question of licensing these contraptions, and that it would be the duty of the police to keep an eye on them for any signs of gambling. This phase of the code is aimed at gambling devices, and if that use or purpose could be shown against any pin ball game then it would be contrary to the code, and its penalties would be applicable.

Millbrook IOOF Sponsors Euchre

MILLBROOK, Nov. 29—(ENS).—Continuing its policy of raising its allotment for the War Service Department, the local Oddfellows' Lodge held the second progressive euchre in the series it had planned, on Tuesday evening in the I.O.O.F. Hall, the heavy snow storm which began shortly after six p.m. reducing the attendance far below normal.

Some brave folk ventured in from the country in spite of bad roads and poor visibility, but only seven tables were in use for play. Prize for highest score for the ladies went to Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, who received a dainty pottery bowl for ladies; and for a men to Roy Greer, of Bailleboro, his prize being a tobacco pouch.

Lunch and a social hour closed a pleasant occasion, with the Noble Grand, Brother Harold Tate, in charge.

Miss Mamie Fisher is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. Matheson, Kingston. Many friends here who have met Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Matheson will regret to learn that both are ill, the former in the hospital.

Ankle-Deep Slush For New Yorkers

NEW YORK, Nov 29 — (AP). — Heavy snow, cold rains and chilling winds kept the Northwestern United States under heavy wraps yesterday—three and a half weeks before the official advent of winter.

The season's first major snowstorm swept New York State. The fall measured two inches in the southern sector and eight in the north. The storm—earliest in years in New York City—blended snow, sleet and rain, and left ankle-deep slush in its wake.

The snow cover ranged from three to twelve inches in New England, while high tides swished along the coast, but caused no damage.

North Central Pennsylvania was burdened with a nine-inch deposit and it drifted to fifteen inches in the Pocono Mountains.

Flurries put a fresh top on the snow blanket in several sections of the Midwest, where Tuesday's storms had piled flakes up to a maximum depth of seven inches.

Temperatures dropped to freezing or below in most of the North-Central States. All highways were open, but many were glazed by ice.

In the Texas flood regions hundreds of families have deserted their homes. Rich farm lands were inundated and damage to crops, live stock and houses was reported.

HASTINGS

Y.P.S. Pays Visit To Campbellford

HASTINGS, Nov. 29—(ENS). — A gathering of two church societies took place on Monday evening, when the Young People's Society of Trinity United Church were guests of St. John's, Campbellford, kindred organization.

Thirty-two from Hastings were included among the attendance of over eighty. Mr. Leonard Smith, the Campbellford president, heartily welcomed the guests, then asked the Hastings vice-president, Mrs. Basil Johnston, to take the chair as Hastings had prepared the evening's program.

Miss June Scriver read the scripture, and Mrs. Iden Bonds followed with a commentary on the passages read. Miss Margery Scriver related a story centered on the worship periods topic, "Christian Fellowship."

The pleasing and varied program included a reading, "Mrs. 'Arras at the Telephone," by Mrs. Cecil Oliver; solo, "Playmates," by Miss Lorraine Scott; piano solo by Miss Eleda Buck; reading, "The Crooked-Mouthed Family," by Miss K. German; solo, "'Till The Light of London Shine Again," by Marvyn Preston; reading, "Betty and the Bees," by Martin Rusaw; saxaphone solo, by W. W. Knight, accompanied by Miss Ferne Preston; and selections by the orchestra comprised of W. W. Knight, C. Blackbourne, M. Preston, and Miss Ferne Preston.

Short addresses were given by the Rev. G. N. Maxwell and the Rev. J. E. Glover.

A recreational period was conducted by the Campbellford society after which they served a dainty luncheon The singing of the National Anthem and "There'll Always Be An England," concluded the entertainment.

Mrs C. Rowan Hostess To Bethany Society

BETHANY, Nov. 29 — (ENS). — Members of the W.M.S. of the United Church met at the home of Mrs. C. Rowan in Bethany. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Jackson was in the chair.

The theme of the worship was "The Pilgrim's Way," and those present were told that man, when he really believed, would be moved to action, and that emotions were intended to produce action.

Work of the society in Trinidad, India, and in China was outlined by some of the members, and they were told that the natives of these countries held out open arms to the missionaries, and asked them to "come over and help us."

NOT ONE HORSE

MELBOURNE — (CP). — The whole of the Australian Imperial Force that left the Commonwealth for the war areas was mechanized —not a horse went with it, said Army Minister McBride in reporting on Australian operations.

He Hid The General

TORONTO, Nov. 29 (CP).—FO. L. L. (Slim) Jones of the Royal Air Force recounted today how he had hidden Maj.-Gen. Adrian Carton de Wiart under the bomb rack inside a British Sunderland-flying boat in Namsos Fjord while taking the general to Norway to take charge of the British forces which fought there against the Nazis. Jones was awarded the F.D.C.

Native of Saskatoon, Jones said he was headed for Namsos Fjord where he found a number of Nazi planes bombing a destroyer, with which he was to have a rendezvous.

"We squatted down to find they (the Germans) were knocking the spots off the destroyer," Jones said. "Bombs dropped all around us and we put the general under the bomb rack for safety. After we had floated around for a bit, dodging the bombs, it began to get dark and the Germans had to head for home."

Boom Christmas Trade Seen In US

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—(AP).—The United States Commerce Department predicted today the biggest Christmas stocking of holiday trade that American business has ever enjoyed.

Experts of the department have advised Secretary Jesse H. Jones, it was learned, that their surveys show that the physical volume of Christmas retail trade—sales between Thanksgiving and Christmas—will be the largest on record.

They reported they could not make advance estimates in dollars and cents, but said that, on a value basis, it might be a little under the $5,000,000,0000 record of 1929. They explained that prices of goods are much lower now than in 1929, so that merchants may sell more items without taking in quite as many dollars.

The experts found no lack of gifts on counters because of the war. American-made goods of similar quality, they said, have replaced to a large extent such items as French laces and gloves, Czechoslovakian glassware and textiles, German cameras and musical instruments, Belgian gems and linens, and Italian textiles.

As for toys, the officials announced, that, contrary to popular belief, American factories largely displaced Germany and Japan in the toy market years ago.

Canadian Press Turns Over Service To CBC

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—(CP). — Gladstone Murray, general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, announced to-day that the CBC Board of Governors has approved a contract with the Canadian Press, whereby, effective Jan. 1 next the news-gathering organization turns over its entire news service to the CBC free of charge.

The CBC is setting up a radio news compilation staff with Dan MacArthur of Toronto as chief editor. The staff will prepare news bulletins at Vancouver, Winnepg, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax for use without advertising sponsorship over CBC stations and such other stations as request them.

The provision of its news service without charge is a continuation of the public service policy adopted by The Canadian Press toward radio in 1933. Until 1939, The Canadian Press prepared a bulletin service at its own expense. From July 1, 1939, until the present the CBC has paid the cost of compilation of news bulletins by Canadian Press staff men.

"In lining up his staff, Mr. MacArthur is relying upon the experience of The Canadian Press in the radio-news field over the last seven years," Mr. Murray said. "The co-operation of the management of The Canadian Press in facilitating the shift over to the CBC compiling staff at the year-end has been admirable and invaluable."

The chief editor of the CBC National News Service has almost 20 years of experience in newspaper and publicity work. He spent five years on the staff of the Toronto Globe in the 20's and more recently was for five years with the MacLean Publishing Company. Prior to his appointment he was Ontario representative of the CBC in its press and information department. He is a son of the late Peter MacArthur, noted Canadian writer and journalist.

The new radio set-up will mark the disappearance from the air of "The Canadian Press News" which has been carried in four 15-minute bulletins daily over the CBC network. From Jan. 1, the CBC bulletins will be prepared from the world-wide news service of The Canadian Press and its allies, and from other news services if the CBC so decides.

Under the contract, the CBC agrees to emit its news bulletins over nine CBC-owned stations and 25 privately-owned stations. All privately-owned stations designated as essential for national coverage will receive the service free of charge. Any other stations may receive the service at no other expenes than wire-line cost.

The CBC news service will be maintained on a strictly sustaining basis, with no credit in any announcement to any news agency, newspaper or other newsgathering source, and no commercial sponsorship, direct or indirect.

Under the contract, the CBC will not permit any station in Canada to broadcast news obtained from the columns of any daily newspaper without the newspaper's written authority.

Commenting on the use of transradio news, which is sent from the United States by short wave to some Canadian statoins, Mr. Murray said: "Transradio News Service is not accepted for any network or station of the CBC."

Relaxation From Battle Of Britain

Girl members of an American ambulance corps in England are shown getting their exercise by riding an electric bicycle during their off-duty period. There are 260 surgical units in the ambulance fleet to which these girls belong. They work hard, day and night, when their services are needed and must take their relaxation when and where they can between raids.

Men Of Wilds Are Sky-Watchers

OTTAWA, Nov. 29 — (CP). — Rugged men in lonely places have been organized into a volunteer army of sky-watchers by the Royal Canadian Air Force. Known as the Aircraft Detection Corps, the watchers are an important part of Canada's protection against enemy air raids.

Their duty is to report any aircraft they cannot identify. Then if the Air Force has no knowledge of an aircraft being in an area from which comes a report prompt investigation can be started and measures taken to fight an enemy.

Among the watchers, the Air Ministry said to-day, are fishermen along the east and west coasts, lumbermen, lighthouse keepers, forest rangers, Royal Canadian Mounted Police constables, and Hudson's Bay Company employees at far northern posts.

In the coastal region of Eastern Canada there are more than 700 official observers. On the west coast are some 500. All give their services without pay.

Tough Norsemen Find Slavery Hard To Swallow

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 29 — (CP) — The proud Norsemen whose ancestors produced Lief Eriksen and Erik the Red appeared yesterday to have decided they did not like being conquered and ruled by the Germans, whom they regarded as mere tradesmen in the days of the Haneatic league.

Reports drifted through via the Stockholm, Sweden, newspaper, Dahens Nyheter, that there had been 10 avalanches, apparently started by saboteurs with dynamite, along the Bergen-Oslo Staatsbanner (Railway), one of the world's finest scenic routes in peacetime and which was about as difficult to build as any.

It would be surprising if the people along the Bergen-Oslo line, the southern Trans-Norway line, did not revolt for they have lived for many hundreds of years in a land that produced homesteads such as an early North American would fight for, scholars such as any country would be proud of and explorers like Fridjoff Nansen and Raoul Amundsen who accomplished things no one else has done.

The railway, incidentally, would be an extremely easy work to sabotage. It runs through a vast number of tunnels, one of them 12 miles long, bored through granite. It scales a "ceiling" that scrapes the clouds of a little hamlet called Finse, where it is liable to snow any day in the year and where there are no trees.

Across a narrow bridge over the Hallingdal the road appears to dangle on a wire and the drop is so deep one may often look into it and see nothing more than a cloud blocking the view.

At times it skirts such great ranges as the Hallingskarvet, perpetually snowcapped and with long, steep foothills.

Homes Centuries Old.

The country along the road, once it leaves either Bergen or Oslo, is not dense in population, but the people who live there are descendants of those who have lived off that soil for centuries.

The casual traveller can tell how they have nurtured the land. It is rocky, steep as blazes, and to a Canadian farmer would appear inhospitable. Yet it grows crops on mountain tops so high that the families tether their children and animals for fear they might fall overside and be killed. They haul their supplies of groceries up miniature cable railways, because it would take half a day to climb down and back again.

Those people are tough. One has only to walk into a graveyard at a village along that railway to see how tough they are. The dates of birth and death shows they die young or old. In almost any village near the Bergen end of the railway the traveller will find a little shaft to Norwegian sailors who died out on the wild North Sea trying to tote supplies to the Allies in small ships in the first Great War.

Most of the Norwegians disliked the Germans anyway from knowing them as tourists. They used to say the German was inclined to be ill-mannered and self-assertive, as if he had an inferiority complex.

Your correspondent sat in a restaurant in Oslo one night in happier days and watched a large German sink beers faster than he ever saw them sunk before. He knocked them off—at least once—in five seconds, and then roared for the waiter. The waiters were big and the service became slow. Nothing else happened.

I told that story to a Norwegian naval architect a few days later and he said: "I wish I had been there. It would have given me pleasure to smash his nose in!"

An accident that resulted in some damage to both cars took place on Sunday evening after church, when a passing auto ran into Weston Fallis' sedan, which he had parked in front of Miss L. Kennedy's home, he and Mrs. Fallis having gone in to call on Mr. and Mrs. Richard Matchett. Constable Richards is looking into the matter; the passing motorist, said to be Olan by name, meeting Mr. Fallis on Monday when an amicable adjustment was reached.

Fleet Bombers

British fleet air arm and naval forces have hit four of Italy's six battleships in recent weeks. Three were damaged in the air raid on Taranto Nov. 11.

30 Bombs Miss

After the main part of Wednesday's battle, Fascist bombers attacked in waves late in the afternoon and at one time, the Admiralty said, the Ark Royal "disappeared from sight behind the splashes from about 30 bombs falling close to her.

"She emerged from the spray," however, "with all guns firing furiously, having sustained neither damage nor casualties."

The British press was jubilant over the victory.

Typical headlines:—

The Daily Mail: "Big British naval victory."

The Daily Herald: "Duce's navy smashed again."

The Daily Express: "Six Italian ships hit as they raced away."

(The Rome radio said an "important British naval formation" was attacked several times by Italian planes west of Malta yesterday afternoon and that the bombardments were believed to have been "very effective." There was no immediate comment in London on the report.)

(The Italian high command, in its story of the Sardinia fight issued earlier yesterday, listed the Fascist casualties as "serious" damage to a destroyer and a hit by a dud shell on a cruiser. This version said two British cruisers were damaged by shell fire while three other British warships including a battleship and an aircraft carrier, were bombed.)

The Admiralty said the 10,000-ton British cruiser Berwick was hit twice, resulting in the deaths of seven men, including an officer. The damage, however, was slight and "the ship is ready for service."

A British fighter plane was shot down, the Admiralty communique said, while two Italian bombers were destroyed.

making these concessions it was our definite duty when the emergency was over to see that they did not suffer as a result. I do not think there can be any doubt about that," Mr. McLarty said.

Details Efforts

The minister gave a detailed account of the efforts of his department to maintain the supply of skilled workmen for war industries, through vocational training and co-operation with industry which conducts training classes.

But this might not be enough, and extension of the work week from 44 to 48 might be necessary. The high rate of Sunday and overtime pay also might have to be changed, since they were "punitive" rates designed to prevent unnecessarily long hours when no emergency existed.

One of the studies being made in his department had to do with use of men in non-essential industries, the minister said.

A survey was being made to establish a list of such industries which employ men in the trades where a shortage of men was in prospect, and to determine the number so employed.

"It may be found necessary to deny such industries the right to engage any additional men required in the essential occupation," he said, "and, secondly, to transfer some of their skilled labor to war industries."

Mr. McLarty was the eighth cabinet minister to speak in the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne. He was followed by private members representative of all parties in the House.

Future Plans

Today Prime Minister Mackenzie King may have an announcement concerning some further business planned for the present stage of the session before the long Christmas adjournment which now seems likely to come about the middle of next week.

Mr. King also said he might make a statement today on progress of the war, with especial reference to recent reports of heavy damage to British war industries and dwindling British financial resources.

Aside from Mr. McLarty's speech, yesterday's debate was featured by the maiden speech of Alfred Bence (Con. Saskatoon), who declared much of the difficulty in the wheat-growing areas of Western Canada could have been avoided by an adequate government policy in relation to farm-stored wheat.

Mr. Bence advocated wider distribution of war industries so labor might be more equitably utilized. This would enable all parts of the country to aid in the war effort and facilitate post-war adjustment.

D. King Hazen (Con. Saint John-Albert) complained of alleged waste in military camp construction and expressed fear there was political patronage in war contracts despite the Prime Minister's declaration against it.

She was highly esteemed and loved by all, both here and in Toronto as was seen by the large numbers who attended the funeral.

She leaves to mourn the loss of a loving mother, two sons, Michael and Lyolo of Toronto; five daughters, Mrs. Norma Phalen of California; the Misses Clara, Harriet, Reta and Moira, all of Toronto; two sisters, Mrs. Clara McGuire of Michigan, and Miss B. A. Morrissey of Lindsay.

U.F.O. Outlook Never Brighter

TORONTO, Nov. 29—(CP).—The outlook for the United Farmers of Ontario has never been brighter, H. H. Hannam, secretary-treasurer of the organization, reported at the annual convention here yesterday.

Membership has been maintained on practically the same basis as last year, the United Farmers' Co-operative Company showed one of the best financial statements in its history, and the rural co-operator was in its fifth year of publication.

"The times are on our side," he said. "There is no-one who can successfully challenge the program or fundamental ideals back of this movement. Slowly but surely the people are turning toward it in large numbers."

Because its financial support came entirely from within the organization, the Rural Co-operator had "stood on its own feet and made pronouncements on policy and decisions on procedure in the best interests of farm people and agriculture" without having to modify its views.

"It stands to-day as a good example of democracy in action at its best form," Mr. Hannam said.

Leonard Harman of Toronto, acting educational secretary, reported on the work of the organization in providing programs of farm and co-operative organization for women's young people's and farmers' clubs throughout the province. He recommended that the service be extended.

TO REMOVE TREES.

Nihill Munro, recent buyer of a terrace on the west side of Park street, north of Townsend street, applied to the Board of Works last night for permission to cut down a row of Manitoba maples in front of the houses because the trees were damaging them.

Alderman McCannon observed that the trees at least afforded shade to the occupants during the hot days of summer, and City Engineer Parsons said he would willingly remove Manitoba maples wherever they were. Apparently they did not have a friend around the aldermanic board, and Mr. Munro's request was referred to Mr. Parsons with the suggestion that he arrange next season to have them replaced with more acceptable trees.

Rambling Reporter

COMMUTERS.

The day of family trips on railways are apparently gone, and Peterborough had two little citizens who had never been on a train; they were both under seven years of age.

The grandmother of the pair offered them a train ride, but first had them save their own fares. After what must have seemed years, the kiddies found themselves at the depot ticket office, into little pockets plunged little fists for money which was exchanged for tickets to—Lakefield.

In Lakefield they bought mommy and daddy each a handkerchief, and mailed postal cards to some of their friends. After an hour spent there the train whistle blew, and it was time to return. The two kiddies and the considerate grandmother were the only occupants of the coach, and the children were amazed at the speed of the train, and intrigued with all of its delightful noises. —J. W. Man Is Knocked Down While Crossing Street

R. A. McGrath, Cloyne, Ont., a guest at the Empress Hotel, had a narrow escape from serious injury when he was struck and knocked down by an automobile as he was crossing George street at Simcoe late last night.

The car was driven by Thomas Jackson, 173 Adeline street, who was travelling south on George street as McGrath started to cross the north-east corner. Jackson told police that the man started to run as if he were trying to beat the car. The driver said that he swerved his machine trying to avoid hitting McGrath and as a result the car struck a pole at the corner and was damaged to some extent.

McGrath who was knocked down said that he was not hurt but Jackson insisted upon taking him to a doctor, who reported that apparently the man had suffered no injury from the accident.

Cards To Be Sent To City Voters

The city council's helpful custom of sending post cards to all municipal voters advising them where they go to mark their ballots at the elections on New Year's Day will be continued this year.

The cost is about $150, and although Alderman Gordon commented that there were not many residential changes in the year and the service might be discontinued as an economy the finance committee decided to provide this direction again. The motion to that effect by Alderman Roy, seconded by Alderman Wilson, was carried without dissent.

SANTA FE, N.M., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Because "$10 is too high" for a ticket, Governor John Miles vetoed plans for an inaugural ball. He begins his second term January 1.

Anstruther School Pupils Given Holiday-Teacher Is At Camp

The long arm of the Compulsory Military Training Act reached out this month to deprive eight northern Peterborough county pupils of their teacher.

Alfred Patterson, 22-year-old Toronto man, who is the teacher at Tucker's School, four miles north of Apsley, was one of the 30,000 young Canadians called up in the second draft, with the result that his pupils are on a 30-day holiday.

The school, located in a sparsely-settled section of Anstruther Township, has an attendance of eight, one of the pupils being in entrance class. This boy, Jack Tucker, lives about the same distance from the Apsley School as he does from the school he normally attends, so he just switched schools for the 30 days.

Not Neglecting Pupils.

Leo W. Copp, School Inspector, learned to-day that the trainee-teacher was not neglecting his pupils, but was corresponding with some of the pupils assisting them in their work in this manner.

Inquiry at the Exhibition Grounds Camp revealed that Patterson is not on the nominal roll, therefore he was probably called to the camp nearest his Toronto address, either Long Branche or Newmarket.

The School Board could hire a teacher for the thirty-day period, but it would be difficult to obtain one for so short a time.

The fact that there is a scarcity of teachers would make it even more difficult. Mr. Copp remarked that several teachers who had allowed their certificate to lapse were now considering renewing it, and if this happened the teacher shortage occasioned by the war enlistments might be alleviated.

It is unlikely that the compulsory military training will affect any of the other teachers in this county.

Past Presidents Take Charge Kinsmen Dinner

Past Presidents' Night, an annual feature with the Kinsmen Club, was held at the Empress Hotel Thursday night and it was a gala affair.

It is the last regular meeting of the year, and the last at which Vern Selkirk, retiring president, will have charge. In a valedictory talk to the members, Mr. Selkirk made a strong plea to the men to invest to the last quarter possible in War Savings Stamps and thus help win the war. "If we are to avoid inflation, a period of depression after the war, and win this war, everyone must invest until it hurts in War Savings Stamps."

"One War Savings Stamp has six times the value of a war bond, because it reduced the purchasing power of the individual is used for internal purchases, not for international financing."

Must Dig Down.

"If everyone digs down and buys War Savings Stamps systematically, we will not only finance the war as we go and avoid excessive taxation but we will assure a boom industrial period after the war instead of a depression.

"This is my final message as I bow out of the president's chair, and as a war veteran I want to tell you that we haven't started to pay as yet. Do your bit at home and urge on all your family circle and your friends the need for cash immediately.

Mr. Selkirk spoke feelingly of the fine spirit of co-operation that prevailed throughout his term of office, and the happiness he enjoyed from the associations during the year. "This club has set a high standard of service, let us always carry on in the same manner."

The meeting was turned over to Alex. Elliott, M.P.P., the first president of the Club when it was formed ten years ago, and Mr. Elliott called on each of the past presidents, Wilson Craw, Dr. Mark Crough, Kel Sheehy, Alex. Sollitt, Don Loucks and Paul Johnston for a few words.

Most of the men reminisced and told some fine stories of good times in the past and of the obstacles that were overcome in the service problems to the community.

Paul Johnston, of Toronto, former manager of the Bell Telephone Company here, said attending the meeting was "just like coming home."

Three-Fold Motto.

"I would suggest to you Kinsmen that you have a three-fold motto: fun, work and optimism, and this will carry you through the dark years ahead. Your club demands work from each of you in the form of unselfish service effort for the good of the community and remember this, it is always the busiest man who has the most time for worthwhile service work."

He told of the incurable optimism that exists in England where German bombers and long range guns are playing havoc with century-old architectural gems, and killing many people, and he paid tribute to the spirit of the English people.

"Many people who were pacifists in the old days have changed their opinions now, and regret that cadet training and the militia did not get the consideration that they deserved.

"I'm sure every Kinsman will do his part in this war and I am proud of the fact that five of our members are now on active service."

The five members on active service are Major James Turnbull, Major Herb Mason and Lieut. Don Scott of the Glengarry Highlanders Flying Officer Emmett F. Sheehy of the R.C.A.F., Lieut. Ted Chalmers of the Engineers.

Sapper Recaptured

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(CP Cable)—Sapper H. R. Spence, 22, of the Canadian Active Service Force, was arrested in London yesterday after a daring escape from the guard room of a military camp in Southern England. Spence was awaiting sentence after his conviction at a court martial on a charge of manslaughter. He shot a soldier in the barracks in July. It is understood he will likely be sent back to Canada.

He Looked To See If A Train Was Coming—It Was

Art Hill owned this car, which was demolished Tuesday when it got sandwiched between this shunted box car and the small concrete block building. Elgar Speers, who was driving it, stopped the car to see if there was a train coming. There was a crash as the box car caught the front bumper and pulled it north. Speers got out in time, returned to his employer, Mr. Hill, and reported, "Your car is smashed to pieces. A train just hit it." It took two wrecking trucks to haul the remains away.

Doctor Unable To Recall Woman's Mental State

Judge D. B. Coleman of Whitby began this morning the third day of the hearing of the Mrs. Margaret Anker will case, and announced at the noon adjournment that he would sit only until four o'clock this afternoon because of heavy snow on the highways requiring him to leave earlier than usual to reach home by night.

Mrs. Anker's will, made in 1934, is being contested by her sister, Mrs. Catherine Hill. By its terms she left the most of her estate to St. Joseph's Hospital, the only material change from the first one in 1932 by which the corresponding residue was to go to two nieces, Miss Etta Hill and Mrs. L. O'Connor.

The members of the bar present this morning were Jacob Low for Mrs. Hill and Miss Hill, Leo Hanlon and L. O'Connor; W. B. Gordon for the executor, M. James O'Brien, Wm. Fox for St. Joseph's Hospital, and C. P. Clover representing the Official Guardian on behalf of V. L. O'Connor.

The first witness this morning, Dr. H. V. Dobson, recalled that his last attendance on Mrs. Anker was June 11, 1934, and the first was in September, 1932.

"At first she gave evidence of having suffered a cerebral hemmorhage with partial paralysis and had high blood pressure. The details of visits in 1932 are hazy. I recall she exhibited some difficulty in expressing herself while she was at O'Connor's."

Witness said he could remember G. N. Gordon telephoning him on one occasion, but not the subject of the call.

Mr. Low: "Do you recall a conversation with any of her relatives about Mrs. Anker's ability to make a will?"

Dr. Dobson: "At this late date I do not recall any details of a conversation at that time."

Dr. Dobson also said he could not remember details of why he discontinued his calls on Mrs. Anker.

To Mr. Gordon, witness said he had no recollection of having said to Miss Etta Hill: "Let her (Mrs. Anker) make a will. It won't stand up in court."

Judge Coleman: "Could you help in telling us whether you think Mrs. Anker was of a mental condition to make a will?"

Dr. Dobson: "At this late date I am not in a position to swear that. I might add that a patient's condition may vary from day to day."

Witness said he had no recollection of being asked by G. N. Gordon to see Mrs. Anker at the hospital, or that he had told Mr. Gordon he was satisfied she could make a will.

Dr. Dobson replied to His Honor that the conversation with Mr. Gordon might have taken place, but he had no memory of it. Reference to his record of visits showed no call on Mrs. Anker in 1934.

Miss Etta Hill was recalled to the stand for cross-examination by Mr. Gordon. She testified that she had opened Mrs. Anker's safety deposit box at the bank three weeks after her death.

"Miss Armstrong of Mr. Gordon's office told me to get it. I got the 1932 will, a codecil and a sheet of instructions written on a page of St. Joseph's Hospital stationery. I went to the C.D.S. waiting room and looked through the papers."

Miss Hill said she glanced through the papers including the first will, and added that she never thought at any time it was good, because she did not think Mrs. Anker was mentally capable of making a will at that time in 1932. It was this testament which allotted the bulk of the estate to Miss Hill and Mrs. O'Connor.

Mr. Fox asked Miss Hill about her previous statement that she had looked after the payment of the majority of accounts paid the hospital.

Miss Hill said the cheques were made out by some members of the staff at the Bank of Montreal and she would take them to the hospital for Mrs. Anker to make her mark in the presence of two witnesses, and then hand the cheques to a Sister at the desk in the hospital.

Mr. Fox said it was his information that until January 1, 1937, Sister Elizabeth would make out Mrs. Anker's account cheques and take them to her to have her put her mark on them. Miss Hill said that was not true, because she could clearly recall having endorsed some cheques at Mr. Mackay's request. She said the cheques were usually made out by Mr. Jones or Mr. Johnston. She said she had never written Mrs. Anker's name on a cheque.

Miss Hill said she could clearly remember paying Mrs. Anker's first board account at the hospital in August, 1933. Some time after that Mrs. Anker was able to go out oftener and she did more buying for herself.

From January 1, 1937, the account cheques were made out by one of the men at the bank, and Miss Hill said she would take the cheques to the hospital.

Mr. Fox said he was informed the cheques were sent to the hospital and Siser Marie would take them to Mrs. Anker. Miss Hill said they might have gone a few times by mail, but usually she telephoned the bank about them and took them over.

Mr. Fox: "Did you ever have any written authority to take care of Mrs. Anker's bills?"

Miss Hill: "No, sir."

Witness declared that she did not know of any extravagance between herself or her mother and Mrs. Anker.

"Do you recall that Mrs. Anker said 'Get out and never come back,' the day she raised her cane?"

Miss Hill: "I cannot recall that. I never saw her act like that before."

Mr. Fox: "You remained away from your aunt for two years, until 1937?"

"I would not say two year."

Mr. Fox pointed out that Miss Hill said Dr. Dobson told her to stay away for a while, and she did stay away nearly two years.

Miss Hill said she could recall one occasion when she was at the hospital in October, 1936.

Mr. Fox: "Was there no other reason that kept you away so long?"

Miss Hill: "No, sir."

She said Mrs. Anker "never visited our place after she went to the hospital.

"Why did she stop going to your place "

Miss Hill: "I can't tell you."

James O'Brien

Mr. James O'Brien, executor of the will, declared that he had made no arrangements for Mrs. Anker to go to the hospital, had made no telephone calls and had nothing to do with it.

"In fact I was surprised when I found she had gone to the hospital because I thought she was getting along all right at O'Connors. Mrs. Anker told me Mrs. O'Connor wasn't very good to her and she decided to go to the hospital.

Mr. O'Brien said he was not related to Mrs. Anker, but had known her and her son for nearly fifty years, had visited them in Rochester, and her son had made trips to Peterborough.

"She doted on the boy," Mr. O'Brien said. When he went to Rochester in 1930, he saw the boy was not going to get better, and his mother appeared to be depressed by his condition.

Mr. O'Brien testified that there were times when he saw Mrs. Anker at the hospital when she seemed depressed.

Judge Coleman asked the plaintiff to clarify the expression "depressed."

"Times when she did not seem to be herself," Mr. O'Brien said.

"Still I don't understand what you mean," His Honor said.

"Not as bright as on other days," witness added.

Judge Coleman: "Do you mean that she was not normal on those occasions?"

Mr. O'Brien: "She wouldn't seem just normal.

Continuance of the case was held up this afternoon pending negotiations of a settlement between the heirs named in the first and those named in the second will.

Mint Runs Behind

DENVER, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Having trouble making enough money? So is the Denver mint. Although it is working at capacity—three shifts seven days a week—the mint is behind on treasury orders for the first time since the first Great War. Mint officials attribute the increased demand for coins to Chirstmas shopping, tax paying, more coin machines in use and generally better business.

6,830 Users Of Electricity Are Served By Utilities Commission

A comparison between the electrical peak load in 1914 in the City of Peterborough and the largest peak this year shows an amazing growth in the use of electrical household appliances and electrically operated equipment.

At the start of the existing system in 1914 the first peak was 3,000 horse power, and in 1940 the peak has advanced to 12,000 horse power. At the present time Peterborough has approximately 6,830 users of electricity as against 3,292 back in 1914.

To-day The Examiner present its annual Electrical Number, and its pages will be found to be full of valuable information about electricity and electrical appliances.

Like other municipalities within the Hydro-Electric System, Peterborough pays for its power on the peak load. The peak occurs for ten months out of the year at 11.30 in the morning. In November and December the peak usually comes at from 4.30 to 5.30 in the afternoon, because the factories are using their share of the power up to 5 p.m. During the early winter, the lighting load comes on from four to five. Thus for a half an hour at least we have both power and light on for the same time. During the late winter and summer, this does not occur.

Now that we have daylight saving for November and December, it is to be expected that there will not be a peak between four and five in the afternoon. This will result in a considerable saving, amounting to approximately 753 h.p.

The existing sub-station on Aylmer street has a capacity of 16,000 h.p. with four larg transformers of 4,000 h.p. each.

To Build New Substation

The electrical load increases about 900 h.p. each year, so that the Peterborough Utilities Commission has decided to build an additional substation in the southwestern corner of the city, where many of the large manufacturing concerns are located. This will have a 4,000 h.p. capacity and will serve most of the industries in that area. It will be automatically controlled.

There has been no interruption in service to local consumers which could be traced to our own distribution system for some years, but we have had some due to storms, etc. on the transmission system outside the city. Service interruption have averaged only ten minuter each, twice a year for the past ten years. So far this year there has been only one interruption, a two-minute one during June.

Teacher Blamed For Causing Injury To Boy

This is the story of a little six-year-old school boy who is lying in bed at home with a fracture of the right leg because, the child says, "Mr. Wagar pushed me down at school."

The child is Billie Swanger, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Swanger, 350½ Charlotte street, and he is in Grade 1 at Queen Mary School.

Interviewed by reporters today the lad told the following story, without hesitation.

He explained that when returning from the afternoon recess to the class room on Tuesday, the pupils were lining up in the basement prepartory to going to the classrooms upstairs.

Pushed Out of Line

Billie was in line when another boy pushed into a place near him, causing a slight disturbance in the line. The teacher noticed this and apparently assuming that Billie was the offender pushed the child and the latter fell to the floor.

"When I tried to get up he pushed me again and when I fell I felt the pain."

"I couldn't get up so I crawled on my hands and knees between the lines to the back so I would have a place to stand," the boy said.

"Were you crying, Billie," queried the reporter.

"Oh yes, it hurt a lot", was the answer.

Questioning him further, the reporters learned that he tried to stand at the end of the line, and couldn't get up. At this point two older pupils noticed the distress of the boy and assisted him over to a bench.

The names of the two boys could not be ascertained as yet, but one is believed to be Jack Matthews, son of Gordon S. Matthews.

At this point the teacher is said to have squeezed the boy's leg and told him, it was not injured at all. The pupils started off to the classrooms with the teacher following, and the injured boy was left with one older pupil and the caretaker, Mr. Cloak.

Carried To Principal

Both carried the child upstairs to the principal's office, and the principal, O. M. Steer sent at once for the school nurse, Miss Jory, who was in an upper classroom. The nurse had the boy carried to her car, and removed to his home, then she stayed with him until Mrs. Swanger phoned for a doctor.

"The first inkling I had of any trouble was when I heard Billie screaming, and as I ran downstairs the doorbell rang, and I was told Billie had an accident." Mrs. Swanger said this morning.

Meeting Called

Approaching D. G. H. Melton, chairman of the Board of Education for the purpose of determining if he had been officially notified of the incident, it was found that he had been told. "Public School Inspector K. S. Wightman, tried to reach me Wednesday evening but I was absent and I was out of town on Thursday, but he finally reached me by phone late last evening. He saw me this morning.

"I consider that owing to the urgency of the case and in order that we may get the facts promptly, I asked Dr. Moir, chairman of the supervision committee to call a special meeting of the Supervision Committee this evening. Dr. Moir agrees that this is the logical course and we hope to obtain all of the facts at the meeting."

Mrs. Swanger answering a question said the teacher who is allegedly responsible for the injury has not called at the house to inquire after the boy, but the child's classroom teacher has been down to see him.

It was also learned that the police have not been notified of the case, but a lawyer has been retained to make an investigation on behalf of the Swanger family.

"Has Billie ever had a broken arm or leg before," the reporter asked.

"No, he never has," was the reply.

Billie Swanger according to his mother is 6½ years old and started school a year ago last September. He is an only child and his father is employed in the Canadian General Electric Company.

"Would you be afraid to go back to school, Billie," asked one reporter

"I won't go back unless my teacher takes me in. She says I don't have to stand in line anymore", Billie answered and went on to say that he was glad to be home because he would miss the inoculation.

The leg will be in a cast until the day after Christmas and at that time the second cast will be put on. Dr. Rodger Chenoweth who attended the boy was asked by telephone to describe the injury and he said, "The child has a spiral fracture of the large shin bone. The small bone is intact."

He added that it is the type of fracture which usually heals in a manner that gives a perfect job, that when it heals the child need fear no after effects, and the leg doesn't have to be put in a sling.

Council Votes 100 Pounds To Peterborough

A bright strand of sentiment was woven into Peterborough's bonds of kinship and affection with the Old Land by the council's gift of £100 last night to the Mayor of Peterborough, England, to be expended among any families in his municipality who have suffered property loss in the war.

This expression of sympathy was embodied in a resolution by Alderman Dutton, seconded by Alderman Gordon, at last night's meeting of the finance committee with Alderman Cotton in the chair, and will be sent on to the council as a recommendation next Monday night.

"We do not know whether Peterborough in England, has suffered any damage from German air raids," Alderman Dutton said, "but it would seem extraordinary if they have escaped. It seemed to me it would be a gracious thing at this season of the year if the council voted $500 to be sent to the Mayor of Peterborough to be used in the relief of any suffering there on account of the war."

Alderman Roy remarked the council did not know definitely of many other cities and towns which had been hard hit, and Alderman Bradburn suggested that the resolution include the request to the Mayor of Peterborough that if the money was not needed by persons in his town that he send it to some other community which had suffered.

Alderman Dutton expressed his agreement, and Alderman Gordon proposed that the amount be £100.

The motion was unanimously adopted, and the gift from Peterborough to Peterborough in the Old Country is left for its disposal entirely in the discretion of the Lord Mayor of the sister town across the sea.

Aldermanic Gift

Alderman Roy reminded the council that the aldermanic fund to which the members contributed their stipend for attending meetings would amount to $150 at the end of the year. On his motion seconded by Alderman McCannan this sum will be contributed to the British War Victims' Fund conducted by the Toronto Telegram. On September 30th the council distributed $350 between that cause and the Red Cross Society.

Canada To Boost Her Cheese Output To U.K.

CORNWALL, Ont., Nov. 29—(CP)—Under the new cheese agreement with the United Kingdom, Canada agrees to ship more cheese than last year across the Atlantic, J. F. Singleton of the Dominion Department of Agriculture said in an address yesterday at the Eastern Ontario Cheesemakers' Convention. But Canada's production this winter probably will be lower than it was last winter, he said.

Mr. Singleton, associate director of the Dairy Products Marketing Service, said that in addition to increased export demand for cheese there is a domestic need in Canada for more butter.

"It is apparent that the quantity of butter produced in Canada during the past season has not been as great as now seems necessary to carry us through to another season of full production," he explained.

Demand for more butter would divert milk from the cheese industry. Last year the reverse was the case. Since mid-August the price trend of the butter market had been upwards, while the volume of butter produced during September and October had been "considerably lower" than a year ago.

Mr. Singleton said the new cheese agreement with the United Kingdom calls for 112,000,000 pounds of cheese from Canada during the year starting April 1 next. This would be about 15,000,000 pounds for the estimated shipments during the year ending next March 31. This big increase would require 172,500,000 pounds more milk.

In addition, 234,000,000 pounds more milk would be required during 1941 to increase butter production by 10,000,000 pounds.

"Whether 10,000,000 pounds more butter is sufficient to meet Canadian requirements is yet unknown," Mr. Singleton said. "The figure is used only for illustrative purposes."

"But in any case it is quite clear clear that 500,000,000 pounds increase in milk production during 1941 over that of 1940 can be used advantageously for increased production of cheese and butter."

Total milk production in Canada was about 16,000,000 pounds a week, he said, and 500,000,000 pounds increase would be equivalent to 3.1 per cent.

Joseph Burgess, Chief of Dairy Products, Grading and Inspection Services of the Agriculture Department, told in another address prepared for delivery at the convention of the Departments work in improving the quality of Canadian cheese.

Payment of premium under the Cheese Factory Improvement Act, on cheese scoring 93 or more points has been effective in raising quality all across Canada, he said, adding:

"There is plenty of evidence to show that 1940 Canadian cheese was the best quality produced in any year of which we have a record. "I need only say that it is expected that the total premium to be paid throughout the Dominion (in 1940) will be over $1,000,000, an increase of at least $400,000 over the payments in 1939."

Il Duce's Navy Left Sinking, Beached and Afire After R.A.F. Raid On Taranto

A battleship of the 23,622-ton Conti de Cavour class lies beached in the inner harbor of Taranto (also shown), following the R.A.F. attack on that main Italian naval base on November 11. Note the protective nets surrounding the ship, the picture was made from about 6,000 feet altitude by a British pilot who met with no resistance and no shellfire, proving the British point that the Italians deserted the base following the air attack on it.

This aerial photo, radioed to New York, shows the inner harbor at Taranto, Italy, with two damaged cruisers of the Trento class surrounded by a large quantity of floating oil. Other Italian warships are also seen in the harbor. This photo was taken by British reconnaissance planes on November 12 and November 14, in daylight from altitudes of 6,000 and 8,000 feet. The battle took place on the Italian naval base the night of November 11.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Out of a job, and asked to leave her boarding house because of the wide publicity she received as the result of an attempted prison break, Lona Ackerman is almost desperate because she cannot locate Jim Claridge, the only friend she has left. Just before Lona sped to the penitentiary to see her dying father, serving a life term for murder, she and Jim had fallen in love. At the warden's house during her visit to the prison, two escaping convicts force her into the warden's car and make a safe getaway until Lona grabs the steering wheel and the car crashes. Only slightly hurt, she finds her father has died in the meantime. After taking his body home, she returns to the city. Finally Jim calls her and asks her to marry him. To escape further publicity, they decide to elope. Lona is recognized when they go for the marriage license and Jim slugs a photographer when he attempts to take their picture. They are married at a parsonage in a small town. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

WHEN THEY had left the tiny inn where they had eaten their wedding supper, Jim turned to Lona in the deepening darkness.

"Guess where we're going now?" he bade her, solemnly.

"I couldn't, Jim." She was embarrassed again. "Tell me."

For answer he stopped the car and pulled from his pocket the road map he had procured at a service station just outside the city. With solemn mein he spread it over the wheel in the dim light of the instrument board, traced the route over which they had come with an inquiring finger. At a red-lettered "Sandringham" the finger paused.

"That's where we are now," he told her, and she stared at it with a catch of her breath. Sandringham! What an odd place in which to be married.

And here's where we are going!" The finger traced an uneven inch or two and stopped triumphantly at a tiny speck, lettered, "Fairfield."

"Fairfield?" She rolled it on her tongue questioningly. "I've never heard of it. Have you been there before, Jim? What kind of place is it?"

He laughed and started the motor. "We're going there now," he told her. "Sounds like a swell place for a honeymoon."

"But don't you know anything about it?"

"I know it has a nice name." He was grinning down at her.

"But maybe there's no hotel, no place to stay—"

"Let's try it. Are you game" He looked at her like a boy, a gay, irresponsible boy.

"Of course I'm game!" She leaned back in her seat, catching his mood. He began to hum as the miles sped by, a funny, old-fashioned tune that had been popular a decade ago. Memory stirred in her brain, and she joined in, her clear soprano blending with his baritone:

With someone like you, a pal
good and true,
I'd like to leave it all behind,
and go and find,
Some place that's known to God alone,
Just a spot to call our own...

Fairfield was a quaint, shady, one-street country town. Lights blinked sleepily in old-fashioned houses as they drove through the square. No hotel sign was visible, only a drug store and a pool room with a row of loafing men just breaking up after the evening's pow-wow.

Disappointment took hold of Lona until, down at the farthest end of the flower-bordered street, they came upon a friendly "Tourist Home" sign. It pointed to a stately home with a white-pillored veranda set like the scene in a stage play, back in a clump of pines with a winding moss-grown walk of brick. "Modern Accommodations" the sign proclaimed in smaller letters, and she and Jim looked at each other.

"I told you Fairfield was the place," he reminded her triumphantly. When he had brought the throbbing car to a stob, he got his long legs out onto the ground and, reaching back for her, lifted her bodily in his arms.

"I'm going to carry you in," he told her, and she struggled laughingly.

"Please, Jim! Set me down. There's somebody looking—"

"Kiss me first!" he demanded, and she had to respond.

The woman who met them at the door smiled at them as if she were welcoming visiting friends.

"The front room is the nicest," she told Lona, bustling about, gathering up their suitcases while Jim signed a bold "Mr. and Mrs. James Claridge" on the thumb-marked book the man of the house handed him. He winked at Lona as he signed it, and she blushed as she hurriedly followed the heavy-footed, kindly-faced woman up the winding stairs.

"We call this the blue room," her hostess told her. "Pa and me, we had it done last spring, new paper and everything. I'll just show it to you before your husband comes up." She proudly exhibited an array of blue-flowered walls, a blue crocheted bedspread on the huge four-poster bed, and quaint lace curtains, topped by ruffled blue valances, at the broad, many-paned windows.

It was an ensemble that would have caused a smart decorator to shrink in dismay, but to Lona it seemed homey and old-fashioned, and brought to mind the room she had occupied at home in the old days.

"Been married long?" the woman lingered to ask her, shyly.

"Not long." Somehow Lona managed to make her voice sound casual.

"You look like a bride." The woman's eyes were motherly. "With them flowers and all. I'd better get a vase for them." She bustled about again, and impatience shook Lona. Would she never leave? She wanted suddenly to be alone, to wait for Jim.

The bustling figure departed, finally, leaving behind her an atmosphere of fussing over the little things that go to make for comfort; extra blankets at the foot of the bed in case it should turn cool, minute instructions as to how the window shades should be drawn to keep out the morning sunshine,

In her "good night" there was a smiling knowingness that left Lona standing in the middle of the floor, her face burning, dreading the sound of Jim's footsteps on the creaky old stairs, yet knowing that he would come.

She was seated calmly before the quaint old marble - topped dressing tible brushing her shining curls when he did come a full fifteen minutes later. She had unpacked her suitcase and removed the blue wedding dress to a hanger in the deep clothespress. The rose crepe negligee that was the one extravagant purchase of her hurried trousseau had replaced it on her slim figure. From its ruffles her white arms peeped out coyly, and her face in the mirror looked ridiculously young, the eyes just a little frightened.

Jim came in softly, as if he feared she might be asleep and he had no right to wake her. With simple directness he crossed the room to where she waited, her eyes on his in the mirror, and took her in his arms.

"You're so pretty, girl," he brought out, holding her gently. "So pretty! . . . I can't believe we're here together—married."

"Jim! Oh, Jim!" She clung to him suddenly.

"I'm going to make you happy, girl!" he promised, and there was an odd defiance in his voice. "Happy!" he repeated, almost loudly, as if he were reassuring himself.

His lips were hard against hers as he kissed her.

"Jim—" she said, again, as he picked her up, suddenly, as lightly as if she were a child.

Later that night she awoke to find him breathing ryhthmically in the darkness by her side. Over the old-fashioned room the roses in their vase—wedding roses—cast a stealthy perfume. The moon had risen and was pouring through the windows, the quaint flaring lace curtains sifting it out into filigreed patterns that fell across the bed. In the reflected light she made out his lean face. He looked boyish in his sleep, the tightness of his mouth relaxed, a lock of his unruly hair straying down over his forehead.

With a tender hand she reached over and smoothed it back. He stirred at her touch like a child beneath its mother's hand, and she drew back without waking him. He looked so peaceful, so content. And it seemed so natural to be here at his side in the night. So safe.

She breathed a little prayer as she settled back to go to sleep again, her head against his shoulder. "Make it be like this always, dear God! Make it last."

New 'Airocobra' Deadly At Long Range

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—(AP).—The United States Army reported yesterday that cannon carried by its "Airacobra" pursuit plane had achieved "great accuracy of fire from long ranges" in tests just concluded "with satisfactory results."

Officials said that the 37-millimetre canon and the machine guns of a standard "Airacobra," which had just come off the production lien of the Bell Aircraft Corporation at Bufalo, N.Y., had been tried out in an unusually short time by accelerating normal test procedure.

For more than a week three pilots alternately flew the single-engine, single-seater plane from the Buffalo Municipal Airport to a point in Lake Ontario, off Fort Niagara, and fired at targets in the water.

The number of "Airacobras" ordered for the army has not been announced officially, but it is known to run into the hundreds.

In addition to orders for the United States Army, the manufacturer also is turning out adaptations of the "Airacobra" for Great Britain.

Room To Travel Ley's Pledge If Germany Wins

BERLIN, Nov. 29 — (AP). — Robert Ley, leader of the Nazi Labor Front, promised munitions workers yesterday that if Germany should win the war the "German dad will put his wife and three or four children into a 'people's car' and travel on Reich's auto roads from Klagenfurt to Narvik."

Klagenfurt is near the Yugoslav border, in South-eastern Europe, and Narvik is above the Arctic Circle in Northern Norway.

Speaking at an anniversary celebration of "Strength Through Joy," a Nazi organization, Ley asserted:

"Germany of the future will be Socialist. It will knock to the ground capitalism, Jewry in general, Britain in particular....victory is already ours."

A nation's reserves in war, Ley declared, include its health and cultural heritage.

"France contented herself with letting soldiers bunk idly in the Maginot Line throughout the long winter," he said. "That was a big mistake. We saw to it that our soldiers had recreation and diversion."

Almazan Quits Ending Fear Of Revolt

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 20—(AP).—Fears of possible revolution faded in Mexico following General Juan Almazan's renunciation of all claims to the presidency.

Almazan's earlier refusal to concede victory to Gen. Manuel Camacho in the July 7 election had kept the nation in constant fear of bloodshed. Anxiety had increased as the inauguration approached.

Camacho will take office Sunday, beginning a six-year term.

Almazan, independent candidate in the July election, handed out a statement renouncing his claims soon after arriving here by plane yesterday following a three-month stay in the United States.

The United States' decision to send Vice-President-Elect Henry A. Wallace to Mexico City for the Camacho inauguration prompted his renunciation, Almazan declared.

Some of Almazan's followers complained that their candidate had "let them down" and expressed resentment toward the United States for allegedly "forcing" Almazan's reversal by sending Wallace to Camacho's inauguration, thus indicating United States recognition of him as the president-elect.

Almazan's statement was in the form of a reply to two of his prominent supporters who warned him Nov. 14 that any attempt to seize power in Mexico would be an "insane adventure" in view of the United States' attitude.

The Chamber of Depuites Sept. 12 proclaimed Camacho president-elect of Mexico on the basis of an electoral commission report that he won over Almazan by 2,476,641 votes to 151,101 in the July election.

Camacho was the administration's candidate, and Almazan charged the election was "a farce and a fraud."

A "congress" composed of men who ran on the Almazan ticket assembled secretly at the same time as the official congress and on Sept. 4 approved a decree declaring Almazan president-elect.

New Knowledge For Service Men

OTTAWA, Nov. 29 — (CP). — An extended campaign of education among the young men in Canada's armed forces has been mapped out for the second winter of war.

In co-operation with military, Naval and air force authorities the Canadian Legion War Services is out to obtain for the men in the forces a wider knowledge of the world, its culture, its sciences.

It is not expected that when peace returns the ex-servicemen of the present war will be walking encyclopedias but so far as service training and operations permit an effort will be made to improve their general educational standard.

The latest move in this direction is a decision to appoint educational officers in each battalion or equivalent formation in the 1st and 2nd Divisions overseas.

Lt.-General A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the British Canadian Corps overseas, has decided to make these appointments in order that in each unit an officer will devote his time to organizing and promoting study among the men. These educational officers will be army officers paid by the Government and responsible to the officers commanding the unit in which they serve.

They will co-operate directly also with Canadian Legion war services which has mapped out courses of instruction in a wide variety of subjects and which provides the instructors. The overseas educational establishment of Canadian Legion War Services has recently been strengthened by the despatch overseas of Dr. A. E. Chatwin, M.C., of Saskatoon, who is on loan from the Saskatchewan Department of Education.

Overseas Director.

Dr. Chatwin had just arrived in London to take his post as overseas director of Educational services when his hotel was bombed. He escaped without injury. Four civilian educational advisers will be appointed to assist him, according to an announcement from Legion headquarters here.

While no decision has yet been announced it is expected the plan of appointing army educational officers in each overseas unit will be extended to the units of the active army in Canada.

The Legion authorities have also concluded agreements with the Royal Canadian Navy and the Royal Canadian Air Force concerning educational work in those services. An educational adviser for the Navy will be stationed at the principal East Coast naval establishment and special courses for naval establishment and special courses for naval personnel will be organized there.

In the Royal Canadian Air Force the plans include refresher courses in academic studies for men who have passed their junior matriculation but have become somewhat rusty. The idea is to get these recruits back to something like school-leaving proficiency in the period between their enlistment and their posting to training schools, that is while they are in the manning depots.

Aims of Program.

The first aim of the educational program is to make the men better sailors, soldiers and airmen, on the principle that the man with an educated mind can better stand the strain of modern war than the uneducated mind.

Another object is to prevent boredom in the long winter nights, particularly among men serving overseas in the army who have spent long months in training without experiencing the thrill of combat.

The third main objective is to prepare men for civilian life at the end of hostilities. Many men in the services have never held peacetime jobs. Some have worked at civilian pursuits for short periods, they can be given a measure of

The authorities believe that if they can give a measure of train-training in some civilian calling or given a better educational background the problem of rehabilitation after the war will be eased.

Ask any Exide Dealer:

"WHAT DOES COLD WEATHER DO TO A BATTERY?"

PLENTY, he'll tell you—and prove it with his new, scientific Starting Power Indicator. Batteries, you'll see, are allergic to cold; not only does cold lower their efficiency, it adds to the work they have to do.

But there's one way to dodge battery trouble in cold weather. You don't have to find a dead engine in your garage some fine cold morning soon. Go to your Exide Battery Dealer now. Let him give you a graphic eyeful, via his Starting Power Indicator of what cold does to a battery; then let him test yours on his Exide Sure-Start Tester, an instrument that's as revealing as an X-ray. When he's through, you'll know whether you need a "recharge", a new battery, or whether you're all set for Winter.

Look for the daily weather forecast at your Exide dealer's gas pump. To avoid starting trouble, have him check your battery now. This service is free.

Note, on Exide's new Starting Power Indicator, how—as temperature drops—battery efficiency goes down, while starting requirements go up. Effective starting power is indicated for all temperatures.

6 Counties' Soil Sprinkled Over Craigavon

BELFAST, Nov. 29—(CP).—Viscount Craigavon, late Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, was buried to-day in the new cemetery in the Parliament House estate following private services at his residence. He died Sunday at the age of 69.

Soil from each of the six counties of Northern Ireland was sprinkled over the grave. The soil was taken from a bowl used for the same purpose at the funeral of Lord Carson, Craigavon's chief in the struggle against the Irish Home Rule Bill in the First Great War.

The flag-draped coffin was borne on a gun carriage along a road lined with men of the Ulster Special Constabulary. Men of the Royal Ulster Rifles marched alongside.

WAS FOUR TIMES REAL STOWAWAY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 — (CP). — Bobby Stap, the lad who has a passion to go down to the sea, and did —four times as a stowaway—now has his seaman's papers.

Now 16, but just as snub-nosed and freckle-faced as he was two years ago when, in the space of five months, he stowed away on four vessels and travelled some 20,000 nautical miles, Bobby has graduated, with honors, from New York Merchant Marine School.

Bobby, who expects a berth with the Clyde Mallory Line, was ordered by the children's court of New York to attend the Marine School when he returned from an illicit cruise of the Caribbean. His travels took him to England, France and South America.

BACKACHE NOT DUE TO AGE

Many people think that backache is a trouble that comes naturally with advancing years, but this woman of 71 proves that it is not.

"I suffered for a long time from backache," she writes, "but put it down to my age (71). Reading your announcement, I thought I would try Kruschen Salts. I have been taking it for some time and have found great relief. I thought you would like to know it has done me a world of good."—(Mrs.) E.R.

When pains in the back are caused by inactive kidneys and failure of the digestive system to throw off poisonous impurities, Kruschen Salts will give real help in setting the matter right. Because Kruschen has a diuretic action which helps to flush your kidneys and liver. After that, your blood throws off all impurities; you get happy relief from pain.

Life Membership Certificates Are Presented at Local Council Tea

Four National Life Membership Certificates and Pins were presented to members of the Local Council of Women in recognition of years of faithful service by Alderman James Dutton, and Mrs. E. Wand, president, was presented by the executive with a Life Membership Certificate in the Local Council for her work in connection with the finishing off of the Foundation Fund, during an interesting ceremony Thursday afternoon at the annual Local Council of Women tea in the Y.W.C.A. Green Room. Mrs. Joseph Mills, one of the oldest members, attached the pins, which were received by Mrs. Gordon K. Fraser, whose aunt, the late Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless of Hamilton, was the first treasurer of the National Council of Women; Mrs. F. H. Dearborn; Mrs. T. W. H. Young, and Mrs. J. Cridland. Mr. Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., who was to have assisted Alderman Dutton, was unable to be present.

From time immemorial it has seemed as if men and women have stopped to honor fellow men and women when they have done outstanding service, and I am conscious today that I am speaking to a group of women who not only comprise the Local Council of Women, but who are identified also with various organizations in the city doing noble service through the years," Alderman Dutton said. "It is the voluntary service rendered by the voluntary workers that should be taken into account," he remarked as he expressed his fear that the voluntary worker might pass out of the picture because of the multiplication of government service. "Although I have no fault to find with this service, believing, as I do, in its sincerity," Mr. Dutton said, "I also have a feeling that even the various causes that lie close to our hearts are going to suffer, and I have been profoundly impressed with the vast army of men and women whose selfless services have benefited the lives of fellow citizens."

Alderman Dutton expressed also, on behalf of the City Council, appreciation of the splendid work accomplished through the years by members of the Local Council of Women. "Our problems are made easier, not only by the consciousness that you are serving," he said, "but by the consciousness that we have your support."

In making the presentation to Mrs. Wand, Mr. Dutton referred to the many years she has been identified with everything worthwhile in the life of the city, and commended her upon the intelligence and enthusiasm which has meant so much to the causes she has served.

Guests were welcomed by Mrs. Wand, the hostesses were Mrs. F. Merrett. Mrs. B. F. McNeeley, Mrs. A. I. Brown, Mrs. A. Stanger presided at the guest book, and members of the general committee in charge of arrangements were Mrs W. H. Morton, Mrs. H. T. Rehill, Mrs. J. Dutton, Mrs. Wand, Mrs. A. Stanger, Mrs. H. A. Mitchell. Mrs. K. Simpson was telephone convener, Mrs. W. K. McGee treasurer, and Mrs. W. Boorman in charge of the musical program. Mrs. H. A. Mitchell and Mrs. E. Whitely were in charge of decorations, and members of the refreshment committee were Mrs. R. Parnall, Mrs. K. Simpson, Mrs. J. Londerville, Mrs. H. Wilson.

Bronze chrysanthemums in a brass bowl and green tapers in bronze holders were used on the attractive tea table, at which Mrs. C. M. Scott, Mrs. J. Duton, Mrs. F. M. Somerville and Mrs. A. Porteous presided. Assisting to serve were Mrs. J. C. Larmer, Mrs. A. Heckman, Mrs. L. R. Mitchell, Mrs. H. Tremain, Mrs. W. Beggs, Mrs. E. L. Robinson, Mrs C. Collins, Miss M. Patterson. Mrs. N. Buckley was table convener.

Delightful vocal solos heard duf-ing the afternoon were given by Mrs. W. G. McCall of Toronto, Mrs. C. Corbett, Mrs. H. Northrop, Mrs. W. Hepburn, Mrs. F. W. Grey, the latter singing a patriotic number of her own composition. Mrs. W. Hepburn and Mrs. C. Telford were heard in a vocal duet; Mrs. P. Hooper gave a violin number, and piano music was played by Miss Ruth Callander.

Red Cross Tea In Lakefield

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 29— (ENS)— A substantial sum was added to the funds of the Lakefield Red Cross Society, when the branch held an afternoon tea and white elephant sale at Uplands, the home of Col. and Mrs. A. T. LeFevre on Thursday afternoon. Guests were welcomed in the various rooms where cosy log fires in the fireplaces crackled a welcome. Branches of cedar in tall standards against the dark panels of the hall and bronze chrysanthemums in the rooms also gave a pleasing effect.

Receiving with Mrs. LeFevre was Mrs. G. J. Elmsley, president of the Red Cross.

In the tea room, Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie and Mrs. J. H. Sherin presided at the tea table, which was covered with a cut work cloth and centred by a blue bowl with bittersweet and snowberries. Blue candles in silver holders reflected the colors of the effective centrepiece. In charge of the tea arrangements were Mrs. Gladys Robinson, Mrs. (Rev.) H. R. Howden, and Mrs. W. J. Charlton.

In the living-room where the various articles on the white elephant table found a ready sale, Mrs. J. W. Ridpath, Mrs. Fred Lawrence, and Mrs. W. E. Gillman were in charge.

The candy table was in the study and was presided over by Mrs. E. J. Waldon.

Reception Held For Bride-Elect

The home of Mrs. Robert Dale, High street, was the setting for a delightful reception Thursday afternoon, attended by over fifty guests, when Mrs. Dale entertained in honor of Miss Daisy James, whose marriage to her son, Mr. William R. Dale, is to take place quietly at two-thirty o'clock next Monday afternoon in Knox church. The bride-elect received with the hostess and her sister, Mrs. John Mervin.

Tea was poured by Mrs. W. Thompson, aunt of the groom-elect, and Mrs. A. M. James, mother of the bride-elect. Assisting in the tea room were Mrs. J. J. Howden, Mrs. N. Crowe, Miss Effie Dale, Mrs. Fraser Watson, sister of the bride-elect. Snapdragons and chrysanthemums and white tapers in silver holders graced the lace-covered tea table.

Girl Guides Make Navy Ditty Bags

Girl Guides and their little sisters, the Brownies, have curtailed their play-time in favor of hard work during the past weeks, and every spare moment is spent manufacturing ditty bags for boys of the navy, under the supervisin of Mrs. R. Whalon, District Commissioner. They will be forwarded to Navy League headquarters in Toronto.

About fifty bags, valued at $1.50, are now underway, and contain such articles as cigarettes, shaving-cream, razor blades, toothbrush, washcloth, pocket-comb, handkerchiefs, gum, and a pair of hand-knitted socks.

To assist with the necessary funds for these bags, Iris Whalon, to whom Guiding means a very great deal, has been up to all hours each Friday night, following a busy week at school, making delicious doughnuts which Guides and Brownies take orders for and sell.

Always working quietly and with no thought of public recognition for anything they do, the Girl Guides and Brownies are deserving of a hearty handclap, not only for this last worth-while effort on behalf of the sailor boys' Christmas, but also because of their valuable, ready assistance in connection with tag days, collections, and a thousand-and-one little tasks behind-the-scenes which the general public never hears about.

Do You Know?

When the rich fruit cakes are quite cold, brush them over with a little brandy or rum, or wrap them in a tin until two or three days before they are required, when they must be taken out and iced. When the icing has hardened the cake is ready.

To make a delicious pudding sauce, boil 1 cup sugar with one-third cup water to 238 degrees F., or until the syrup spins a thread. Beat 2 egg-yolks until thick, add syrup gradually while hot, and beat until creamy; add 1 tablespoon vanilla. Just before serving, fold in 1 cup stiffly-beaten cream.

An excellent lemon sauce is made by creaming 1 cup butter with one-half cup confectioners' sugar. Add 2 egg yokes and beat until very light. Add alternately a drop at a time, two tablespoons lemon juice and one-third cup of cream. Set the bowl over hot water and stir until smooth and creamy. Do not have the water boiling in the lower part of the boiler.

Arrowroot may be used instead of cornstarch for making blancmanges extra nourishing. Use a fairly strong flavoring, even allowing some lemon rind to remain in the mixture for half an hour while it is simmering. Or vanilla might be preferred to lemon.

Selfish Egotism Is One of the Mother Should Rejoice

a Mistake to Oppose a Daughter's Marriage Purely For Selfish Reasons.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a girl 24 years old. When I was 5 my mother and father were divorced. My mother worked hard and put me through high school. Then I worked my way through college and for the last five years I have been teaching and making a good living for us both. All my life my mother has monopolized me. She has never been willing for me to go out with other boys and girls. She wants me to stay with her. When I do go out I do not enjoy myself, for I know that when I get home I will find her angry and crying. Now I have fallen in love with a splendid young man who would give me not only love, but also a home and security. But since I have told my mother of our engagement she has been furious and continually reproaches me with ingratitude and tells me that I don't love her, etc. If I marry it will be impossible to have her live with us because of the way she would treat my husband. But I could provide for her comfortably some place near us. Now the question is: Should I give up my chance of marriage and happiness because of the way my mother feels?

UNHAPPY DAUGHTER.

ANSWER — Certainly not. You would be an idiot to do so, for a chance to make such a good marriage might never come to you again, and if it did your mother would be equally unwilling for you to leave her.

There is no reason in the world why you should sacrifice yourself to your mother's selfish egotism. You can see plainly enough that she is not considering your happiness in this matter, but her own pleasure.

She knows that the best gift that God can give a girl is a good husband and that you will be a thousand times better off with a man to stand between you and the world, with husband and home and children, than you are having no one to lean upon; having to toil to earn not only your own living but hers, and with always the dread of the future that is at the bottom of every self-supporting woman's heart, when she lies awake at night, wondering what would happen if she lost her job, or had a long spell of sickness, and what will become of her when she is old.

Mother Shuld Rejoice

Knowing these things, your mother should rejoice with you in your good fortune instead of trying to block it, and if she doesn't you should look at the matter sanely and refuse to wreck your life to gratify her morbid desire to monopolize you.

Of course, your mother will reproach you with all she has done for you, from her agony in childbirth to her feeding and clothing you when you were growing up, but it always seems to me that parents are nervy to expect children to be grateful for being thrust into a world that was full of hardship and poverty for them, and, anyway, most children pay whatever debt they owe their fathers and mothers by supporting them far more years than their parents ever supported them.

I am a great believer in children doing their duty by their parents, but I consider it no part of a girl's duty to give up marriage to a good man to gratify the whim of a selfish mother.

Why Aging Men Discard Wives

Dear Dorothy Dix—My husband and I have been married 29 years. He is 57. I am 53. We have three children, all grown, except the girl who is a junior at college. My husband and I like each other and have gotten along pleasantly together, but he asks me to give him a divorce because he wants a young wife. He says that I am too old for him, that he is not going to think of himself as old; that he has too many years of life ahead of him to waste any, and that he wants a wife who feels as young as he does.

I do not want to leave my home, garden, books and other possessions, but neither do I want to stay where I am not wanted. What shall I do? Has my husband a right to a young wife? Should I get out and let him get one?

ANSWER—Certainly a man is an ingrate to turn the wife who has been his faithful helpmeet for so many years, who has borne his children and toiled and scrimped to help him get a start in the world, out of her house and home for no other reason than because she is no longer young.

Yet many men do this. It is a common thing for them when they reach middle age to be afflicted with a brainstorm that gives them the delusion that while their wives have become middle-aged they have attained perpetual youth.

They can see that their wives have gotten the middle-age spread, that their hair has turned gray and that they are no longer as pretty and lissom and gay as they were at 16.

But they never observe that they themselves have grown paunchy and baldheaded and acquired triple chins. They think they still are as slim and good-looking as they were when they were lads, so they conclude that they are too young for their wives and that they should have playmates as young as they are.

FASHIONS

Here is a dress that does double duty. A trimly designed shirtwaist frock in plaid or plain and a separate jerkin in a contrasting color is the formula for a smart appearance at all times. Wear the dress by itself, and then for a change or extra warmth put on the jerkin. This is a grand dress for all Winter long, and if you make it right away it will be ideal to wear to football games this season. Clan plaid wool with a bright red jerkin of flannel is a chic combination. The jerkin buttons on the shoulder and down the side to make it easy to slip on.

Style No. 2559 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch fabric for dress; ⅞ yard or 54-inch for jerkin.

Hence the swapping of old wives for new which so often occurs if the man has made enough money, with the old wife's assistance, to be able to buy a new streamlined bride.

In such cases the public sympathy always goes to the discarded old wife but, in reality, our tears should be shed over the poor simp of a man who has made such a sorry bargain.

For he soon finds that his synthetic youth has vanished, that he is not a merry, lighthearted lad, but a tired, middle-aged man, and that he cannot keep up the pace of the jazzy young creature he has married.

Also, he discovers that he has not a taste nor an idea in common with her, and that she bores him as much as he bores her, and that the only thing she loves about him is his pocketbook.

Every old wife is avenged of her wrongs by the young wife, for no man is more miserable than the one who has thought t marrying a young wife would keep him young, but who finds that it has only added years to his age.

Cannot Depend Upon a Gambler

Dear Dorothy Dix—My husband earns a good salary, but he gambles it all away and we are always in debt to everyone. Time and again he has promised me to give it up, but the next payday he does the same thing and comes home with empty pockets. Would you advise me to quit, or stick out my marriage for another year or two?

FRANTIC.

ANSWER — Gambling is the most incurable of all vices. A gambler virtually never reforms. Plan your life with the certainty that you will never be able to depend upon him.

Don't Scoff at Dreams—Learn Their Meanings

They Have Messages for You

"What a silly dream I had," you say.

"I was sitting in the dentist's chair. He was pulling one of my teeth. But I kept crying, 'No, No, and he couldn't extract it."

Far from being silly, your dream may have sober significance, a real message. Many dreams do.

Perhaps you subconsciously wish to break an engagement, to dismiss a suitor. That desire is symbolized in your dreams by the tooth extraction. Your protest is your distaste for hurting people.

Don't disregard dreams. Occurring while your subconscious mind has full play, they often reveal important inner facts about yourself.

To dream of being unable to move in the face of danger can signify a paralyzing lack of self-confidence. What psychologists call the cosmic dream — in which you are alone amidst sea and sky —is a sign you want to run away from your problems.

Or do you dream of dark places or of struggling through tangled underbrush?

Find the meanings of such significant dream symbols and images in our 32-page booklet, A noted psychologist helps you to recognize and interpret your sleep adventures, unmask and banish inner worries. Discusses dreams that come true.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of THE MEANING OF DREAMS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

A PLEASANT SURPRISE

WE ARE all pleased when one of our sacrifice bids works out as we expected, when it proves that the opponents could have made their contract and we are beaten exactly the number of tricks we reckoned. How much more pleasing it is if we find some kind of play in the hand to produce the additional trick or tricks needed to make the contract which had been intended as a deliberate sacrifice.

B. Jay Becker, one of the most thorough thinkers among national tournament players, reckoned that his hand, with a bare opening bid, probably would not produce a game if North was not strong enough for 3-Hearts on his first turn, so passed the 2-Hearts. When East later bid the 3-Spades, Mr. Becker estimated that the strong vulnerable bidding by West assured the safety of that contract, so intended to sacrifice by one trick when he bid his game.

Things looked up with West's lead of the diamond 9 to the Q and K, whereupon the brilliant declarer planned an end play, which could be made if East's marked singleton in clubs was any honor. So he took two trumps in dummy, cashed the diamond A, led to the heart K, ruffed the diamond J with dummy's last trump and led the club 2, felling the Q with the A. The club 9 to the J then put West in. He also cashed his club K, but then had to choose between leading a club to dummy's good 10 or taking his spade A. He did the latter, setting up the K and making the contract for Mr. Becker.

CBC To Prepare, Edit Its Own News Broadcast

OTTAWA, Nov. 29 — (CP). — Plans for establishment of a national news service prepared and edited by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's staff have been approved by the Board of Governors, a statement issued by Gladstone Murray, general manager, said to-day.

The statement follows:

The Board of Governors of the CBC has given final approval to the plans for the establishment on January 1 of a national news service prepared and edited by the CBC staff. The national news service will be carried by all CBC stations and in addition by all private stations needed to extend coverage throughout the country. The service will be available to all other private stations desiring it. No advertising will be permitted, the service being strictly unsponsored.

Be Less Advertising.

While setting up a national news service, the CBC does not aim to create a radio news monopoly in Canada. Private stations will still be permitted to carry the services of approved news agencies, subject, of course, to censorship regulations. Also there will be further limitation of the nature and amount of advertising that may be associated with these supplementary news services.

Last summer the CBC ruled that sponsored news bulletins on private stations would not be permitted to include advertising matter in the body of the bulletins. After January 1 next, the only advertising permitted in connection with radio news will be of the "institutional" kind, by which is meant only the naming of the sponsor and the product before and after the news.

The continued acceptance in Canada of the Transradio News Service by private stations remains under consideration, pending further information which will result from investigations now in progress.

Britain Buys Up 46,000 Tons Canuck Cheese

OTTAWA, Nov. 29—(CP).—The Agriculture Department said Tuesday the Dairy Products Board had estimated that shipments to the United Kingdom of Canadian Cheddar cheese, from the cheese make to last Nov. 30, would total 92,000,000 pounds.

From Dec. 1 this year to March 31, 1941, an additional 8,000,000 pounds is expected to be shipped.

Under terms of the agreement which took effect last May 23 between the British Ministry of Food and the Canadian government, the British ministry agreed to take 78,400,000 pounds of white, unwaxed Canadian Cheddar cheese made prior to Dec. 1. On June 13 the British ministry advised that it would take as large a quantity of cheese from Canada as it was possible to get, and recently the agreement was extended to March 31, 1941.

A new 12-month agreement becomes effective April 1 next year. Under it the British ministry asks for shipments in the 12 months totalling 50,000 long tons or 112,000,000 pounds at 14.4 cents a pound, F.O.B. Montreal, for first grade cheese, one-half cent a pound less for second grade, and one cent a pound less for third grade.

The British ministry will be prepared to purchase any extra quantity above the 112,000,000 pounds which may be available, the Department said.

While no agreement between the British Ministry of Food and the Canadian government has yet been reached in respect to evaporated or condensed milk for shipment after next March 31, the ministry has expressed its willingness to buy 1,000,000 cases.

During the latter part of June this year an agreement was reached between the British Ministry of Food and the Government of Canada whereby Canada was to sell to the Ministry 300,000 cases of evaporated milk (48 one-pound tins per case) at $3.75 a case on board ship at Canadian seaboard. In the latter part of September arrangements were completed for supplying the Ministry with an additional 150,000 cases.

Cavan Institute Studies Cooking

The Cavan Women's Institute held their November meeting in the Community Hall with twenty-eight members present. The president, Mrs. A. B. Kennedy, presided. During the business session it was decided not to subscribe for the "Reader's Digest," for the ensuing year, all their money being needed for war purposes. Also the government grant will not be taken this year. The roll call was answered by a quotation on "Peace." Mrs. Snider read a paper on "Peace."

Mesdames Adams, Howden and Braithwaite finished their demonstration on cooking, which had been commenced at the last meeting. Cabbage with a white sauce, was cooked, potatoes roasted with the centres scraped out, seasoned, and replaced. A chowder and omelette was demonstrated.

The December meeting will be held at Mrs. Milford Byers home and the roll call answered by a Christmas recipe.

Electricity—the Unseen Servant in Every Home!

The Kitchen Should Not Be Neglected

By Cybil Gayford Rhind

WE homemakers are in and out of our kitchens most of the day and often more in than out. In reality the kitchen is woman's kingdom. We owe it to ourselves to make sure that they are efficiently equipped as our husband's offices.

The secret of successful homemaking is to get the best out of our job rather than it getting the best out of us, and that is where electricity plays such a big part. Meals must be prepared three times a day; but the wonderful electric ranges on the market have turned this duty into a delight. It is really quite thrilling what the modern electric stove is able to do.

"My dear", exclaimed a friend the other day, "since I bought my new electric stove I feel as if my fairy-godmother had waved her magic wand over me I have so much more time to myself now, I can hardly believe it and I'm not nearly so tired at the end of the day."

This remark is easily understood by anyone accustomed to the joys of cooking by electricity, because the new stoves do so much for us that formerly we had to do for ourselves. Now-a-days there is no waiting around until the oven reaches a certain heat before lowering it because automatic control looks after temperatures.

A sustained low temperature properly controlled is one of the many ways in which the modern electric stove excells. This perfectly controlled low heat is the answer to the problem of cooking the less expensive cuts of meat and having them as tender as the most expensive under-cut steak. For an example of this type of cooking the following idea is a good one.

Four medium sized shoulder, yearling lamb chops cut one inch thick.

One medium sized tin of tomato juice.

One cup of cold water.

Bacon fat.

Salt and Pepper.

Parsley.

Method—Trim off the chops neatly. Shoulder chops are considerably cheaper than loin ones. Dredge with flour. Lightly grease frying pan with bacon fat, heat, brown chops slightly on both sides. Then put them in a covered baking dish. Pour over the meat the tomato juice diluted with the water. Season to taste. Cover with tight lid. Set over for a sustained heat of 250 degrees and cook slowly from two hours to two and one-quarter hours, depending on the size of the chops. Arrange meat on hot platter, sprinkle with chopped parsley. Remove any fat from tomato juice gravy and serve in gravy boat. Riced potatoes and buttered carrots or spinach make a nice accompaniment to this dish.

Amount given serves four generously. If more chops are required don't forget to increase the tomato juice and water.

Install Base Plugs Higher

TOO often it seems, the electrical outlets seem to be in the wrong place...or there is not enough of them. In order to be sure to have a base plug at whatever spot you need it, it is wise to provide for one at every point between the door and window openings.

Another idea that is now being widely practised is taking the plug out of the baseboard and placing it in the walls above about 20 inches from the floor.

This keeps the cords off the floor where they gather dust, fuzz and look untidy. The wall plates that cover the plugs may be painted so that they are scarcely noticeable.

Cooking Centre In A Modern Kitchen

A General Electric Hotpoint Range surrounded by ample working surface makes this corner of the kitchen an efficient work-space.

Kitchen Designed To Save Time, Steps

A NEW and important problem in planning has been presented to the home builder and architect as a result of recent developments in kitchen equipment and in the science of efficient household management.

Planned to save as many steps as possible for the housewife, the modern kitchen is a combination of cooking laboratory and liveable space. Thus the kitchen must be designed compactly and with equipment in proper sequence. The modern kitchen is clean, light, airy, compact, colorful and homelike, and has plenty of storage space easily accessible.

In the up-to-date kitchen may be found an electric range, with automatic oven control; electric refrigerator with food containers and compartments suitable for all types of foods; electric sink, including an electric dishwasher; a unit which disposes of waste,; and a fan which expels cooking odors and ventilates the kitchen.

Other appliances which complete the efficiency of the modern cooking laboratory include such individual units as electric toaster, waffle iron, sandwich toaster, food mixer and electric clocks.

According to architects and home planning experts, black and white is the most favored kitchen color combination among housewives, although practically any combination may be used. Ivory, green, blue and metallic shades are popular with some, but not nearly such a universal choice.

It is pointed out, however, that individuality is coming more and more to the fore in kitchen planning after years of more or less haphazard layout. Size, color scheme, exposure—southern exposure, by the way, is usually preferred—and "shape" are carefully planned before the kitchen is actualy built. In this way step-saving becomes a reality and not a mere delusion.

At the same time the problem of efficient lighting is carefully considered these days, as most housewives realize that health and happiness depend, to a large extent on good working conditions. Engineers retained as consultants on such matters make individual recommendations for specific conditions.

A large, single unit fixture controlled by a wall-switch is usually advised for the centre of the ceiling, with supplementary light covering working areas. These supplementary lights, it is explained, take the form of panels set in the ceiling over the sink or stove, and tubular units located under wall cabinets over working surfaces, or in much-used cupboards. The purpose borne in mind when planning such lights is to avoid the necessity of working in shadow, in glare, or in gloom.

In the modern, electrically-equipped kitchen, adequate facilities for working are provided by working surface or areas located strategically between the refrigerator and the sink and range. These surfaces are generally made of stainless metals, linoleum or wood.

Summing up the advantages of the modern kitchen, one home planning authority declared that it had brought about the real emancipation of the housewife who had discovered that she could accomplish more work more efficiently and more economically in a fraction of the time it took her grandmother. Electricity is the agent which has made possible the modern kitchen at a cost within the reach of the average income. In Ontario this is particularly true because of the low cost of Hydro power.

Successful Homemakers Will Get Best Out of their Jobs

BY HOME-MAKER

WE homemakers are in and out of our kitchens most of the day, and often more in than out.

In reality the kitchen is woman's kingdom. We owe it to ourselves to make sure they are as efficiently equipped as our husband's offices.

The secret of successful homemaking is to get the best of our job instead of it getting the best of us, and that is where electricity plays such a big part. Meals must be prepared three times a day, but the wonderful electric ranges now on the market, have turned this duty into a delight. It is really quite thrilling what the up-to-date electric stove is able to do.

"My dear!" exclaimed a friend the other day. "Since I bought my new electric range I feel as if my fairy god-mother had waved her magic wand over me. I have so much more time to myself now. I can hardly believe it! And I'm not nearly so tired at the end of the day."

This remark is easily understood by anyone accustomed to the joys of cooking by electricity, because the new stoves do so much for us that formerly we had to do ourselves. Now-a-days there is no waiting around till the oven reaches a certain heat before lowering it, because automatic control looks after temperatures.

Electricity certainly does away with the bug-bear of washing up. No more scouring the outsides of a lot of dirty pots and pans, because electric heat is a clean heat with no flame. Also, controlled heat prevents food boiling over on the oven or sticking to the bottom of saucepans. Often an entire meal can be cooked in the oven leaving fewer pans to wash.

The economy of the new electric ranges must not be overlooked; it is a tremendous asset to the lessening of Mr. Budget's figures. It has been proven by actual tests that the average cost of a meal, cooked in a modern stove, is less than one cent a meal per person. There is also a very definite saving through reducing shrinkage of meat, doing away with cooking failures and eliminating waste of food values.

A sustained low temperature, perfectly controlled, is one of the many ways in which the modern electric stove excells. This perfectly controlled low heat is the answer to the problem of cooking the less expensive cuts of meat and having them as deliciously tender as the best undercut steak. For an example of this type of cooking the following idea is a good one:

4 medium size shoulder, yearling lamb chops. Cut 1-inch thick.
1 cup cold water.
Bacon fat.
Flour.
Salt and pepper.
Parsley.

Method—Trim off chops neatly. Shoulder chops are considerably cheaper than loin ones. Dredge with flour. Lightly grease fry pan with bacon fat, heat, brown chops slightly on both sides. Then put them in covered baking dish. Pour over meat the tomato juice diluted with the water. Season to taste. Cover with tight lid. Set oven for a sustained heat of 250 degrees and cook slowly for two hours to two and a quarter hours, depending on the size of the chops. Arrange meat on hot platter, sprinkle lightly with chopped parsley. Remove any fat from tomato juice gravy and serve in gravy boat. Riced potatoes and buttered carrots or spinach make a nice accompaniment to this dish.

Modern Girl Has Cinch As Housewife

DESCRIBING her complete, electrically-equipped kitchen as "my black and white heaven," a young Ontario bride told a magazine writer recently that the modern girl had a "cinch" compared to her mother or grandmother when it came to housekeeping.

Speaking from her own short experience as a housewife, she explained how simple it was to cook with the swift, efficient co-operation of an automatic electric range. These ranges, she declared, not only took the guesswork out of cooking but they were clean and did not blacken cooking utensils with grease and grime.

Her husband, she proudly stated, had 'figured it out' that they saved 17 per cent in meat purchases by using an electric range because of less cooking shrinkage, while less expensive cuts of meat could be used. He had also discovered that they could cook a complete dinner for less than one cent's worth of electricity.

This little bride, who is typical of many other young married women, declared that she could not get along without her electric refrigerator, food mixer, grill, toaster and coffee percolator. When it comes to house cleaning, she makes good use of her electric vacuum cleaner and floor polisher.

This bride declares that she can finish her house cleaning, wash the clothes in the electric washing machine, and prepare dinner in a matter of from two and a half to three hours.

"Surely," she agreed, "I've plenty of time for enjoyment—even on wash day!"

White Coal Is Really Money Saver

IF a man were offered a three-cent stamp for eight hours manual labor his reply might not be exactly parliamentary. However a single kilowatt-hour of electrical power, which can be bought in this country for an average price of three cents will easily do as much mechanical work as an ordinary man can do in an eight-hour working day.

In emphasizing this fact, electrical engineers point out that three cents will buy enough energy to churn 100 pounds of butter, iron clothes for a whole week sheer sixty sheep, or run a sewing machine for a month. City homes, farm homes—it makes little difference. Costs do vary to some extent, but the variatian isn't large. In some localities a kilowatt-hour may cost more than three cents; in others less than two; but as stated above, the average cost in Canada is three cents.

Farmers can benefit tremendously from the application of electrical devises to their work, according to men who have actually put the principle to a test. Water may be pumped, cows milked and machinery operated by electricity with a fraction of the effort that manual labor requires. Scientific tests have proven that a constant supply of fresh water increases the milk yield of cows by 10 to 20 per cent in quantity and by 6 to 12 per cent in butter fat content. It is known, too, that hens produce from 8 to 10 per cent more eggs if properly supplied with water at all times.

An electrical water system, it is pointed out, can provide that water and produce those benefits. As the same time the user has the assurance and testimony of hundreds of men who already use that system, that it is highly efficient and surprisingly inexpensive.

Electricity Classed As Economy Aid

A single kilowatt-hour of electrical power — that's three cents' worth, if bought at the average price—will easily do as much mechanical work as an ordinary man can do in an eight-hour working day.

In emphasizing this fact, electrical engineers point out that those three cents represent buying enough energy to churn a hundred pounds of butter, iron clothes for a whole week, shear sixty sheep, or run a sewing machine for a month. Costs do vary to some extent, but the variation isn't large. In some localities a kilowatt-hour of electricity may cost more than three cents; in others, less than two; but, as stated above, the average cost in Canada is three cents. In Ontario the average cost for domestic use is even less; in fact, it amounts to less than one and one-half cents per kilowatt hour, or about half the average Canadian price.

No other household employee since the beginning of time has been able to produce the amount of work that electrical servants can produce, or do it nearly so cheaply. Even slave labor would be more expensive than electricity, because slaves must eat. Upkeep of appliances is almost absurdly cheap, and it has been proven time and time again that good electric motors and other pieces of equipment will last long periods of time, accomplish immense quantities of work, and rarely need to be serviced or replaced.

It is a simple matter to compute the financial savings that electrical appliances can effect in a household. Electric ranges, irons, lights, heaters and other appliances will stand the closest comparison that can be applied when costs are being surveyed. But their economy doesn't end there. Besides an immediate saving of money, every bit of electrical apparatus effects a saving of labor, energy, youth, beauty, time and health. Those economies are too important to be disregarded. Everyone in the modern world realizes and admits the advantages that accrue from the budgeting of those six factors.

Electricity on any property provides other economies too. Good light is a protection against marauders. Safe lighting is protection against fire hazards. Those factors may be regarded as extra insurance accompanying the other, primary savings. Highly-trained, experienced electrical research engineers agree that it is insurance that will last long, serve well and cost little.

Electric Refrigeration Saves Food

Shown here is one of the De Luxe models in the 1940 refrigerator line. They are smarter than ever in appearance and incorporate many new features. Electric refrigerators have solved the food preservation question, hence with the war there can be no better way of saving food than by using an electric refrigerator.

Emancipation of Women Really Came in the Kitchen

THE changes that have taken place in the kitchens of today in comparison with conditions as existed 10 years ago were well demonstrated in an incident witnessed at the Canadian National Exhibition last fall.

A dear old lady, of the grandmother type, was looking rather grimly at an exhibit of a modern kitchen. Turning to the man in charge of the exhibit she sniffed and asked, "Lands sake, boy, is that a kitchen or a pantry?"

With sort of a shop-worn smile —it was nearing the close of the exhibition—the salesman assured her it was truly a kitchen. And, suddenly rankled by her apparent disdain for the glittering masterpiece, he added, "I presume you've never seen a modern kitchen madam!' He laid it heavy on the "modern."

With a look that plainly placed the salesman in the class of what's-this-young-generation-coming-to, the old lady snorted again and said, "Well, I suppose you young men are satisfied with a meal you can get with a can opener. So this would do for a kitchen for you."

At this point the real hostilities broke out. The salesman was determined not to let her go until she had admitted that this modern kitchen was the finest she had seen. And the dear old soul was just as determined to stay until she had convinced the young whippersnapper he was all wrong.

Lessen Housewife's Steps

We had all gathered in closer the better to hear this battle between the new and the old. "Shucks tain't room enough in here to swing a cat," commented the defender of the old-style kitchen. With a smug smile, the salesman explained that the basic feature of a modern kitchen was its compactness. With a flourish he produced a chart showing how a "planned" kitchen, with its work centres so placed to minimize the number of steps taken, saved a housewife a mile or more of walking today.

But it was evident his opponent wasn't paying too much attention. You could see a crafty little smile showing up as she once more implied that modern cookery efforts were picayune compared to the meals that used to be prepared in her day of skillet flourishing. "Why, young feller, you haven't got the room to store half the pots and pans you need to prepare a good old-fashioned meal!"

He countered her argument by producing, with almost a magician's touch a variety of pots and pans and kitchen accessories in almost countless numbers. Every nook and cranny of that kitchen house its share of implements—all placed most conveniently to the work centres where they would be used—but all hidden from sight in cleverly planned storage places.

Best Parties Are In Kitchen

But the closest approach to victory he could gain was to have the dear old lady suddenly ignore the subject upon which they were talking and turn to something else. In feverish haste, the man picked up each challenge. The ice-box—what could compare in the past with modern refrigeration where the requirements for a week's food supply could be kept in a safe, sanitary cottage. The lustrous sink —easy to clean as were the gleaming working surfaces beneath the spacious cupboards.

"And when you throw a party,

Thousands of Women Are Dependent on Electricity

MORE and more women are realizing that their home is also their workshop—and that electrical devices are the tools that they can use to free themselves from household drudgery. Toasters, mixers, grills, coffee-makers, vacuum cleaners and other electrical appliances save thousands of "woman-hours" a year in almost every conceivable household job.

Many women find that preparing meals in electrically-equipped kitchens is no longer the grim, hurried task it once was, but actually a pleasant, satisfying occupation. Literally dozens of ingenious appliances have been developed by electrical manufacturers to ease the kitchen labors.

Electric mixers that beat, mix, whip cream and stir; sandwich grills that produce golden-brown, toasted sandwiches at a moment's notice; waffle irons that give fluffy, delicious morsels without fail; electric clocks that give exact time all the time without winding, regulating or oiling — all these things add to the modern housewife's efficiency, and to her happiness.

Other electrical helps around the house that are highly valued by the great many women who use them are: hair-curlers, coffee percolators, egg-cookers, automatic irons; radiant heaters, and the compact, efficient motors that drive their sewing machines.

By the use of these electrical servants women have cut in half the time and effort that used to be required to complete their daily household jobs. The benefits in comfort, health and leisure gained are so great and so appreciated by thousands of women that many say they could not face the prospect of continuing without the help of these modern, twentieth-century helpers.

Electric Refrigeration Has Solved Food Preservation

IN the up-to-date electric refrigerator even the tenderest and most perishable foods will maintain their garden freshness for weeks if necessary. No longer is everyday shopping a problem to the housewife. She buys her food in quantity—take advantageof special prices while they are in effect and what she does not immediately require she stores on the generous shelves of her refrigerator.

Preservation of butter, milk, eggs and other perishable items creates no problem. Adjustable temperature and humidity controls enable her to keep her foods in the atmosphere most suitable for maintaining their full, natural flavour.

Silent, efficient, long-lived, modern home refrigeration units have made possible a new existence for many a wife and mother. With fresh green foods so easy to keep, and with quickly-frozen desserts so easy to make, women save time from the tasks of the kitchen —and are able to devote that time to their leisure pursuits.

But, even more important, green foods are very necessary for health during the trying days of winter. Formerly, green foods suffered one of two fates in winter storage—they either wilt-foods suffered one of two fates in winter storage—they either wilted or they froze. Now, with electric refrigeration, greens can be kept crisp and fresh indefinitely.

Many families find that a quick convenient supply of ready ice-cubes makes the problem of entertaining a simple one. Beverages, already prepared and stored in the refrigerator may be quickly served with tinkling cubes of sparkling where does the gang congre—" the ice to preserve the cold frosty good-

Hydro's Growth In Ontario Has Been Most Remarkable

A BRAND new idea in 1900, a struggling infant in 1910, and a harassed half-reality for the next few years of its existence, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission today is a multi-million dollar investment for the people of the province, yielding to them each year the most abundant, most efficient, and cheapest electrical power in the world.

The first Canadian experiments in the use of Hydro-Electric Power took place in the early 1880's, and concerned nothing but lighting problems in the saw mills and textile mills of the province. Those place, of course, generated their own power from the waters of the mill-stream on whose banks they happened to be located. The transmission of power and distance away from the old-mill stream was thought to be an impossibility.

In 1888, however, reactionary opinion suffered a setback when electric power was transmitted over short distances—and worked. The Barber Paper Mill at Georgetown, Ontario, actually brought in the electric power to run its machinery from a spot two miles away.

At that very moment the limitations restricting the transmission of electrical energy started to break down. Power was no longer confined to the area immediately surrounding falls and rapids. It could be carried!

The Toronto Board of Trade in 1900 began to wonder if there was not some way of obtaining, from the energy at Niagara Falls abundant electricity for cheap and clean power for factories and the homes of citizens. The Board named a special investigating committee to look into the matter. People wanted power. The question was under almost universal discussion. All in all, the time was ripe and the conditions favorable for the production of low-cost power.

Started into action by the recommendations of that first committee, the municipalities of Toronto, London, Brantford, Stratford, Woodstock, Ingersoll and Guelph appointed an investigating body, the Ontario Power Commission, to give the matter more thorough consideration—and to present some workable plan.

Power Commission Act

The report of that investigating body was favorable, and it led, in 1906 and 1907, to the passing of the Power Commission Act and the creation of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

Since that time, of course, additions and modifications have been made to the acts concerning the Power Commission's work.

Fourteen municipalities co-operated in those first days. They provided the money and the authority by which the work of preparation was done. In the next year, 1908, those fourteen municipalities signed a contract with the Commission for a supply of power.

In September of 1910 the Commission started to distribute power over the initial transmission network in Southern Ontario, and by the end of that year was supplying about 3,500 horsepower to the co-operating cities and towns. Now, after less than thirty years of operation, the Commission supplies power to about 800 villages, towns, and cities and townships, all over the province.

In five years from the very beginning of the Commission's work the whole 100,000 horsepower that was originally contracted for, was in use—and had to be supplemented by an additional purchase of power by the purchase of existing generating plants, and by the construction of new power plants. One of the new plants, the Queenston-Chippewa power development, now the largest of its kind in the world.

Now, instead of the 3,500 horsepower supplied in 1910, the Commission distributed 1,954,083 horsepower from its own generating stations and through contracts for purchased power systems of the Commission in Ontario in December 1937.

At the very outset, when the Hydro-Electric Power Commission was created in 1906, the municipalities were fortunate in finding a really great man to guide the new born baby through its dangerous years.

Sir Adam Beck was appointed chairman of the Hydro Commission in that year, and remained the leading figure in the development of the enterprise until his death in 1925. Beck it was who breathed the breath of life into the infant enterprise, who took it by the hand and guided its steps away from political intrigue, until it could stand on its own feet, a healthy, self-supporting and valuable public servant. Today the Ontario Hydro Commission has evolved a definite and successful working policy for the development, transmission, and administration of power under public ownership. The local distribution of power, within the borders of each municipality, is the general, under the administration of a Public Utilities Commission in that municipality. The distribution system is financed by municipal debentures, which are retired from revenue, in from 20 to 30 years.

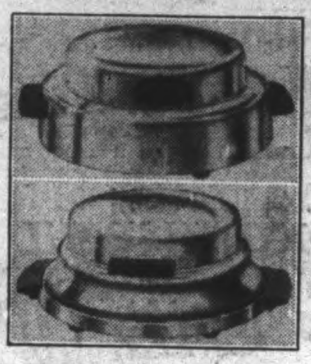
Power Is Cheap

Power is cheap in Ontario. The average cost of electricity for domestic purposes is less than 1½ cents for kilowatt hour. For commercial purposes, it is less than 1¾ cents, and for farm purposes under 2½ cents per kilowatt hour. As a result of these low costs the annual consumption of power for domestic purposes in Ontario exceeds the Dominion average by more than 25 per cent and that of the United States by 125 per cent.

Hydro has found many uses since the eary days when illumination was the problem to be met. Now there are numberless appliances and pieces of apparatus that depend on electric power. Houses, offices, and factories use those appliances every day and in their use require an ever-mounting supply of electricity.

Parallel to the promotional efforts of the Commission, are preparations for future increase in the use of Hydro-Electric Power. During 1938 the Commission completed construction of a number of generating and transmission projects, while, at the same time, extensive investigations were carried on in connection with new sources of power to meet future demands.

Waffle Irons



The Waffle Iron today is styled in the most beautiful modern type of design, with concealed wood feet and walnut handles. It has a tray base to catch overflow batter and quick-heating glow coil elements that provide even heat for the die-cast aluminum grids. It has a newly-designed heat indicator that tells when the iron is hot enough to receive the batter.

One Cent Goes A Long Way In Buying of Electricity

WHEN a woman opens her purse purse and discovers she has only one cent she hurries in dismay to the bank or her husband for more money. This lone copper however would go a long way in purchasing Hydro power.

Statistics released recently by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission show that one cent will cook a complete dinner for two people, the current cost with modern electric range being less than half-cent per person per meal. One cent will light at 60-watt lamp for more than ten hours! It will pay for the current to operate an electric refrigerator for twelve hours or more, and will operate the family radio for six hours! An electric vacuum cleaner would have to be used for 1½ hours to exhaust the buying power of one cent, which will also pay the cost of an hour's washing in a modern electric washer. At the same time, one cent will heat over five gallons of steaming hot water. Hydro current used for water heating is subject to special low flat rates.

These costs, which are based on an average rate of 1½ cents per KW-hour, offer one good reason why construction of complete electrically-equipped homes in Ontario has been steadily increasing. Day by day, the science of electricity is working new magic and unfolding new wonders which save time and energy while rendering more efficient service.

The cool, clean, thrifty and fast-cooking, electric range, equipped with automatic controls, and the up-to-date electric refrigerator have been acclaimed for their dependability and economy. These and other appliances such as electric food mixers, fans, radios, ironers, washing machines, vacuum cleaners, heaters, toasters, electric shavers and clocks have taken their place as necessities in the truly modern home, which is planned to save time and money.

Electricity Gift to Health

DUSTLESS cleaning, fumeless cooking, lighting without hazard of fire, these are some of the advantages that the wide use of electricity has brought into the home. Vacuum cleaners electric ranges and incandescent lamps have made those things possible and other appliances in other lines of household work are making others benefits just as real—just as worthwhile.

A few years ago housewives had to do their shopping for food supplies from day to day at no time buying more than they could use quickly—very quickly so it couldn't spoil. Now the owner of an electric refrigerator can stock up on vegetables and groceries of all kinds even the most perishable fruits and be assured that her cold storage compartment will keep those foods at a temperature and a humidity that will preserve their full flavor and freshness for days, even weeks at a time.

To the housewife that means a great saving of time and effort—and a chance to take advantage of current values in food values. To her family it means a constant supply of health-giving foods. It gives surety of sweet milk, fresh eggs and butter at all times. The importance of those things is well known; medical authorities are agreed that the average standard of health has increased noticeably in the period since people began to pay closer attention to their foods—to insist upon a sufficient amount of fresh green food products in their daily diet.

Dangers from fire have decreased rapidly since old-fashioned lighting and cooking methods went out of favor. Rarely does one read of a stove starting a fire in a kitchen, or of a kerosene lamp exploding to spread its fiery contents through the house.

Proper light is a great factor in the preservation of good eyesight. Eyes are strained and weakened when used extensively in surroundings that are poorly lighted. Even at the school age one out of every five children has impaired sight. At 20, two out of five need glasses and at 40 three out of five need glasses. When good light is more widespread there is every reason to believe that cases of defective sight will decrease in number rather than increase as is now the case.

Bad Lighting Causes Sight Defect

TODAY the average man or woman uses his or here eyes for close work 10, 20, or even 100 times as much as a similar individual did 50 or 100 years ago, according to electrical research engineers, who say that the proper care of eyesight is a pressing public matter. Even the oculist, whose business grows as eyes develop weaknesses early in life, is concerned. Glasses correct and aid faulty eyesight, but they cannot work efficiently unless the conditions of artificial light under which they are used give them the proper support.

That is why manufacturers of lighting equipment are currently doing everything possible to educate the public to the value of proper artificial light. Lighting has improved to such an extent that lamp efficiency which was impossible to attain only a few years ago is easily available in every home that is wired for electricity.

Bulbs are better, last longer and cost less than a few years ago. Fixture manufacturers have developed new standards of efficiency. Power is cheap and readily available. And new advances are being made all the time.

In the field of economy, for example, amazing strides forward have been made. Today it costs the average Ontario home (that is, one using 54 kilowatt hours a month for lighting, only $1.00 a month for light.

In all commercial work, in schools, in homes, in clubs, and even on the street after dark, proper lighting is now regarded as vitally important in making seeing easy and free from strain. For the past twenty years, scientists have been testing thousands of subjects in order to determine the proper intensities of light for safe, easy seeing. They have found that seeing uses up nervous energy, At the same time, they say, lighting influences heart action, and poor lighting is an important cause of eye trouble.

The three cardinal rules of good lighting are plenty of light, no glare, and efficient distribution. Larger lamp bulbs in modern, efficient fixtures and lamps units, properly shaded and distributed throughout the room meets these requirements. Today's low costs for electric power make their use economical.

Not long ago research workers conducted a survey and learned that 24 per cent of high school students and 31 per cent of college undergraduates had defective vision. Further, it was discovered that a full 95 per cent of all people over 60 years of age had something wrong with their eyes. The most disturbing fact of all was that these percentages of eye defects are on the increase.

The significance of these facts is obvious. Everyone must learn to guard against eye strain and overwork for the eyes. Good light is the primary factor in a program of good care. And modern lighting service can supply good light. It only remains for everyone to insist on the best service modern lighting experts can give, and the best lighting equipment that manufacturers can supply.

When Living Electric Way

HOW modern is your home? Here is a list of questions that clearly reveal how much advantage you are taking of the electrical way of living.

1. Have you adequate lighting fixtures in every room?
2. Have you plenty of approved stand and table lamps for reading, sewing, etc.?
3. Have you enough switches and convenient outlets in every room?
4. Have you a modern electric range for easy meals and better cooking results?
5. Have you a food - saving electric refrigerator to guard your family's health?
6. Have you a modern labor-saving electric washer to eliminate "Blue Monday" drudgery and help you stay young?
7. Have you a thrifty flat rate hydro hot water heater to save you steps and furnish instant hot water at the turn of the tap?
8. Have you an electric radio for dependable reception?
9. Have you a work saving electric vacuum cleaner?
10. Have you an accurate electric clock?
11. Have you an inexpensive electric ironer?
12. Have you an electric toaster, an electric fan, for hot summer weather—an electric sun lamp to guard against winter ills?

Good lighting generally aids defective eyes even more than it helps normal eyes.

Trent Canal Reservoir Water Power

POWER plants in the Trent Canal system from Cameron Lake to the Bay of Quinte are located as follows: Fenelon Falls, 1,000 h.p.; Bobcaygeon, a small plant on one of the branches of the Bob River, supplying the village with power as a municipal enterprise; Young's Point, 700 h.p.; Lakefield 2,300 h.p.

At Lock 24 south of Lakefield the Hydro-Electric Commission owns a plant they bought from the Canada Cement Company. It has been reconditioned and according to information is ready for use at any time. Its turbine, a former William Hamilton produce, is rated at 1,000 h.p.

Then there's the C.G.E. Company's dam at Nassau. The Hydro dam at Auburn; the Quaker Oats Company dam at London street in the city.

Below Rice Lake there is a small privately owned power plant at Hastings. And going on down the Trent—Healey Falls, Campbellford municipal plant; Ranney Falls; a plant at Lock No. 9, Hague's Reach; Meyersburg; Frankford paper mill dam; Frankford unit of the Hydro system, and finally the Sidney power plant at Lock No. 2 above Trenton.

Healey Falls Largest

The Healey Falls plant with an operating head of 74 feet of water is the largest producer of power in the system. Its three turbines have a total capacity of 16,800 horse power.

The Ranney Falls station below Campbellford was constructed by the Hydro - Electric Commission and came into operation in August, 1922. It has an average operating head of 47 feet, and its two turbines a combined capacity of 10,000 h.p.

The power plant at Hague's Reach, 2½ miles below Campbellford has a head of 22.5 feet and is rated at 3,500 h.p. The Meyersburg plant, two miles further down stream, has an average operating head of 32 feet, and its three turbines a joint capacity of 6,600 h.p. The Commission's plant at Frankford contributes another 4,800 h.p. through its turbines. The Sidney generating station has a total capacity of 4,600 h.p.

The Auburn plant in Peterborough is credited with 2,880 h.p.; Lakefield 2,300 h.p.; Fenelon Falls 1,000 h.p.; Young's Point 700 h.p.

These brief facts relating to the production of power in the Central Ontario system indicate that its most important section is south of Rice Lake.

Electric Way Is Cleanest

GREASE and grime which became embedded on the bottom and sides of pots and pans used on old-fashioned stoves and ranges no longer present a problem to the housewife.

Modern electric ranges have not only taken guess-work out of cooking and made it a pleasure but they are clean and as pure as sunshine, without the presence of soot, smoke and ashes, while cooking utensils do not become embedded by carbon.

Pointing to one of these modern and attractively-finished electric ranges one dealer emphasized the fact that the entire range was porcelain, which could be cleaned easily with a lamp cloth. He directed attention to the rounded corners of the oven interior which would not hide grease and dirt while all parts of the oven can be removed to be cleaned. The oven interior of many ranges is dark and pebbled in appearance, stains not showing.

Referring to one of the many benefits received by electric range owners this dealer declared that there was less kitchen redecoration required in homes where they have been installed.

Statisticians of a large American insurance company have figures to prove that women live longer, retain their youth and are mentally more alert than they were a generation ago. This is attributed to their methods of modern living. Electricity has played a big part in the preservation of health and happiness.

Washer Has Banished Blue Monday

MONDAY used to be the day when the odor of soapy water and wet clothes detracted from the more pleasing aroma of steak and onions. Mother used to rush to and fro from the wash tub with baskets of dirty linen. For hours she stood over the steam scrubbing board, her hair askew and her face perspiring from the back-breaking work. At intervals she would break away from her unpleasant chore to see if the dinner were "coming along" on the hot stove.

The rubbing and rinsing done, she would struggle to wring out the ice-cold, slipper sheets. Then she would hang the clothes out on the line, after which she was faced with the job of folding and ironing.

But now, "Blue Monday" is fast disappearing. Monday, as a matter of fact, is not very different from any other day in the modern home. True, there is still the washing, drying and ironing of clothes to be done, but Hydro power and modern machines come in.

On Mondays, the modern woman slips on a neat house dress and steps down to her clean, compact basement laundry. Here, she soaks the dirty clothes in soap and water, after which she places them in the washing machine, closes the lid and snaps the switch. The modern agitator quickly removes all dirt from the clothes, a chore which was formerly done with the maximum of effort and less efficiency with the old corrugated scrub-board.

The actual washing done, all the clothes are thoroughly rinsed in the machine and wrung out in the electric wringer. When they are finally dry, they are ironed in the electric ironer and put away. With the swift, thorough co-operation of the modern electric washing machine, the modern housewife is able to do her washing more efficiently in a fraction of the time it took her mother or grandmother.

The fact that Ontario women are relying more and more upon washing machines to take the "blue" out of Mondays is to be found in a number of interesting statistics released recently by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario. They show there are close to 300,000 washers in use in the various urban municipalities throughout the province.

Have your eyes as well as your teeth examined regularly by a competent eye-specialist.

Meal Cooks Itself While Cook Away

THE housewife may be miles away but an electric servant turns on and off the heat and a complete dinner is ready to serve when she returns hours later.

This unique feature of the modern electric range which allows a woman more leisure time is strongly emphasized. "It is called the automatic timer," one dealer explained, "and complete oven meals literally cook themselves without supervision. There is no necessity for stirring or basting and there are no burned meals owing to failure to turn off the heat at the right time."

He pointed out the modern ranges were enabling an ever increasing number of women to enjoy more care-free leisure hours, while the cleanliness of electric cookery made it unnecessary to spend time scrubbing pots and pans.

Farm Progress Is Evident In Rural Hydro Extensions

THE advent of electrical service, and the construction of transmission lines in the rural districts of Ontario have become symbols of agricultural progress. During the past year the mileage of primary lines approved for construction in rural power districts of Ontario reached a new high record of 2,660 miles to serve more than 14,000 additional customers. The previous records were 2,300 miles in 1937 and 1,994 miles in 1930. Most of these lines were actually constructed during the year, or were under construction at the year's end.

The lowering of the service charge and the reduced requirements respecting the number of consumers per mile of line has in the past two or three years resulted in a phenomenal growth in the extension of service in rural power districts. The aggregate load supplied to all rural Hydro consumers in the Province increased during the year 1938 by 17.3 per cent. This substantial growth indicates an extended appreciation of electrical service, and an ability to install equipment to utilize this service.

During the period that the regulations respecting service to rural consumers required a minimum of three farm contracts per mile of primary line the Commission made surveys in various parts of the Province and estimated that approximately 75,000 sandard or large farms would comprise the probable ultimate total of farms that could be served on this basis. Since that time new regulations have been made permitting service on the basis of two farms per mile, which necessarily has increased the number of additional farms that may be served.

There are 178 operating rural power district in Ontario, and power is delivered to approximately 100,000 rural consumers, comprising farms and dwellings in various groups. The consumers are situated in 398 townships and 96 police villages, and are served over networks of rural primary lines which aggregate more than 15,700 miles. In addition ot the 398 townships served by rural power districts, 10 townships are served jointly by rural power districts and voted areas.

Uses For Electricity

As a result of the continued efforts of the Commission and other kindred interests the farming communities now have a better knowledge of the many uses to which electrical service may be applied. The progressive farmer, through information obtained and through his own inventive application, now finds many new uses for electrical service. It would be impossible in this report to describe these at length, but they may be classified under the following heads:

Lighting Service—Electric lighting is safe, convenient and time saving. It adds to the comfort and attractiveness of the farm home and reduces fire hazard to a minimum. Against the cost of energy for lighting may be set the cost of cost of coal oil or candles. Even at six cents per kilowatt-hour, a 40-watt lamp can be operated nearly 24 hours for 5 cents.

The progressive farmer is using controlled lighting for increasing the production of eggs and, what is more important from the viewpoint of financial returns, obtaining a greater proportion of the annual egg yield during the months when prices are high. Special forms of lamps, such as the infra-red or heat lamps, can be used to prevent rheumatism, etc., in litters of pigs, while ultra violet lamps have proven effective in preventing rickets in young pigs and chicks, eliminating losses and providing a more rapid and sturdy growth.

Power Service—Next to lighting, the energy used for mechanical purposes gives the most valuable service for the money expended for electricity.

In the farm home washing machines, vacuum cleaners, fans and furnace blowers contribute to making the farm home equal in comfort to one in the city. Motor-driven pumps supply water for sanitary system and general house and farm use.

In the barn, dairy and workshop of the farm, electric motors may be employed for chipping feed, wood cutting, hay hoisting, milking, cream separating, churning and the many purposes of the farm workshop. Electric milking machines reduce labor at milking time to one-half and their regular use increase the milk flow and fat content.

The cost of electricity for operating small motor-driven appliances such as washing machines and pumps for the use of water under pressure of sanitary purposes, is very small. With energy at the 2-cent per kilowatt-hour rate, a ¼-horsepower motor can be operated at full load for three hours for 1 cent. As actually used in motor-driven appliances, the motors frequently operate at less than full load, or, under automatic operation as in pumping and refrigeration, for only 25 to 50 per cent of the 24 hours.

Electric Refrigeration—This is a special application of power service. Its use promotes health and comfort and reduces food losses. Ice obtained from neighbouring ponds is frequently contaminated and has endangered the health of many farm dwellers. Electric refrigeration is of special assistance in connection with dairy operations. The farmers can accumulate his separated cream for a few days with safety and can improve the marketing quality of his milk by cooling. It is also useful in egg storage.

Heating Service — Under this head come: the minor appliances of hand irons, ironing machines, toasters and hot plates, which owing to their intermittent use consume relatively small quantities of electricity per month; the major heating appliances of ranges and water heaters which need relatively large quantities of energy for their operation, and the special applications of electricity for incubating, brooding, etc., and for soil heating which only becomes economically profitable when the current used is available at specially low rates.

The electric range, although a heavy user of current, is efficient and the cost of operation is more than offset where the farmer can more advantageously employ his time than in hauling and chopping wood for the stove. It is safer and in summer provides cool cooking in comfort for the farmer's wife and also leaves her free to undertake more useful work.

Entertainment Service—Radios provide entertainment, general information and a familiarity with current events and market prices which have done much to make life on the farm more attractive and profitable. The many applications of power in a farm workshop will provide countless hours of valuable recreation and pleasure.

856 Municipalities Are Served With Ontario Hydro

THE Thirty-second Annual Report of the Hydro-Electric Power Commision of Ontario has recently been published and distributed. It is a very comprehensive volume, and contains much of interest to all Hydro consumers in the Province. Some of the more interesting features of this report are worthy of discussion, and indicate the exceptional progress made by this publicly-owned and operated institution.

Although the work of the Commission and the service it renders to Ontario municipalities has increased tremendously during the past twenty years, the size of the Annual Report has remained very much the same. This has been accomplished by a steady process of condensation. In view of war conditions, the 1939 report is somewhat smaller than in recent years. Certain interesting, but not essential material has been eliminated, thereby reducing the report by nearly one hundred pages.

In the foreword to the report, several interesting diagrams covering the past twenty-five year's record in Ontario illustrated the financial stability of the Hydro enterprise which has accumulated reserves over $216,000,000.00. At the end of 1939, the total investment of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, together with the investment of the co-operating municipalities and distributing systems, etc. was approximately $446,000,000.00, representing a system developing the water powers of Ontario, and distributing electric power, widespread, to almost every section of the Province, and to all classes of consumers.

Municipalities Served

In October, 1939, the Commission was serving eight hundred and fifty-six municipalities in Ontario. This number included twenty-six cities, one hundred and three towns, three hundred villages and police villages, and four hundred and twenty-seven townships. With the exception of fourteen suburban sections of townships known as "voted areas," the townships and one hundred and seventeen of the smaller villages are served as parts of one hundred and eighty-four rural power districts.

The operation of the local electrict utilities conducted by municipalities receiving power at cost from the Commission is in a healthy condition, which is indicated by the fact that the total revenue collected by these municipal utilities for the year was $35,289,790.00, and the total cost of operation, including sinking fund and depreciation, $34,422,881.00, showing a surplus in operations for these municipalities of $867,000.00 for the year.

Cost To Consumer Reduced

During the last twenty-five years of operation of the Hydro, the cost to the consumer has been steadily reduced. For residential service, the average cost per kilowatt-hour has been reduced from 5.08 cents in 1914, to 1.25 cents in 1939. For commercial lighting, a similar reduction has been made from 4 cents per kilowatt-hour in 1914 to 1.58 cents in 1939. This indicates that today, in the homes of Ontario, on an average, four times the quantity of electricity can be consumed for the same monthly cost as could have been consumed in 1914.

Splendid progress continues to be made in the use of electricity in the rural areas. During 1939, the rapid growth in extensions of rural primary lines has continued, and more than 13,000 additional consumers in the rural districts were served during the year. At present, more than 100,000 consumers are receiving service on farms and in hamlets, comprising the rural districts.

Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman and chief engineer, in the introduction to the report explains that notwithstanding the tense situation in Europe which overshadowed activities everywhere, the fiscal year which ended October 31, 1939, was a year of encouraging progress. Evidence of increasing industrial activity was reflected in the increasing power loads. For some months prior to the declaration of war, Hydro experienced substantial increases in load, as did other electrical supply organizations across Canada. Since the war started, these increases in load not only continued, but were augmented, as plants manufacturing war materials greatly increased their production.

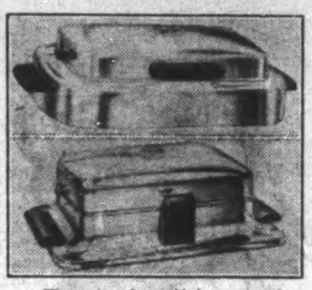
The total load in October, 1939 for all co-operative systems and the Northern Ontario properties, including both primary and secondary loads, was 1,963,471 horsepower, the highest ever carried by the systems of the Commission, and 7.2% above the October peak of 1938. The total revenue of the Commission from all sources showed an increase in 1939 of $2,796,962.00 over the previous fiscal year. This increase was sufficient to meet the cost of schedule increases in purchased power, the costs of general extensions of service throughout the systems, and also the special costs occasioned by war-time civil security necessities. It enabled the Commission to set aside for its various reserves an aggregate amount approximately equal in total to that made for the year 1938.

In view of recent developments, it is reassuring to note that the Commission early took the necessary steps "to ensure that Hydro power will be available in ample quantities to enable Ontario to make its maximum contribution to the War efforts of Canada." The report states that there is ample power available in all districts to enable Ontario's war effort to be speeded up and maintained at a greatly enhanced level, and it is reassuring to learn that during 1939, many steps were taken, and plans made, to ensure that this situation would continue, no matter what eventuates. The Commission also states that careful consideration was continually being given to industrial war demands for power, and to ensure that all plants working on munitions, might be guaranteed an adequate and reliable power service, as required.

An interesting feature of the report this year is the inclusion of a section dealing with sales promotion work which activity was undertaken during the fiscal year. This program, it is pointed out, is now being directed towards plants manufacturing war equipment, and specialized engineering service is being given to assist plants in speeding up the production of munitions and allied products, by the most efficient use of electric power and lighting.

A study of this annual report of the Commission not only shows the progress which has been made, but indicates the vital importance of Hydro to this province, the services which the Hydro systems have rendered, and are now rendering to the province, contacting every class of citizen and every form of activity throughout Ontario. People of this province have every reason to feel proud of this undertaking which is essentially their own, and which has been so successful. Their best indication of their interest and pride is in the support which they can give by utilizing the services which Hydro offers.

Sandwich Toasters



These two beautiful new sandwich toasters in the Hotpoint line are both easily converted into waffle irons by using specially built Waffle Grids. The one (above) is a large de luxe model, finished in chrome plate with walnut handles. Grids are 9¾ inches long by 5¼ inches wide, and a drip cup is supplied to catch surplus grease from grilled bacon or steaks. (Below) has grids measuring 8½ inches by 5 inches; also has drip cup and beautiful walnut handles. Both models are equipped with heat indicators that tell when the toaster is ready to use.

For One Cent

(Based on average of 1½ cents per KW-Hour)

ONE CENT will cook a complete dinner for two people...current cost with a modern electric range is less than ½-cent per person, per meal!

ONE CENT will light a 60-watt lamp for more than ten hours!

ONE CENT will heat over five gallons of steaming hot water... special low rates apply on hydro current used for water-heating.

ONE CENT will pay for current to operate an electric refrigerator 12 hours or more!

ONE CENT will operate the family radio for six hours!

ONE CENT will run your electric cleaner for 1½ hours!

ONE CENT pays the cost of doing an hour's washing in the modern electric washer!

If you have to hold the book you are reading much closer than 14 inches, the chances are your eyes are being strained. The remedy is eye-glasses or better lighting or both.

Touch Of Switch Provides Service In Homes Today

FIFTY years ago, electricity was practically unheard of, and all manner of crude gas and oil lamps penetrated the gloomy interior of homes throughout Ontario. Even as recently as 1915, the domestic electric bill was mainly a "light bill." Housewives were still using the old-fashioned stove-heated sad-iron and corrugated scrubboard. Brooms and carpet sweepers were generally among the first items of housekeeping equipment.

Today in homes throughout the province, the electric switch is taken for granted. As we touch it, we expect—and obtain—light, heat and the service of a score of electrical appliances in our home. So commonplace has electric service become that few in this generation can imagine a world without electricity always available at the touch of a switch. In cities, towns, villages, hamlets, farms and ranches, electrical appliances such as irons, toasters, refrigerators, washing machines, radios and house-cleaning tools have become common-place realities.

Swift Co-operation

The kitchen is where the housewife of an earlier generation used to spend most of her working day. While Grandma had to resort to old-fashioned and slow oil, coal or wood stoves to prepare the evening meal for Grandma, the modern housewife has the swift co-operation of a complete electrically-equipped kitchen to do the same job in a third of the time it took her grandparent.

The necessity of shopping every day has been eliminated by the modern electric refrigerator, which is capable of storing large quantities of foodstuffs. The electric stove or oven, or an electric roaster, will bake, broil, steam, stew—in fact, do anything required in the preparation of a dinner. In grandmother's day, waffles took a lot of time and work to prepare, but the electric waffle-irons of today provide waffles as, when and how you like them. With an electric-toaster, a casserole, a sandwich-grill and a coffee-maker, entertainment need not be a complicated affair. The compactness and informality of table cookery for buffet service has become the most accepted thing among smart hostesses.

In the living room, Grandma did not have much time to devote to entertaining her friends at bridge of an afternoon, chiefly due to the fact that house-work monopolized most of her time during the day. But with the electric vacuum cleaner and other house-cleaning appliances of today, the modern housewife can finish her work in a fraction of the former time.

Today, an electric light under the bed quickly reveals lost articles. If a glass of water is wanted in the middle of the night, the same under-the-bed light prevents the stubbing of an unwary toe. The light throws its direct beams on the floor only.

Sterilamp Is Being Used In Preservation of Food

ELECTRICAL engineers have succeeded in solving the problem of developing a satisfactory electrical sterilizing lamp that is an efficient generator of bacterial ultraviolet energy, operating at a low temperature and producing a minimum of ozone and at the same time capable of being produced at a cost low enough to make it commercially practical.

The sterilamp represents a big step forward. Previous ultraviolet lamps were in efficient as sterilizing lamps in two respects. First they consumed more power than was necessary and secondly the unwanted radiation did more harm than good. In a refrigerator for example if one of these lamps were installed as a sterilizing unit the high wattage would generate so much heat that extra refrigeration would be necessary and the lamp would have to be placed so far from the food that its effectiveness as a sterilizing agent would be greatly impaired. Then too these lamps generated considerable ozone which at these concentrations is toxic in its effect on human beings and adversely affects some kinds of food.

The sterilamp, devised after several years of research and experimental work by Dr. H. C. Rentschler, director of the Westinghouse Lamp Division Research Department and his associat, Dr. R. F. James has overcome all these difficulties and met all the requirements.

Filled With Mercury Vapor

It is an ultraviolet sterilizing lamp made from special glass tubing approximately ½ inch diameter and is available in three standard lengths. The lamp is filled with mercury vapor at a low pressure and the electrical discharge through this vapor produces the ultraviolet radiation. 80 per cent of the total radiation from the arc is the 2537A band which has the greatest bactericidal effect. The Sterilamp is operated and controlled by a power unit, consisting of a special transformer, protective relay and starting switch.

Little Penetration

One of the characteristics of the sterilamp is that its ultraviolet radiation has little penetration, its effect being primarily on the surface. The penetration is most organic substances is about 1 mm; tests made with water show 15-2 cm. penetration with 3 decrease in intensity; with milk it is less than 1 mm. However, it has been proved that the killing of bacteria can be effected on the shaded portions of foods exposed to the radiation, provided the air in the room is circulated sufficiently around the food and under the sterilamp.

After the sterilamp had been proven as a bactericidal device the next step was the development of practical uses for it. Several applications were investigated and one of these the most important from an economical viewpoint was that of food preservation. Back in 1864 Louis Pasteur developed a process of food preservation using heat to which he gave his name, "pasteurizing." Similarly, this new process using ultraviolet radiation was named after the men who developed it and is now known as the Rentschler-James process or more simply Rentschlerizing.

Food Preservation

Men have always required some form of food preservation. In Biblical times we read the Egyptians had seven years of plenty during which they had to lay by a supply of food for several lean years which were to follow. The Indians and others who depended on wild game for their food usually killed more than their immediate needs and then part of the kill was dried or frozen for their future needs. Nature herself preserves many foods by drying or protective coverings. These old methods with modern improvements are still in use, so now man is able to preserve the abundance of summer for the needs of winter and to enjoy all the year round many of those foods which were one time in season for only a short period during the year.

What causes food to spoil and why can't food be kept indefinitely without special care?

Most food spoilage is caused by micro-organisms, bacteria, yeasts and moulds and different enzymes which these organisms produce. These may be divided into two classes (1) those which are normally in the food and cause internal changes and (2) those which come in contact with the surface of the food at some time during its preparation and cause surface deterioration.

Included in the first class are such organisms and enzymes as those which cause ripening in fruits and some vegetables and which if not controlled will also cause over-ripeness and decay. Flesh foods also undergo an internal change which is probably due to an enzymatic chemical action but whether this action causes spoilage if allowed to continue too long authorities are not agreed. It is quite probable, however, that meat spoilage is mostly caused by organizations which contaminate the surface.

Worst Offender

By far the greater amount of food spoilage is due to micro-organisms of the second class and it is against there that the various methods of food preservation have been especially directed. Four methods are in common use, heat, cold preservatives and drying. The Rentschler-James process now makes a fifth method. However due to certain limitations this new method will not supplant the old ones entirely but it is felt that if it used in conjunction with them improved conditions of food preservation can be obtained.

This is particularly true with refrigeration. The organizations which cause spoilage are not killed by low temperature and even in frozen foods it is thought they develop to some extent, because of the fact that food has been frozen and thawed spoiled more rapidly than food which has never been frozen.

Thus with a combination of sterilamps and refrigeration, the former to destroy surface contamination and maintain sterile air conditions in the refrigerator and the latter to decrease the activity of those organisms which cannot be reached by ultraviolet radiation there will be sufficient improvement to justify the use of the sterilamps.

Put In Radiated Refrigerators

Processed and cooked meats that are served in the home without heating can be delivered to the customer in a practically germ-free condition. Heretofore these meats were exposed to the contamination of air-borne organisms and were a possible source of infection or transmission of disease. By storing these products in radiated refrigerators and displaying them for sale in display cases in which sterilamps are installed the products are kept in a clean condition without any deleterious effects on the taste or physical structure of the product.

Another use indicated for the sterilamp is the prevention of mould in the baking industry. Another is an installation on bread slicing machines, and many other applications are continually being evolved. Such uses as reducing contaminations in rooms where food products are being prepared, reducing contamination on fruit and vegetables being crated for shipment, reducing contamination in dairy barns and dairies all these and many others mean the end of unwanted germs which cause spoilage and disease and they provide insurance for longer, happier lives. History is likely to record that this development of a simple, practical means of destroying bacteria was one of the most important contributions of electrical engineering science to men.

On the average one grade school child in five, two college students in five, and three quarters of all people over 50 years of age suffer from defective vision.

Great Care Should Be Taken In Wiring for Electricity

ELECTRIC wiring, as far as the average homebuilder is concerned, seldom receives the studied consideration required to utilize electrical energy in the most convenient, economical and efficient manner. The average man thinks of his electrical installation as being complete if he has a range in the kitchen, a light in each room, with the odd switch thrown in here and there, and receptacle in some cosy corner close to his radio and easy chair.

When planning a home, the electrical installation should be looked upon as one of the most permanent and useful conveniences that can be incorporated within the structure.

The builder should carefully consider his fixed lighting requirements such as ceiling and bracket outlets.

Switches are a very important part of the lighting installation. An installation lacking the proper number of switches will prove to be not only inconvenient but costly from a current consumption standpoint. Three-way and four-way switches are often a necessity.

Receptacles very seldom receive the attention that their desirability and usefulness merits. No house can have too many of those intended for use with portable lamps. There is nothing more unsightly, and dangerous from a fire hazard standpoint, than flexible cords.

Receptacles controlled by means of wall switches will be found to be an added convenience particularly where portable lamps are concerned.

Service equipment, that part of the electrical installation through which all currents used in the premises passes, should be designed with a view to additional load.

Before proceeding with your electrical installation, consult your local Hydro representative and visit your electrical appliance store. Make provision in your electric wiring for the numerous, economical labor-saving devices which you will find a pleasure to have in an adequately wired "electrical home."

New Fluorescent Lighting Is Artifical Daylight

TWO new additions have been made to the General Electric family of Hotpoint ranges, while a precedent - breaking, three - year guarantee now backs the famous Calrod elements on all models.

Known as the "Chesterfield" and "Mayfair", the two new ranges are both built to the floor with convenient toe space and have 42-inch by 22½ inch working surfaces. Both models also feature concealed but easy-to-reach switches. The Chesterfield, which has been specially designed to fit into the modern kitchen, has three five-speed Calrod elements and a handy Thrift Cooker which steams, stews, bakes, boils or roasts foods. The automatic triple Owen offers three ovens in one in the interests of speed and economy. The Speed Oven, which can be preheated to 400 degrees in less than 8 minutes, is designed for single shelf oven cookery. Time and current are saved, it is explained, because only the part of the oven that is used is heated. The master Oven preheats to 400 degrees in less than 11 minutes and has extra large capacity. The Super Broiler has two speeds for different foods, offering either a quick, charcoal-type broiling or a slower and more gradual heat.

Ranges Cook Food Better

A CANARY can live in an electrict kitchen.

In making this observation a representative of a well-known electric utility company pointed out that electric cooking eliminated consumption of oxygen in kitchen. "From a health standpoint," he said, "use of electric ranges cannot be stressed too strongly."

"This is but one of the many important principles associated with the modern electric ranges," he continued and he declared that there were many reasons why electric cooking was healthful.

He contends that it stimulated the appetite of children because of the better taste of the fruits and vegetables. "Cooking at high temperatures for a long period will destroy the essential vitamins in almost any food," he stated. "With electric cookery the healthy giving vitamins are preserved because the heating speds are set at just the rate to cook the food."

It takes three times as much light to read a newspaper with the same ease as it does a well-printed book.

Searchlight Beam Is Visible For Hundreds of Miles

PETERBOROUGH residents have become familiar with evening skies that are cut by a piercing beam from one of the huge searchlights that are being tested. Like lights are along Canada's coast from enemy aircraft. These lights will take their rightful place amongst the important weapons being produced in the Empire for use in the Hitler war.

Interesting facts in connection with the lights have been made known, and they reveal that they are in many ways superior to other lights of a similar nature. So much secrecy surrounds the manufacture of war equipment of this nature, that even those working on the lamps have to carry special passes in order to gain admission to the assembly department.

Terrific Heat

The searchlight itself consists of a carbon arc with a large concave mirror behind it to concentrate the light. It is five feet in diameter, and special cored carbons are used because the heat generated in the arc crater is 6,000 degrees centegrade, or one half the temperature at the surface of the sun. The carbons are kept to the correct length automatically, assuring constant focus, and the power required by the arc is about 12 kilowatts.

The reflecting mirror is a highly important product of lens makers, and is cast on a convex form. It is then ground on both sides to accurate dimmensions. It is so constructed with various layers of different materials, and it is claimed that a bullet striking the mirror would not shatter the glass.

The beam of the searchlight has a luminous intensity of 800,000,000 candle power, and a visibility of 100 miles. It would, under good conditions allow the reading of ordinary newsprint at a distance of five miles. Power for the light is generated in a Diesel engine-driven generator, each light has its own generator set.

Bend 23 Degrees

The front glass of the drum serves as a protective covering to prevent draughts, and to exclude small winged insects. This glass which is of special process is said to have a bending capacity of 23 degrees, and upon breaking it will not splinter, but flies into countless tiny pieces.

Remote control of the lights is another standard feature. On coastal defence work, the operator and the generator may be a mile or more away from the light. Some of them are used in fixed positions, while others have small rubber tired wheels upon which they are easily transported. Some of them have a special attachment that will enable them to disperse a broad beam of light rather than the beam used generally in anti-aircraft work.

The precautions taken, by the department of National Defence, to insure efficiency on the part of the lights exclude no details, and each light must pass a number of rigid tests under the watchful eye of an officer from the Department. One of the tests involves the use of a spray of water which is played upon the lamp while it is in operation; this tests its resistance to rain, and chiecks the insulation. All of the steps in the manufacture of these lights are behind locked doors under orders from the Department of National Defence at Ottawa.

Women Came In Kitchen

salesman shook his head as he realized that this old dear would never be able to visualize the fact that most all successful parties today terminate in the kitchen, hence the desire for beauty in the kitchen and a smartness in decorating flair to match the rest of the home.

And so the battle continued. He won a moral victory when the old lady made no comment upon the small radio that dispensed its cheer from above the built-in kitchen desk with its recipe filing cabinets and pigeon-holed compartments for storing the grocer's bills and the like.

Labor Was Her Lot

The salesman saved his all for the kitchen range, however. Gently he led the old lady over to the gleaming, porcelain enameled electric model. In wordless admiration he stood before it. Then he went to work. Really, I've never seen a man so enthusiastic over anything before, except a rebate on his income tax.

He described how an entire meal could be prepared automatically without the necessity of remaining in the kitchen. He patiently explained the workings of the automatic oven heat control. He boiled up a kettle of water in jig time. Shower the varying heat intensities of the cooking top elements. He talked about even insulation; stainless, seamless cooking tops; the spotless, smokeless, odorless broiler. That man was a marvel. He practically gloated over each of those details we modern housewives simply take for granted.

Afterward, with a disdainful tilt to her head, the old lady turned on her heel and walked away. I could suddenly see the contrast between what we women of today term "work" and the actualities of yesterday. What a difference only a few years have made. Yesterday it was a housewife's lot to labor—actually labor—for six to eight hours each day in a big, rambling kitchen. A hot "stove" to work over. Constant attendance to keep over each item of baking and cooking. Needless, useless step to take from one side of the kitchen to the other. There was no release from the monotonous drudgery of cooking meals, washing dishes, cleaning up the kitchen, and then back over the same routine two more times that same day.

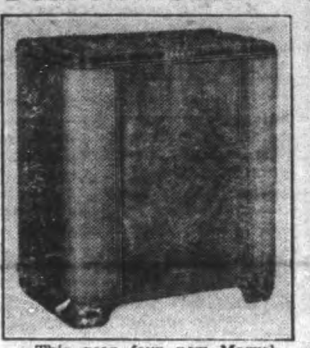
Her Kitchen Was a Prison

There were some that smiled after that old lady—the salesman did. Probably he was visualizing her in an old-fashioned kitchen, sitting in her rocking chair shelling peas. At her feet curled a yellow kitten. Behind the stove, a litter of puppies scrambled over their mother. A peaceful, old-fashioned scene of contentment.

Not for me. For there that poor woman spent the better hours of her life, making the best of duties that kept her prisoner within the four walls of a room called the kitchen.

Give me my modern kitchen. A bright spot where a woman needs only to play at her "work" while modern ingenuity and equipment lift the hardships from her duties. Moreover, I claim we are as good cooks.

Four New Units



This year four new Marvel-Aire Units, handsomely styled in walnut or metal cabinets, are announced by Canadian General Electric Company. These portable units humidify, filter, and circulate moist air, substantially improving the parched, dry air conditions that prevail in most homes during the long winter months when artificial heating is used. No installation or alterations are required in the home.

Electric Food Preservation

ness that is so important in a refreshing drink.

In the important matter of health, too, modern electric refrigeration plays its part. Contamination of meats or fish is avoided in homes where electric refrigerators guard the family's foodstuffs. Constant temperatures in the zone of cold that is necessary for safe food storage assure freshness at all times.

Thinking of Christmas Be Electrical Minded

CHRISTMAS shopping takes on a new importance this year, as does the festive season itself. A new note of practicality has been creeping into the planning of purchases for the queen of the household, the business girl bravely maintaining her tiny apartment in the face of increased living expenses.

It is wise to remember that the feminine mind is above all frivolity this season, her time too precious, too filled with carrying on behind the lines to waste on petty household tasks now comparatively unimportant in the light of a world cast into war.

Electrical appliances are making their appeal as needed labor-savers as never before, from the modern ranges, both gas and electric, which simplify the housewives quota of over a thousand meals a year, to the radio, whose rich, deep voice can lift her to heights of new inspiration after a wearisome day. The modern range, designed for measured heat, greater speed and more economical operation, might well be considered a headliner in the list of Christmas gifts, or if its a business girl or woman with a small apartment, no better choice might be made than a table cooker with its efficient little oven; a roasting dish that will plug in to do several dishes at once; a sandwich toaster or waffle baker—they may also be obtained in combination if you prefer. An electric iron, coffee maker, hostess tray for serving after-bridge snacks, a small radio, or even an additional grill would gladden any woman's heart on Christmas morning.

Everyone knows, too, what handsome well-chosen lamps can do for a room, and that carpet sweepers are marvels of efficiency these days—a gift that might go to work immediately at clearing away holiday debris.

Should you wish to make the lady of your household grateful to you for the rest of her days, there are porcelain electric refrigerators, dreams of perfection, that offer more in dependable, economical, convenient food storage than ever before—you needn't tell her right away that you've thought of your own pocket, too, when considering its purchase! Mixmasters are hailed by women as the great kitchen lifesaver, and among dozens of other grand gifts a washing machine is one present you can give her that will bring her greater comfort and more ease for years to come—it is one of the greatest aids to a homemaker in the entire household appliance field, our hardware store friend told us.

Yes, For Men Too

If, however, it's the lady who is doing the pre-Christmas worrying, footsteps turned toward a local electrical shop will provide the answer to her problems, too. We were introduced yesterday to electric razors that have come back into popularity because of their newly-acquired working smoothness, and to general purpose flashlights that would be welcomed by the soldier boy as well as the older man of the house. A radio for his own room sounds like a good idea for the male of the species, or an electric clock that has a soothing way of saying a purposeful "good-morning."

Wiring Important to Assure Safety of All Appliances

(By J. E.Ritchie, B.A.Sc., Fire Prevention Engineer, Ontario Fire Marshal's Department)

THE safe use of electrical appliances depends primarily on the standard of the wiring through which the electrical current is distributed through the building. Unless the wiring has been installed by a competent electrician and inspected by the proper authorities to ensure that it is in accordance with the present regulations, it may in itself contribute a hazard in addition to aggravating further hazards introduced by improper placing or installing of current consuming appliances.

It is a sign of trouble when sockets hiss or lamps flutter, when plugs are loose in wall outlets, when the wall switches fail to function when insulation on the wires is injured, when it is possible to get a shock from an appliance or when appliance fails to operate or causes a blown fuse. It is important that any such trouble be removed before any such warning or failure grows into a real hazard.

Electricity properly harnessed and properly handled is not dangerous in the customary acceptance of that term. Installations that are properly made and properly maintained and utilized offers very little hazard of fire except when some abnormal circumstances arises. Almost all fires from electricity are the result of improper installation, improper maintenance, substandard extensions or the overloading of individual circuits.

Need Expert Supervision

The characteristics of electrical energy are more or less obscure, and the ordinary householder is not sufficiently familiar with the technical aspects to know whether it is being safely applied or handled. For this reason expert supervision is necessary when electrical energy is being handled.

Everyone knows that when an electric current passes through the very fine wires in an electric bulb it produces a heat temperature in the wires so that they become "white hot." It may never have occurred to the average consumer however that if a sufficiently large current is allowed to pass through larger wires that constitute the house wiring these too will reach a temperature so high that a fire may result. To prevent this the electrical inspector inspects wiring when an installation is completed just to make sure that the wires are large enough to carry safely the amount of current required and that the fuses and the other pieces of equipment are properly installed and insulated.

Code of Rules

To prevent the public from electric shock and electric fires a code of rules formulated by the Hydro Electric Power Commission, has been made a part of the law of Ontario. In recent years the code has been standardized to apply to all provinces, and the provinces are taking steps to adopt it. Under the code as is now enforced in Ontario and it will be enforced in other provinces facilities are provided for the testing of electrical appliances and materials so that only those which are entirely safe to use will be placed on the market.

Proper use of electrical wires and equipment is just as important as proper material and proper installation. Allowing electrical equipment to fall into disrepair is responsible for most of the fires charged against electric service. Too often electric fixtures are subjected to uses for which they were never intended; it is not uncommon to find articles sometimes of considerable weight hanging on electrical brackets and subjecting them to an abnormal strain with the danger of causing injury to them or to the wiring to which they are connected. Fires and shocks resulting from such improper practices should not really be charged against electricity but against utter carelessness on the part of the user.

Nearly everyone at some time has received slight shocks from electrical equipment without any ill effects. Sometimes, however, those shocks may be dangerous, especially if the hands are wet. Electric fixtures in the bathroom, the handles of wall switches and the cover plates for all electrical outlets should be made of porcelain, plastic or some other insulating material. An insulating link in the chain of a pull-chain socket increases safety if there is any chance of the socket being operated with wet hands.

Safety precautions built into the permanent wiring of a house are of no avail if the last links in the wiring chain — the attachment cords—are either not suitable or not kept in good repair. Fortunately it is relatively easy to observe when a cord is wearing out because unlike other parts of the wiring system, they are in plain view. As a result of the severe abuse which electric cords are given in the average home they will almost undoubtedly wear out sooner or later, but some cords are so much more substantially made than others that it pays to take care when choosing them.

Extension Cords

It addition to flexible cords for the attachment of electrical appliances many people use portable extension cords for electric lights, electric drills or other movable pieces. Such extensions are not recommended for permanent attachments, but they are certainly handy and are very widely used. If they are used on damp earth, or in the vicinity of grounded metals good installation is of extra importance. In such locations sockets of insulated material should be used. and lamps should be protected by guards.

Fuses play an important part in guarding the safety of the electrically equipped home and their use should not be scorned. Some people, when a fuse blows out replace it with a copper coin thus allowing the current to flow unchecked. Some actions defeat the very purpose of the fuse and create added danger of fire. Fuses of the right capacity should always be used in replacing old blown ones. If too much current is allowed to flow through the wiring the insullation may be injured by excess heat or a fire may even start in the affected wiring. Ordinarily the fuses in house wiring crcuits should not have a current carrying capacity of more than 15 amperes unless some fully qualified electrician or inspector has advised that the wiring is suitable for a heavier fuse.

It would hardly seem necessary to warn against electric flat irons being left connected in the socket, but as a matter of fact overheated flat-irons have probably been responsible for more fires than any other electrical appliance.

Most of these fires have occurred when the operator has forgotten that the iron was connected, in many cases when the operator has left home. It might be a good thing if everyone remembered that one sure way of turning off an electric iron is to disconnect the cord. Otherwise if the iron is connected to an ordinary wall socket it is hard to tell when the current is turned off.

There is another reason why lamp sockets should not be used to supply current to electric wires. The switching mechanism in such sockets is designed to control incadescent lights which for home use seldom exceed 220 watts. As electric irons require from 500 to 1,000 watts they overload the switching mechanism with possible danger to the socket.

Electric Washers

Electric washing machines present additional difficulties because they must necessarily be used in the presence of water and grounded piping systems, and sometimes on damp floors. For those reasons special precautions should be employed when the machines are in use. Motors of washing machines are usually well-insulated but if the motor is allowed to get wet, its insulation may be impared. Cords used on washers are also likely to become defective and only rubber sheathed cords of good quality should be used in this connection. It is important to replace them when they become worn. If an electrician is employed to connect a special wire between the frame of the washer and the water pipe you will have insurance that any failure of insulation which may otherwise create a dangerous situation will immediately be indicated by the blowing of a fuse.

The electric heating pad is a very helpful appliance especially in cases of sickness and may be used with safety if a few fundamental principles are observed. Sharp folds in the pad should be avoided.

Greeks Close On Italy's Porto Edda

74 Women, 512 Children Air Raid Toll In 1st Month Of War

ATHENS, Nov. 30 (AP) — The Greek high command reported new gains today in the drive north of Konispolis, toward Porto Edda, Albania, where some Italian forces were believed cut off from retreat by Greek operations farther north around the embattled Fascist base at Argirocastro.

The high command said the advances put Greek troops in command of new positions "at various parts of the front" — especially north of Konispolis.

Two Italian cannon, large numbers of automatic guns and many prisoners were reported taken.

The high command's communique made no specific mention of the operations at Argirocastro (which the Italians said still was held by their troops, or north of Pogradetz at the opposite end of the battle-front (where Italian reports said their reinforced troops were counter-attacking.)

Air Raids Increase

The communique told of heightened air activity on both sides of the front.

Greek planes were said to have made reconnaissance flights over the Italian lines.

The communique said Italian fliers bombed Greek front line troops and attacked villages in Epirus, towns on the western coast of the Peloponnese Peninsula at the south of Greece, the Ionian Sea islands of Levkas and Cephalonia, and the city of Xanthe in Macedonia almost as far east as Thrace.

A Home Security Ministry communique said Greece's air raid casualties in the first month of fighting totalled 604 dead—including 74 women and 512 children, and 1,070 injured—including 425 women and 205 children. It said 1,200 houses were destroyed in towns and villages and countless others made uninhabitable.

Greeks Bag A Sub

Salonika, Greece, Nov. 30 (AP)

THE Greek destroyer Eagle sank an Italian submarine, an official Greek announcement said today.

Details were not announced immediately.

(No Greek ship of the name "Eagle" is listed in Jane's fighting ships. The "Aigli," a 145-ton torpedo boat, launched in 1913 and refitted 10 years ago, is probably the ship referred to.)

White Squirrels

THE northern part of the county may boast of its game preserve but the Birdsall Station section claims that it has one wild life attraction that cannot be duplicated by all the wonders of the north. It consists of a pair of pure white squirrels, with pink eyes, seen on three or four occasions within the last few days by Charlie and Harold Bray in the orchard of the Bray farm where the albino squirrels, about two-thirds the size of the red variety, were enjoying a meal of apples. These are not the first white squirrels seen in the neighborhood as one was caught by Ruth Thompson, Birdsall Station, some time ago.

U.S. May Bolster S. America, China Currency

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30—(AP).—The United States Treasury is expected to ask the Senate Banking Committee Monday for informal approval of a plan to use a portion of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund to bolster the sagging currency of China's Chungking Government.

A committee "OK" also may be sought, informed legislators said, for operation of the fund to support the currency of certain Latin-American countries if that move becomes necessary to insure the success of Western Hemisphere defence plans.

Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau made arrangements to appear before the committee at a closed session on what was described guardedly by some members as "important business."

Although several committeemen professed to know of Morgenthau's plans only that they dealt with the French Syria Chief Dies In Naval Duel

Plane Caught, Downed As British Chase Italians Off Sardinia

VICHY, Nov. 30. — (AP) — The Petain-Laval government permitted disclosure today of the death of Jean Chiappe, new high commissioner for Syria, in a French air transport which crashed Nov. 27.

Chiappe was a former prefect of Paris police.

The airplane carrying Chiappe was brought down over the Italian island of Sardinia and lost with all occupants.

An official announcement said Chiappe was killed after the plane was machine-gunned in a naval engagement between British and Italian warships.

The plane sent out the message: "We are being machine-gunned, plane on fire, SOS." The Vichy communique claimed that the transport was machine-gunned in flight by a British plane.

Lakes Shipping Has Boon Year

TORONTO, Nov. 30 — (CP). — Shipipng on the Great Lakes entered its final phase of the current season to-day. Summer insurance rates expire at midnight to-night and only the larger vessels will remain in service at the higher rates during the next fortnight.

Many ships on the lakes to-day are making their last trips of the season. A survey by The Canadian Press shows a general movement of smaller vessels to the south and east and when they discharge their cargoes they will be tied up for the winter.

Although official tonnage figures will not be available from the Federal Government until spring, estimates made yesterday indicated one of the busiest years in Great Lakes history. At Windsor navigation experts said the movement of vessels between the upper and lower lakes was not far behind the 1929 banner year. More than 20,000 ships passed through the Detroit River during the navigation season.

War time production in both Canada and the United States accounted for much of the season's activity as ore and coal were transported in unusual quantities.

At Sault Ste. Marie officials estimated the traffic during the season was 50 per cent higher than the 1939 figure.

Motorship Raider

AUSTRALIAN naval authorities said today the enemy raider reported to have sunk 67,000 tons of shipping in the South Pacific and Indian Oceans is a 6,000-ton motorship armed with torpedo tubes and four four-inch guns.

Survivors of two of the raider's victims, the merchantmen Port of Brisbane and Naimoa, described the raider as having a raked stem, a cruiser stern and squat funnels and searchlights, leading them to believe it was a modern motor-

RAF Cracks Down On German Navy Shipyards

LONDON, Nov. 30. — (CP). —For the third successive night Royal Air bombers centred their attack on Cologne, important industrial centre and inland port in western Germany, last night.

Besides docks and other installations in the inland port, communications were attacked in the Cologne raid, a communique from the Air Ministry said.

A secondary objective was found in the naval shipyards at Bremen, where German building is in progress in an attempt to replace the heavy war losses of the German navy.

On the invasion coast, Boulogne and Le Havre were bombed, while a number of enemy-occupied airdromes were attacked. No British planes were lost in all these operations.

Planes Come 2 a Min. After 10-Day Rest To Hit Other Cities

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(CP)—The Nazi Air Force made one of its strongest drives in recent weeks to bomb London today, but only a few of a hundred or more planes which roared toward capital got past the outer ground defences and the Royal Air Force.

There were two daylight raids by mid-afternoon, following a night attack in which the Germans used upwards of 300 bombers against London and home counties, while hundreds of others struck at the Midlands and the Merseyside.

Reports were current, too, that Bleinheim bombers re-fitted as fighters and equipped with an "ear" for detecting hostile planes were having increased success intercepting night raiders. This week's bag of German planes was said unofficially to have boosted Nazi losses over and around Britain to 3,000 since the war started.

"Many fires" were started in the London area by last night's bombing, but all were "under control" by early morning, the Air and Home Security Ministries said in a joint communique. Widespread damage to houses in the London area and "a few deaths were disclosed in the communique.

It said lesser raids were carried out virtually to the four corners of the island kingdom and mentioned Liverpool, focus of the air attacks the night before, as visited again.

3 U.K. Ships Sunk Week Of Nov. 29

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(CP):—Sinking of three British merchant ships totalling 17,267 tons was reported through neutral sources in the week ending Nov. 29. Another British ship, the 9,430-ton Port Hobart, reported she was being shelled by a German raider 500 miles north-east of Puerto Rico, but her fate was unknown.

Another ship reported sunk during the week was the 1,590-ton Norwegian vessel Princesse Ragnhild. The 5,135-ton Swedish freighter Anten was torpedoed 250 miles west of Ireland but the last report was that she was "still floating."

The British Admiralty does not announce individual sinkings and therefore some do not become known publicly. The Admiralty's latest summary, covering the week ending Nov. 17, announced the sinking of 59,534 tons of British, Allied and neutral shipping. This was 747 tons over the weekly average since the war began.

Aid To U.K. Vital Says Willkie

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 — (AP). — Wendell L. Willkie believes it is just as necessary for the United States to aid Britain as to arm itself. In his second speech since, as Republican Presidential candidate, he was defeated in the November election, Willkie told the National Interfraternity Conference last night:—

"We must continue at an ever-increasing rate to help the fighting men of Britain and to preserve that rim of freedom which is gradually shrinking and which, if we permit, will shrink to the edges of our own shores.

"I believe it is as necessary for America to give that aid to Britain as to build armaments for itself."

In his first post-election speech, Willkie recommended a "loyal opposition" as a fundamental part of democracy. Last night, he said the only hope for survival of democracy in the United States lay in continuation of "honest, free discussion" of the grave issues facing the nation.

On this score, he cited much "personal abuse and vilification" uttered by both Republicans and Democrats in the election campaign and commented that such remarks could result only in the "destruction" of some of the country's ablest and most-needed men.

Willkie said he was "firmly and completely convinced" that the tactics of partisans "on both side of the fence" in the recent campaign did not change any votes.

Recognize Puppet Rule Declare War Over; But Chiang Fights On

SHANGHAI, Nov. 30—(APP). — With Oriental ceremony, Nanking's Japanese-created government signed a pact for peace today with Japan while Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's Chungking forces were reported fighting on determinedly in provinces purportedly covered by the new Nanking-Tokyo treaty.

Thus, in the great Nanking administrative hall which the military leader, Chiang, had built within the shadow of Purple Mountain where lies the body of Sun Yat-Sen, founder of the Chinese Republic, Chiang's Japanese foes recognized the regime of his political rival, Wang Ching-Wei, as China's "national government."

The pact, signed by Wang and Japanese Ambassador Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, proclaimed an end to the bloody, undeclared war which started July 7, 1937, with a volley of shots across Marco Polo Bridge near Peiping.

The way was left clear, however, for continued Japanese military action against Chiang's troops still battling for the interior in their first month of resistance.

The Nine Points.

Japanese reports said the nine articles and protocol of the treaty provided principally:

1. Mutual respect for sovereinty of Japanese and Chinese territories.

2. Political, economic and cultural co-operation.

3. Joint defence against Communism, and the elimination of Communist elements, saying specifically that Japan, in order to carry out defence against Communist activities shall station the required forces in specified areas of Mengchiang and North China for the necessary duration.

4. Specific permission for Japan to station naval units in China.

5. Chinese co-operation in giving Japan all necessary facilities for development of economic resources and promotion of trade with Japan; Japanese financial aid in rehabilitating Chinese economy.

6. Japanese renunciation of any further territorial claims in China and restoration of China's former concessions, China allowing freedom of entry and residence to Japanese subjects.

The Japanese were said to have agreed in the protocol to withdraw their armies from China within two years after fighting ends, "with the exception of troops stationed in accordance with the treaty."

The Nanking government pledged to compensate Japan for damages to Japanese rights and interests "suffered because of the China incident." Details of such reparations were left to be worked out later.

Manchoukuo, Japanese - created state sliced earlier from the north of China, recognized the Nanking government immediately.

Japanese sources predicted earlier that Japan's axis partners, Germany and Italy, also would exchange ambassadors with Nanking.

(Britain and the United States recognize the Chunking government of Chiang Kai-Shek as representing China).

Battles To Increase.

Chunking reports predicted Gen. Chiang's forces would answer the new pact by increasing their resistance.

Michael Said To Have Fled; Blood Flows In 3 Cities; Troops Mass In Bucharest

Iron Guard Parades Codreanu In Gold Coffin Hitler, Duce Send Dignitaries Battles Raging For Public Buildings

BUCHAREST, Nov. 30—(AP). — The Iron Guard paraded the gold coffin of its "martyred captain," Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, through the streets of Bucharest today in a funeral procession led by Green-shirted Premier Ion Antonescu and Vice-Premier Horia Sima.

The body of Codreanu, the Guard's founder, whose execution in 1938 now is being revenged by the Guards in a nation-wide blood purge, was taken five miles through packed streets to the Iron Guard headquarters on the city's outskirts for burial. German and Rumanian soldiers with bayonets fixed were among the thousands marching in a vast pageant of mourning.

King Michael was represented only by an army officer, but Hitler sent two high Nazis and Mussolini sent two Fascist dignitaries.

Premier Antonescu struggled to keep control of the country, which dispatches hinted to be on the verge of civil war, while Guardists arranged to attend funeral services in Bucharest for Codreanu and 13 comrades who were killed two years ago today (while trying to escape from Jilava prison, the official account at the time said)

Eighteen-year-old King Michael was reported to have fled his capital. There were reports of heavy loss of life in fighting at three Transylvanian cities. German and Rumanian troops were said to be massing in Bucharest. The death list in the Iron Guard blood slaughter, which started Wednesday, was said to be mounting.

Some reports trickling through the strict Rumanian censorship said Michael, who came to the throne when his father, Carol II., abdicated September 6, was headed for the Yugoslav frontier. Others said he was waiting on the outskirts of Bucharest until the situation cleared.

Guardists Fight Wildly.

These border-dispatches said that despite stern counter-measures taken by Antonescu to put down the spreading terror from the Iron Guard's purge of its enemies, Guardist Legionnaires were trying to seize power at Turu-Severin, Craiova and Brasov, in Transylvania. Heavy loss of life was said to have occurred in those cities in a fight for possession of public buildings.

The Guardists were said to have captured the post office and telephone building at Brasov before being driven out by soldiers of the local garrison.

Britisher Saves Greek Crew Off Nfld. Coast

HALIFAX, Nov. 30—(CP)—Shore sources lacked definite word today on the fate of 29 men of the foundered Canadian freighter Lisieux, but the crew of a Greek steamer caught in the same storm off Newfoundland was safe aboard a British vessel.

Leaving their waterlogged craft to the seas that had been pounding it for three days, the seamen of the 3,470-ton Eugena Cambanis were taken off yesterday by the Urla, a British freighter that had been standing by for 36 hours while the storm-driven Cambanis was smashed into a helpless hulk.

The Urla later reported all of the Greek crew had been transferred safely. She did not give the number, of men who had faced death aboard the Cambanis after boiler trouble 125 miles southwest of Newfoundland had left her prey to the storm of Tuesday and Wednesday. Nor was it disclosed where she was heading with the rescued seamen.

Meanwhile, the wartime curtailment of sea communications kept Canadian relatives unaware of the situation of the men on the Lisieux. A Norwegian freighter reported Thursday she had picked up some of them in a lifeboat, but no names were given.

The freighter—believed to be the Bernhard—said at the time she was searching for another lifeboat, but no report on whether she found the second boat has been picked up. The Newfoundland department of public utilities heard 10 men had gone down with the Lisieux, but this went without confirmation.

Some Put Ashore.

Hugh Macdonald of Halifax said last night agents of the Lisieux had advised him some of the vessel's survivors had been landed at St. John's, Nfld. He said he had been informed his brother, fourth en-

War Pivoting to East Indies?

Nanking Peace a Blind – Rumanian Revolt Hun Plot

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Two manifestations of totalitarian tactics drew themselves attention to-day, one the "peace" in China, the other the "total revenge" in Rumania.

The Japanese have accomplished one of history's most fantastic political manoeuvres. They have created a puppet government, established it in part of China where General Chiang Kai-Shek's forces are fighting Japan and then declared 'peace" with the puppet.

The manoeuvre appeared designed primarily for home consumption. The Japs are being pressed harder and harder by Chiang's troops and are being forced gradually to relinquish parts of conquered Chinese territory. They are believed to be casting jealous eyes on the vast oil fields of Netherlands East Indies, and may even be preparing an attempt to seize them.

Japan's war in China is believed to have waned in popularity among the rank and file in Japan. Hense, it might be desirable to pretend it has ended by acclaiming loudly a state of peace with a phony government. Then while the fight against Chiang is continued—or abandoned—a new one against the Netherlands Indies might be started.

Grounds for such a campaign already have been laid. A set of "incidents" has been reported the last few days by the Japanese press — alleged insults to the Japanese flag, mistreatment of Japanese subjects by Indies police, and the like.

Simultaneously there appeared a disposition on the part of the United States to help bolster Netherlands East Indies defences. Sentiment generally appeared to favor such a gesture and it was even suggested that the United States, if the occasion arose, might grant the Indies "all aid short of war."

The second manifestation of totalitarianism apparently has brought strife-torn Rumania to the brink of

Canada Opens Army Ski Class

Experts To Take Ottawa Militia Course, Then Teach Unit

OTTAWA, Nov. 30 (AP)—As the first heavy fall of snow packs down on the ski trails of the Gatineau hills, Canada's first military ski school is being organized in Ottawa.

Skilled users of the hickory blades from units in all parts of Canada are assembling at Lansdowne Park for training as ski instructors, starting Monday.

They will learn how skiing fits in with military operations and on completion of their training will return to their units to teach others how to use the 6,000 pairs of skis ordered for the army by the Department of National Defence.

The syllabus for the school includes both theoretical and practical instructions, field work and lectures. Instruction in the case of equipment also will be given.

Between lectures the future ski professors of the Canadian army will have ample chance to test the famed ski trails around the Nation's capital.

Each unit represented at the school is sending one officer and one non-commissioned officer. Established camps and training centres are also represented.

Infantry units sending men for instruction are the Grey and Simcoe Foresters of Midland, Ont., The Irish Regiment of Canada, Toronto; The Canadian Grenadier Guards, Toronto; Victoria Rifles, Montreal; Sherbrooke (Que.), Fusiliers; North Nova Scotia Highlanders; Algonquin Regiment; Picton (Ont.) Highlanders and Edmonton Fusiliers.

Among other establishments sending men is the Engineer and Signal Training Centres in Military District No. 3 (Kingston).

OTTAWA, Nov. 30—(CP).—Canadian - manufactured apple and tomato juice may replace oranges and grapefruit on many of the Dominion's breakfast tables as the result of government efforts to reduce the amount of money spent in foreign countries.

Two emergency finance resolutions will be introduced in the House of Commons Monday. Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House yesterday they would affect both trade and taxation." From the fact that the Throne Speech debate is to be suspended to consider these resolutions, members deduced they were of more than ordinary importance. It was widely assumed that the exchange situation would be involved in the measures.

There were reports that a strict limitation of importation of citrus fruits would be one method used by the Government to conserve foreign exchange. Purchases of such fruits normally send about $14,000,000 a year out of the country.

A week ago the Canadian Fruit Wholesalers' Association suggested in a circular letter to dealers that importation of various fruits and vegetables might be limited voluntarily. However, any Government limitation on citrus fruit imports would be compulsory.

Fleet Successes Off Italy Worry Berlin

BERLIN, Nov. 30 (AP)—Neutral observers in the German capital Friday voiced the belief that the Mediterranean area is coming so thoroughly under British control that it is creating a new problem for the axis.

The Greek successes, coupled with the crippling of half of Italy's battleship strength at Taranto Nov. 11, and further Royal Navy successes this week, have strengthened Britain's hold on the Mediterranean and caused neutral observers to wonder how long Germany can wait before putting her army on the march again.

While the German end of the axis is facing the winter without publicly admitting any qualms, reports from Italy induce speculation as to how happily that country, already reduced to four meatless days a week, will get through the coming cold months under the blockade.

In Washington, the United States department of agriculture reported that the British blockade of the Mediterranean has been so effective that Italy faces severe shortage of some foodstuffs and raw materials during the winter.)

Gangs Race Time To Save 28 Trapped In Mine

CADIZ, O., Nov. 30—(AP).—Toiling rescue crews braved treacherous rock falls and deadly gas today in a grim race to reach at least 28 miners entombed by a blast two miles from the entrance to one of Ohio's largest coal pits.

M. Speicher, Mine Personnel Director, listed 28 missing, including his brother, Pete, and said "four more names may be added" to the total.

"It's anybody's guess when we can get to them," said F. R. Sinclair, Superintendent of the Ohio and Pennsylvania Company's Nelms Mine northeast of here in a remote and hilly bituminous field.

As the hours passed, officials indicated they held little hope of finding the men alive in the bitter cold 468 feet underground.

Others of the 130 at work at the time of the explosion in Section "North 12" escaped, officials said. The Shaft Mine employs about 500.

Slides Hinder Workers

Repeated slate falls and excessive gas slowed rescue operations. Five workers, wearing oxygen masks, were carried from the mine unconscious shortly after midnight, but were revived and able to walk to their homes.

The superintendent emphasized there was no evidence of fire following the terrific detonation, tentatively attributed by miners to ignited gas. He asserted the workings had been thoroughly rock dusted to prevent explosions, and that only "permissible" explosives and machinery were used.

Ambulances from nearby towns waiting at the mine's two entrances were outlined in an eerie glow from a huge burning slag heap nearby. States highway patrolmen kept anxious relatives of miners and spectators from the mine property.

The mine disaster was Ohio's second this year. Seventy-two men were killed in the March 16 explosion at the nearby Willow Grove Mine.

civil war. Fragmentary reports of violence trickled over the Bulgarian and Yugoslav borders and it was feared that today—occasion of the public funeral of the "Iron Guard martyrs" who were shot and killed two years ago as they sought to escape from prison—might be the day of the outbreak.

The situation had all the appearances of a German set-up to take over the country on the grounds the Government "no longer is able to maintain order," the usual Nazi excuse for conquest. The nature of the violence, directed not only against those who were formerly enemies of the Iron Guard, but largely against Jews, led to suspicion it might be the work of those German "tourists" who poured so heavily into Rumania in advance of the soldiers Hitler sent there this month.

Reason for Hitler's possible wish to occupy Rumania is obvious. Rumania is Europe's richest oil country and the Nazi war machine needs the fluid to keep going. Result of his occupation, if it occurs, will be to make Rumania's oil fields targets for British bombers which now, thanks to Mussolini's blunder, can reach them from bases in northern Greece.

Should Hitler take over Rumania the result might well prove highly disadvantageous to him.

U.S. Shelves Cash Aid For Britain

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—(CP).—The question of the United States giving financial assistance to Great Britain, in line with its announced policy of "all aid short of war," appeared today to have been quietly shelved by the tacit consent of all concerned until the new Congress convenes in January.

The whole problem of Britain's needs — "planes, munitions, ships and perhaps finance," as put before the country by the Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador, on his return from London, November 23—is under study by Washington. But officials there appear disinclined to consider finances an urgent enough problem to require action before a new Congress takes over.

A similar view is held by the Press which this week discusses the question with seeming reluctance. Britain still is a long way from scraping the bottom of the bartel in her dollar resources and this knowledge fortifies a sympathetic Press in adopting a "wait-and-see" attitude.

In August, 1939, the Federal Reserve Board estimated Britain's resources in the United States at $4,000,000,000 — $2,000,000,000 in gold, $600,000,000 of dollar balances, more than $700,000,000 of securities and $900,000,000 in other investments. It is estimated that since the outbreak of war she has spent or contracted to pay more than $4,000,000,000 for aircraft, munitions, ships and other supplies.

Lively controversy is anticipated in Congress when the subject is taken up for definite consideration. Loans to nations in default on war debts are prohibited by the Johnson Act and Britain owes some $3,500,000,000 as a result of the first great war. Loans to belligerent nations also are forbidden by the Neutrality Act.

Few papers this week say credits should not be extended; few take a positive position on the other side of the question.

The influential New York Herald Tribune urges a free gift of money, saying: "The United States has a vital interest in British survival. That means not only ships and planes, not only loans, but subsidies. In the financial as in every other field it means the broad view and the boldest action. Little means will not serve great ends; and the ends of the 'all aid' policy are very great indeed."

Keeping the War From U. S.

Also outspoken is the Cleveland Plain Dealer. "Fetish-bound Johnson Acts must not be permitted to stand in the way," it said. "What the courageous people of Britain are doing is keeping the war away from us. We who admire their stamina from a safe distance must shoulder our part of the responsibility."

The Washington Star, dismissing as a "patent absurdity" any suggestion that the United States should permit its material aid to the recipient who is no longer able to pay "cash on th barrel head," emphasizes its views with a front-page cartoon depicting John Bull, his pockets empty appealing to Uncle Sam, standing before the storage vault of the "worlds greatest credit facilities." The caption is: "There's Only One Answer—Yes."

Other representative comment:

New York News—"How about a real estate deal for U.S. possession of these islands (the West Indies) in return for all possible U.S. help short of war? And we mean possessions, not merely leases."

Cincinnati Times-Star — "Even worse is the proposal that in return for money advanced we take British territory in this hemisphere.... If we assist them in financial matters, we ought to do it in a manner that we will not be ashamed of."

Richmond Times-Despatch— "If we are going to give cash to Britain, we should have a clear understanding of what she is going to give to us in the way of trade and co-operation when the war is over."

Howie McPhee

He graduated from university at British Columbia in 1936 but continued studies there until last summer.

Born in Sydney, N.S., McPhee came to Vancouver with his parents when less than a year old and adopted this city as his home.

He was best known as a sprinter and was considered one of the fleetest ever to represent Canada in international sport. Some believed him the equal of the great Percy Williams.

He excelled in the 100 yards and 110 metres and once equalled the world record for the latter distance during a sport meeting in Vancouver.

McPhee was the holder of two Canadian records and was one of the few world athletes who ran the 100 in 9 3-5 seconds.

While playing English rugby against Stanford in California he was described by a California sports writer "as the fastest rugby player in the world."

from all sections of the country are given intensive three months' courses in law-enforcement.

Meanwhile, indications increased in the aftermath of a White House conference, that the campaign against subversive activities would be carried forward hereafter in closer collaboration between the Dies committee and such law-enforcing agencies as the F.B.I.

Representative Martin Dies (Dem., Texas), who frequently has voiced criticism of the F.B.I.'s work, spent an hour talking with President Roosevelt yesterday.

"I certainly have no intention," Dies said today, "of interfering in any way with the work of the F.B.I. If a conflict arises between us and the F.B.I. in watching a possible law violator, we will leave the case to them."

Plenty Of Food Available For U.K. Tables

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The British food situation is satisfactory in view of the circumstances.

A cross-section survey indicated last night that the people are content for the most part, although they grumble a bit about rations the same as they do about taxes.

Most Britons questioned in the informal survey think they can tighten their belts a bit without feeling undue pain.

On the other hand Lord Woolton, Food Minister, has notified the people that they must give up fresh fruits, which normally are imported and refrigerated. That shows the matter of feeding Britain's millions is growing in seriousness.

It seems that the people feel the ration limitations in different ways, depending on their tastes. The heavy tea drinkers miss their tea. The sweet-toothed crave more sugar.

There is little difference in a hotel meal now and in peacetime, except that the meat portion is smaller and often not choice, while the dinner is limited to one pat of butter and one lump of sugar.

Cheese Grows Scarce.

One restaurant used to have a big bank of cheeses, but now all the foreign cheeses have disappeared and the domestic are scarce.

Strangely enough, the restaurants offer a seemingly normal list of French, German and Italian wines.

A shop picked at random had stocks of many imported wines and spirits, but they were running low and the proprietor was selling only one bottle to a customer in certain lines. But prices were normal, except for new taxes.

I have eaten three meals in English homes recently. One served rationed leg of lamb, another partly rationed steak and the third unrationed chicken.

When I protested at a liberal portion, I was told that the household made out all right—"we get one thing if not another."

Fowl, game, fish and sausages still are unrationed.

The price of many foods is controlled. For example, because of a shortage, onions skyrocketed from two-pence a pound to a shilling. Then the price was pegged at four-pence halfpenny. But no onions are available in London.

Newspapers report that onions are plentiful in some parts of the country, but the fixed price gives holders no incentive to ship them to London, where they would get the same price after paying handling costs.

Blaze Smothers Three Children

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Nov. 30 (CP)—Coroner T. F. Robertson said today there will be no inquest into the deaths last night of three small children, sons of Earl Cooper, of suffocation when fire destroyed their home.

The children—David, four; Wilson, three, and Roy, two—were confined to their beds with colds when the fire broke out. Cooper jumped from a second-storey window and was unable to get back into the home to save his children.

It is believed the blaze started when the kitchen stove became overheated and ignited the ceiling and partitions of the frame structure.

Firemen recovered the bodies of the boys before flames destroyed the home and medical officers and first-aid experts from military training centre No. 3, situated near the Cooper home, applied artificial respiration for more than an hour in an effort to revive the youngsters.

The Thai quarters here claimed that the bombings were not connected with Thailand's demands for territory from French Indo-China.

De Gaulle Force Now 35,000 And 20 Warships

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(CP Cable.)—Thirty-five thousand troops, twenty warships in service, 1,000 airmen and sixty merchant ships make up the growing forces of Free France, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of Free Frenchmen, disclosed last night in a broadcast.

He spoke "to the people of France" and defined te aims of the Free French movement as "firstly to fight; to fight to help defeat the enemy."

"And in this victory — this certain victory — we Free Frenchmen want it to be a French victory," he added. "That's why we want little by little to gather together France and the empire, even if we should free by force French people who are prevented from doing their duty by the ghastly ambiguity and subservience to rulers of betrayal.

"We have territories in full activity in Africa, French India and the Pacific, and increasing financial resources, newspapers and radio stations," he said, adding that there were "numerous technicians working on armaments."

All this, he said, was "striking evidence of the growth of the Free French movement."

"Above all," he said, "there is the conviction that we are present every minute in the minds and hearts of all French people in France."

Pair Arrested In Barn Blaze

TWEED, Nov. 30 (ENS).—Albert Moore and Francis Dwyer were arrested by Chief of Police J. Clair Hayes on Thursday morning, and charged with theft and arson, arising out of the burning of the garage and barn, property of Felix J. Courneyea, Bogart, at three o'clock yesterday morning. The pair admitted they were stealing gasoline and had been using a cigarette lighter near the tank when it suddenly took fire. The frame garage and barn were destroyed within a few minutes.

Some chickens and a quantity of farm equipment were lost in the blaze. Chief Hayes was called and he noted that some of the tracks in the snow were those of a man wearing military boots and Moore and Dwyer were questioned and both admitted the charge. They were seen in the vicinity of the fire. The accused men were taken to Belleville where they were placed in the County Jail to await their trial.

WINNIPEG WHEAT

WINNIPEG, Nov. 30 — (CP). — In a continuation of dull trading, wheat futures prices yesterday were unchanged.

Prices moved within narrow limits. Mills offered some support, but offerings were light, and the volume of trade was not heavy. There was no export business. Buenos Aires continued unchanged at the fixed minimum levels.

Cash wheat was in good demand, and some top grades were bought for movement to eastern positions and winter shortage. The lower grades held trader interest, but with restricted offerings sales were light.

Southern houses were buyers of oats, and there was some demand from crushers for flax in the coarse grains market, but rye and barley were neglected.

Premier Steps In

London, Nov. 30 (CP)

PRIME MINISTER Churchill today lent his support to the Conservative candidate in the Northampton by-election, G. Spencer Summers, who is running against W. S. Seamark, a "Christian Pacifist" who has a stop-the-war platform.

In a letter to Mr. Summers, the prime minister said that "the issues so foolishly raised by your opponent give the electors of Northampton a chance to show their earnest zeal for the cause of freedom."

Polling will be Dec. 6.

Famed Met Goes "Democratic"

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—(AP).—The Metropolitan Opera, its "golden horseshoe" gone and its "diamond horseshoe" radically changed after a near escape from bankruptcy, opens its first "democratic" season Monday night.

The "democratization" consisted of the sale of the opera building to the opera-producing organization by the old association of box-holding sponsors last spring, to keep the institution from going under the economic pressure of the times.

A simultaneous public "save the opera" subscription fund which raised $1,000,000 did the rest to put the great musical landmark back on its feet financially.

Half the fund will be applied to the $1,970,000 purchase cost — the rest being covered by a bond issue and mortgages—and the other half has been used in refurnishing the opera house, on Broadway just south of Times Square.

The famous old "golden horseshoe," the second tier of private boxes, has been ripped out and replaced by 140 regular seats.

The diamond horseshoe, the first tier of boxes, remains, but it's a different diamond horseshoe. The name of J. P. Morgan and many another notable box-holding family is gone, replaced by lesser luminaries and school, college and club subscribers.

Faith Absolutely Necessary But Is Not Always Easy

By REV. E. R. JAMES

Jesus said unto His disciples: Have faith in God.—St. Mark 11:22.

A Jewish Carpenter is returning from worship in the Temple. On the way home He quietly remarks to His Jewish friends: "Have faith in God." Are you astonished at such a statement being made to men, who sincerely believed that Jehovah is the One, only Living God. They would have gladly died than denied it. Yet in these simple words He is laying down a principle which is essential in all worship of God, an unseen spiritual Being. The musician calls for the musical ear on the part of his pupil; the artist the eye or beauty. These are gifts which only some have. But faith is a quality which is the gifty of every man whether he be white, black, yellow or red. Faith is an universal, catholic quality.

But to have faith in God is not easy, especially in our terrible day. Our Lord came into this world born of the Virgin Mary through the operation of the Holy Spirit and lived the life of a man Who had faith in God. He put His whole trust and confidence in God His Father. Even His enemies recognized this. "He trusted in God, let God now deliver Him if He will have Him" is the bitter taunt they flung at Him as He hung dying on the Cross.

At the beginning of His ministry He calls a few men to be His Disciples, His learners. They have to see for themselves His deep faith in God. The marvel of such faith is that it is "catching." You know a man for years and see him facing trouble after trouble quietly, calmly. You look into his eyes and you see that he has something you have not. It is faith in God. The darkest days leave him unmoved. He drinks the bitter cup with the words: "It is the Lord, let Him do what seemeth Him good." Something of His faith passes into you as in your hour of trial you cry: "Lord, I believe, help Thou mine unbelief."

Such faith in God is not easy. Mountains of difficulties face you and through His indwelling Spirit you overcome and move mountains into the sea and they disappear. The mountains are there to test your faith.

Professor Toynbee, a famous modern historian, tells us that the savage nations which develop into high civilizations were those who had faith in themselves and overcame the difficulties which faced them. Where there are no difficulties there is no high civilization is the Professor's axiom. The savage continues a savage because he has no difficulties. What an important truth for Christian in this war.

This principle is proved in the Primitve Church. It had a simple, child-like faith in God and His Christ. The Roman Empire brought all its physical power to overcome their "high-living"—living on a high spiritual plane—slaves and common people lived lives of purity, goodness, kindness, unselfishness and patience such as the pagan world had never seen and astonished their enemies. By their "high thinking"—their minds enlightened by the indwelling Spirit—they were enabled to see and understand something of the deep things of God and to trust Him. Above all, by their 'high dying"—fearlessly, facing terrible agonies and lingering deaths—they showed the multitudes that they had something of a spiritual Power within them which enabled them to hold fast and commend their souls to the evr-living Christ. Thus the Primitve Church overcame the pagan world.

In these terrible days we are passing through a similar testing time. As Mr. Churchill tells us the days will be dark and only through blood, tears and endurance will we conquer. God in His great love for us and our chidlren will increase our Faith in Him and give us spiritual strength to endure.

Are you a plain, simple, everday man with a child-like faith in God? Lord Haldane, one of the greatest Christian philosophers, would remind you that your faith is very probably stronger and purer than that of the highly educated man, who may look down upon your ignorance and simplicity.

As you obey the Voice of the Spirit and follow the Lord's example in self-sacrificing devotion to duty and love of brethren, you will make the great discovery. You will find Him; you will hear His voice; you will feel the breath of His Spirit in your heart; and in very truth you will be able to say: "I known in Whom I have believed."

GOD IS NOT ASHAMED TO BE CALLED THEIR GOD.

The Golden Text

Jesus and the multitude of people

"No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."—Luke 9:62.

An Exacting Discipleship Given Christ's Followers

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Dec. 1 is Luke 9, the Golden Text being Luke 9:62, "No Man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the Kingdom of God.")

IN A RECENT lesson we read that Jesus chose the 12 disciples. In the present lesson He called the 12 together and gave them power and authority over all devils and to cure disease and sent them out to preach and heal.

He told them to take nothing with them except the clothes in which they were dressed, no money and no food. They were to go to houses in the towns they visited and those they converted would take care of them. If some would not welcome them, the disciples were to shake the dust of that city from their feet when they left.

By this time many people had heard of the Lord, and Herod also heard and asked who He was. Some said He was John the Baptist come to life again; others that He was Elias or some other prophet. Herod said that he had beheaded John, but he wanted to see this man about whom people were talking.

When the apostles returned from their travels, Jesus took them into a desert place belonging to the city of Bethsaida. The people followed, about 5,000 of them. When it was supper time the disciples wanted to send all of them away, for, they said, we have only five loaves of bread and two fishes—far too little to feed such a multitude. Jesus told them to divide the 5,000 into companies of 50 each. Then He took the food in His hands and blessed it, and the disciples passed it around. Not only were all the people fed, but 12 basketfuls were left.

Later, as He was alone praying. His disciples came to Him and He asked them who people said He was. They told Him what had been said, and Jesus said: "But whom say ye that I am?" And Peter answered, "The Christ of God."

Tell No Man

Jesus told them to tell no man this, and He tried to tell them of his coming suffering and crucifixion, but they never seem to have taken His words seriously. Possibly they did not want to think of such things and so refused to believe.

About eight days after this episode, Jesus took Peter, James and John and went up into a mountain to pray. The disciples were weary and slept, but waking, they saw Jesus' face transfigured with glory. His clothes, too, shone white and glistening, and two men were with Him whom the disciples saw were Moses and Elijah.

As the two prophets left, Peter said, "Master it is good for us to be here," and suggested that they build three tabernacles there, one for Jesus and one each for the prophets. A cloud came over them, frightening the disciples, and from the cloud a voice came to them, saying: "This is My beloved Son; hear Him."

Next day, when they were come down from the hills, a man came to them crying that his only child was possessed with an evil spirit which made him foam at the mouth, and which threw him down and hurt him. The disciples had tried to cure him, said the man, but had failed. Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and he left the child healed, and gave him to his father.

Soon after this the disciples were found by Jesus disputing among themselves which should be greatest. Jesus must have been hurt at finding that such a trivial matter was cause for dispute among them when they were sent forth to save mankind. To rebuke them he took a child and set him in the midst of them, saying: "Whosoever shall receiveth Me: for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great."

To show how broadminded Jesus was, John told Him that they had seen a man casting out devils in the name of Jesus, and asked if they should stop him. Jesus said, "Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us."

The Inhospitable Samaritans

Starting for Jerusalem, Jesus and the disciples came to a Samaritan village. The people there were not hospitable, and the disciples were angry and asked Jesus if they should call down fire from heaven to destroy the town. Jesus rebuked them, saying: "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of Man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." And they went on to another village.

A certain man said to the Lord: "Lord, I will follow three whithersoever Thou goest." But Jesus answered: "Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head."

To another man Jesus said, "Follow Me." The man said he must first bury his father. Jesus said: "Let the dead bury their dead; but go thou and preach the kingdom of God." To another who said, "Lord, I will follow Three; but let me first go and bid them farewell which are at home at my house." He said, "No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." He meant that preaching of the gospel is the most important thing of all, and will not wait for anything. He who is called to that duty, must give up everything for it.

Bible Society Has Placed 114,000 "Service Editions"

Reporting a distribution of more than 114,000 copies of its "Services Edition" of the New Testament the Bible Society brings to a close the first year of its war service in the present world conflict. A special edition bound in distinctive colors for each of the three services—dark blue for the navy, khaki for the army, and light blue for the air force—contains on its fly leaf the following message from His Majesty the King—"To all serving in my forces by sea, or land, or air, and indeed, to all my people engaged in the defence of the Realm, I commend the reading of this Book. For centuries the Bible has been a wholesome and strengthening influence in our national life, and it behooves us in these momentous days to turn with renewed faith to this Divine source of comfort and inspiration." The Testaments are provided for all on active service through the chaplains services, and are available for chaplains without cost. The Bible Society points out that in addition to this it supplies Scriptures for distribution through military hospitals and Red Cross units, and that ever since 1805 it has been the policy of the Bible Society to provide the Scriptures for prisoners of war in the required languages. Scriptures in German and Italian have been placed at the disposal of the Director of Interment Operations for distribution among enemy aliens and prisoners of war interned in Canada.

During the years 1914-1919 the Bible Society, through its war services distributed in Canada nearly half a million copies of Scripture in eighteen languages. The total distribution throughout the world through these war channels during the same period reached the amazing figure of ten million copies in eighty languages.

When this war service was begun just a year ago the Society in Canada opened its War Emergency Fund and appealed to its constituency for help with this additional burden. A generous response has enabled the Society to carry on its work without interruption. In issuing these figures covering its first year of war service, the Society asks again for contributions to its War Service Fund in order that it may avail itself of these priceless opportunities of Christian service.

"We believe that the importance of such work as this will be readily apparent, and its continuance a challenge to our Christian Stewardship," says the Bible Society in a statement issued by S. E. Anglin, President of the Upper Canada Bible Society. "It is designed to provide comfort and spiritual strength to all who face the anxieties of these troublous times, and to spread abroad those great principles upon which alone a Christian civilization can be built."

New Order In Europe On Outside Looks Good

A great deal is heard these days of a new order in Europe. One nation after another has joined in this new order. It looks so innocent, and noble an effort, that doubtless some of the people in the countries concerned are deceived by its specious appeal.

But when we begin to analyse this new order it is not so innocent as it looks. The order prevails wherever Germany's soldiers are in occupation, it has no existence anywhere else. It is not an order into which people enter of their own free will. Every nation that has entered into it has been compelled to enter, and is kept in it by an iron hand, without even a velvet glove.

There was another leader of men who spoke much of a new order. He termed it a kingdom, and made it the watchword of his teaching. His order is of a different kind, it is an order of free men and women who have been attracted to it, as steel is attracted by a magnet. It does not degrade those who are in it, it uplifts and purifies their lives.

One of the most significant contrasts of the hour, indeed of all time is the contrast and clash of these two orders. It is not a clash of yesterday or today, it is a clash that is eternal. It will never end until the day when Christ's Kingdom is supreme. This contrast will be the sermon theme in St. Andrew's Church on next Sunday night.

Convention Talks Reviewed

MARMORA, Nov 30—(ENS). —The monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in the Separate school on Tuesday evening with the president, Miss A. V. Foley in the chair and a good attendance of members on hand. The president gave a synopsis of the speeches delivered at the Diocesan convention at Brockville in October. Miss Mary Hughes gave an interesting reading, entitled 'Top of the Morning,' which was followed by a reading by Mrs. S. McWilliams, entitled 'If.' Miss Florence Auger then sponsored a contest on Shakespeare in which all members participated. The result was a tie between Miss A. V. Foley, Mrs. John Doyle and Mrs. Charles Cook, Miss Foley eventually winning the prize.

Rev. H. J. Farrell then addressed the meeting briefly, thanking the members for their co-operation during the recent bazaar. Euchre was enjoyed for an hour, the prize going to Mrs. M. O'Connor. Mrs. V. Lynch held the locky ticket in the draw for the door prize. After a delicious lunch, served by the ladies in charge, the gathering dispersed.

Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Granville, of Nobel, Ont., spent Monday in the village.

St. Paul's Laymen's Association held an executive meeting at the home of H. R. Pearce on Wednesday evening.

An Exacting Discipleship — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Luke 9.

Jesus took five loaves and two fishes, and looking up to heaven, He blessed them, and brake and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude; after all did eat there were twelve baskets full.

Taking Peter, John and James, Jesus went up into the mountain to pray, and as He prayed, His face was altered and His raiment became white and glistening, and the prophets Moses and Elias were with Him.

A man brought his only son to Jesus to be healed of an evil spirit, and as they talked the spirit threw the child on the ground and bruised him, but Jesus cast the demon out and gave the child back to his father.

A man told the Lord that he would follow Him but Jesus answered: "Foxes have holes and birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head."

Has Double Value

A good portion of the Italian Mediterranean fleet was on its way from Taranto to some more favorable and better protected hiding place. The fleet had not showed out into deep water for the purpose of fighting, and the time of day, or week, or month selected for the voyage appears to have been lamentably unfortunate.

Mussolini has stated many times his intention was to sweep the British fleet out of the Mediterranean, but he delays in putting his threat into execution. On the day in question when his ships put out to sea the British fleet had also done precisely the same thing, and the British skippers decided to draw near, possibly out of curiosity as it is seldom they have seen an Italian war vessel out in the ocean.

The Italian commander ran true to form—and that statement stands. He adopted the smoke screen tactics, and they are effective. Dense clouds of smoke can be thrown by fast-moving vessels and in that way visibility is reduced to the zero mark. The British gunners fired at where they thought the Italian vessels ought to be, and reports indicate that their sense of direction was uncommonly accurate.

There was something in this engagement about which experts who differ on the relative power of naval vessels and aircraft can well argue. Shells from the British warships were effective, but it is related that aircraft from the carrier Royal Ark (which Germany has reported as having been sunk two or three times) inflicted the major amount of damage on the Italian vessels. While the smoke screen prevented the gunners from firing with accuracy the aircraft was able to note from their position exactly where the enemy vessels were located, and they were thus able to attack effectively, and that is exactly what they did so that a battleship, three cruisers and two destroyers were damaged.

Every action of that nature which takes place in the Mediterranean serves a double purpose. It inflicts damage on the Italian fleet, which is the one waterborne enemy with which Britain has to reckon, and of equal importance is the fact that it increases the prestige of the British navy in a section of the world where it is apt to be most effective at the moment. It creates confidence in the minds of the people of many small nations, and it stiffens their will and desire to resist the encroachments of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Why Close The Doors?

Stratford has had one of those incidents which cause people to sharpen up their pencils and start writing letters to the newspaper. The Board of Education made what is spoken of as a salary grant of $50 per month to the Inspector of Schools, and that would be in addition to his regular salary. It was made retroactive to the first of the year, and the reason given was "for services rendered."

The Beacon-Herald of Stratford explains that meetings of committees are not open to the press, and the paper secured the information "by accident," and of course made use of it. Then the tongues wagged and the letters came.

The Stratford paper suggests the whole thing has been unfair to the Inspector, who is a gentleman of repute and high standing, and also unfair to the general public whose money is being spent. All because members of the Board decided to do business in private, forgetting that they had been elected by the public.

Committee meetings of the Board of Education in Peterborough are open to the press, and if such an incident had occurred here the people would have known at once what it was all about. If the arrangement was justified they would have known that too. The matter of having meetings open to reporters is one which is entirely in the hands of the Board of Education. In the case at Stratford the presence of a reporter at the committee meeting would have headed off a good deal of letter writing and saved much embarrassment from being tossed in the path of the inspector.

It's Different Now

Two hundred employees of the Kingston Shipbuilding Co. went out on strike, and that is illegal under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act. Labor Minister McLarty has so informed the strikers, and has further stated that no conciliation effort can be started before the men return to work.

Reports indicate that an increase of wages is the point at issue, and application for a board to hear their case was made by the men in August, but nothing was ever done about it. One union official said "The men just blew up," and then walked out.

The best possible thing they could have done after that would have been to walk back again because in the eyes of the law they have done the wrong thing.

These are not normal times when men can strike and fight it out with an employer, in which case the damage done is confined pretty much to the strikers and the employer.

One cannot often hear that plea from England that "the front line of defence runs right through the workshop" without knowing there is a demand and an insistence and positive and perilous need for production, the like of which the world has not known before.

When a strike comes today it's a national affair. If a lockout took place it would be in the same class.

It is striking at the production of material which the nation and empire need in the fight for continued existence.

The Government has power to see that men are not being exploited, and it should never hesitate to make use of that power. We cannot see where a man engaged on war work should have any more right to lay down his tools than a man in the army should have to say he desires to turn in his uniform. In their own fields they are both engaged in the war.

Served For 25 Years

Ald. H. C. Nickle is retiring from civic life at the end of the year after serving Kingston in various capacities for a full quarter of a century. "I have given my best and I have never received one cent of pay in return," was the way the Alderman summed up his experience.

Ald. Nickle believed Kingston had too large a council, consisting as it does of 22 members. Committees are too large and there are too many men to consult. Twenty-two aldermen seems to be too great in numerical strength; there would be an alderman popping up at almost every turn in the community. We get along very well with ten in Peterborough.

Ald. Nickle seems to have served in so many places as alderman, mayor, in charge of patriotic efforts and relief funds, and he did it for 25 years. And it is fortunate that communities have men prepared to attend to such business. Whether any of those who never participate ever take time out to tell such people that they are actually making a contribution to the city, and that their services are appreciated is something on which no statistics are available. Most unusual to find a citizen who can say he gave his time and talent to the community for 25 years and received no payment at any time.

Donald Writes The News

What is a newspaper supposed to do? Why, print the news of course. Possibly the Bowmanville Statesman had something like that in mind when it published "Tryone School News" and added a line saying it was written by Donald Dudley. He starts off by saying: "Here we are again with some events from the Tryone school." He is starting early using the editorial "we," the purpose of which is to cause readers to believe there are many people expressing the view. That increases the margin of safety.

Then Donald records: "Thursday our teacher took ill but we went on with our work for a couple of hours until Mrs. Robb came for our music lesson." And that is news indeed, indicative of a high morale in the school, and admittedly quite different from the procedure in several other schools of which we have now but faint recollection.

We read next that "We are having a hard time to get any work done on our Christmas concert because many pupils are still out with the mumps." So there in brief review passes the experience of Tryone school. The teacher sick, the pupils following a process of self-education . . . the arrival of the instructor in music . . . the Christmas entertainment and its struggle for existence against the inroad of mumps. All that would pass as news in any good community.

As It Was On The Tenth

R. J. Scott is president of the United Farmers' Co-operative Co., and that being the case it is necessary for him to give an address when the annual meeting is held. Mr. Scott advised the young farmers to go out of business because he could see no future for them on the farms. His way of stating the case was: "For most young men the farm is now the least desired occupation; it is little better than the internment camp."

Reading through the report of the general manager on the year's business we find it was good. There had been 10,000 subscribers added to rural Hydro lines and that was helping along the sale of appliances. It came as somewhat of a surprise after reading Mr. Scott's advice to find that the "best sellers in major appliances were radios."

There is nothing particularly new in what Mr. Scott had to say about farming being no good. They used to talk much the same on the Tenth Concession particularly around this time of year when neighbors gathered about the kitchen range, or attended a meeting at the school house to see about getting trustees for the year. It is hardly possible to recall hearing any one saying he was getting along well.

Grandfather was of the same sort and at times he was inclined to wear his trousers so long that they had passed the stage where they could be whacked up and made into garments for the lesser generation of men.

The taxes on Lot Four used to come due on the 14th day of December, and it was always an event. For a long time in advance of that date grandfather talked about taxes. If the hired man suggested a weak whiffletree, then grandfather was apt to lead him to the work-bench in the drive shed and point to a stout piece of wood.. If the folk in the house had ideas for home improvement grandfather would say his piece about the taxes. They were humping right along headed in his direction, and the safety and security of the household, the farm itself, the animals and even of the hired man all depended on his being able to hand over the required amount when zero hour arrived. It was a great one-man battle in which grandfather alone was engaged, and the outcome always seemed to be in doubt. But actually never was.

When the drover used to come along and after a good deal of argument took away a couple of head grandfather always said he was being robbed. His cattle were a little better than anything McGregor (next farm) had to offer, and yet he could get no more for them. McGregor in turn would say much the same when he had opportunity for free discussion. The drover was a rogue but they always seemed to do business with him.

Perhaps this Mr. Scott was brought up in such an atmosphere. The best things in life were always elsewhere, and a good many times since we have concluded that the best place to live would be back on Lot Four, Concession Ten.

NOTE AND COMMENT

We learn that the bees of Ontario produced 10,000,000 pounds of honey during the year. Remarkable considering there is no government department urging them to greater efforts.

General superintendent of the Sarnia Hospital has been asked to resign, and no reason is given. There must be reasons, and experience proves it is better to state them plainly at the outset rather than invite rumor to come in and attend to it.

Greek soldiers invading Albania have found large packages of cards, on which is printed in Greek: "Nothing can stop the Italian army." They were intended for circulation in Greece. When one recalls how rapidly the Italians retreated it is possible to appreciate how true was the message on those cards.

CONVINCED

¶ The scoffers if they had their way, would take my quaint beliefs away, they'd dote on all the flaws; they'd try to prove by facts and stuff, that they were really sure enough, there is no Santa Claus.

¶ They jump upon the floor and shout, and name me for a dreaming lout, in holding to my view; for I believe in Santa Claus, in spite of all their rules and laws, I trust the things he'll do.

¶ They ask me if I've seen the man, or if I have a chart or plan, where I can lay my hand; they want to know just how he drives, and how it is that he contrives, to cover all the land.

¶ They laugh about the chimney trick, and tales like that just make them sick, they say it can't be done; take any chimney that you please, and see how far therein you'll squeeze, just try it out on one.

¶ There's lot of things that I can't do, but that don't prove that they're not true, I find that every day; I couldn't cause the sun to rise, and paint with joy the morning skies, and sink at close of day.

¶ So I believe in Santa Claus, in spite of all their loud guffaws, nor will my faith give way; he drives a sled in winter air, and pops down chimneys everywhere—and by that fact I'll stay.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

THERE are few modern novelists who are more conspicuously successful than Sir Hugh Walpole. For many years his books have been, if not always best-sellers, at least good sellers, and so from the viewpoint of the publisher and the bookseller he is a successful man; his novels always have a good story, are entertainingly written, and never deal with distasteful subjects, and so from the viewpoint of the average reader he is a successful author; despite great popularity and great monetary reward he has never stooped to literary trickery, and he always does his very best, and so from the standpoint of the literary critic he is a successful literary artist. It is unusual for a man to be able to combine these three sorts of success. Hugh Walpole is a novelist whom one would hesitate to call great, but he is undoubtedly one of the most accomplished writers of our day.

C & B

Many readers will be familiar with the novels which Hugh Walpole has written about the Herries family. They present a complete history of a remarkable family, and also a close, accurate, and vivid picture of life in the English countryside during the eighteenth century. In his latest novel, "The Bright Pavilions," which is published by Doubleday . . . [illegible] gives us some Herries history during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The story is of two brothers, Nicholas and Robin Herries; Nicholas is a Protestant and faithful to Elizabeth, and Robin almost becomes a Catholic, and takes up the cause of Mary, Queen of Scots. Robin is the idealist, and it is he who seeks "the bright pavilions of God, the only resting place for the bodies and souls of blundering, weary travellers."

C & B

THIS BOOK might well serve as a model of what an historical novel should be. First of all, it does not do violence to history; as always in such books, there are minor alterations of fact, but the historical framework is valid. Second, it does not use historical characters as mere stage-dressing; Queen Elizabeth is never used as an agent to bring a pair of silly lovers together. Third, it is a story by itself, and a reader completely ignorant of English history could enjoy it thoroughly and never miss an important point. Fourth, its characters speak good English, and are neither tiresomely Elizabethan nor offensively colloquial. Fifth and last, it has action, action, action, and no dreary moralizing.

C & B

Many readers will find "The Bright Pavilions" deeply encouraging at present. It deals with a period when England was sorely pressed, and when she had to fight for existence or go under; she fought, and emerged the wonder of the world. The qualities which made England great in the reign of Elizabeth are the qualities of England today, is the underlying thought of Sir Hugh Walpole's book, and readers who read it as the radio reports the exploits of the R.A.F. will be glad to endorse it.

C & B

Miss Mazo de la Roche has written her seventh book about the Whiteoak family of Jalna which is published by Macmillans; this is our own particular Canadian family saga. "Whiteoak Heritage" fills in a few gaps which the previous books have left in our knowledge of this odd tribe. Chronologically, this book is second in the series. It tells of Renny's return from the Great War to find that he must take charge of Jalna, which his uncles have seriously mismanaged. He has trouble also with his younger brothers, and his small step-brother, the detestable Wakefield is here shown at the beginning of his career as a nuisance. As always, Old Nicholl Whiteoak and his sister, Aunt Ada, are the most vivid characters in the book.

C & B

Most of this writer likes and admires the Whiteoak novels, he will never feel that they are distinctively Canadian. This family is an English family living in Canada, which is quite a different thing from a Canadian family. So far no novelist has ever succeeded in capturing the atmosphere of modern Canada; it is too elusive and too various. It is also a fact that we are a young and a self-conscious country, and too accurate an account of our daily life might prove unacceptable. Again, what is and as description of life in Ontario is certainly not true of the Prairie Provinces or of the Maritimes, and the life of Quebec is even stranger, as Hugh's "Thirty Nines," reviewed in this column a week ago, amply shows. There can be no novel which is true of all of Canada; we need regional novelists. And yet our population is not sufficiently large to make the sale of a book profitable, even if all the nine provinces read it. There seems to be nothing for it but to go on as we are doing at present until an increase in population brings about the changes necessary to make literature about Canada, written for the Canadian market, economically possible.

C & B

Next Saturday this column will review Kenneth Roberts' new novel, "Oliver Wiswell," which has caused a great stir in the United States and seems likely to rival "Gone With the Wind" as a best-seller.

• What To Do When Lost In the Bush

Letter in Montreal Star

SIR,—The papers now say that hope is almost abandoned of finding alive three of the six airmen who bailed out a week ago near East Lake, Quebec. The reason given is that due to lack of food, coupled with cold weather and snow, they have little chance for survival. To me, and I am sure to you, this seems a very pitiable thing. There will be literally thousands of men in this country who have spent many nights in the bush alone in the most severe weather with nothing for protection but the clothes they stood in, an axe and some knowledge of woodcraft.

It seems to be becoming quite a common occurrence for aviators to be forced down or to bail out over forest country. When we consider what a tremendous proportion of Canada is forest land and when we also consider the large number of planes now being flown by young pilots in training or who have just completed their training, we must look for a continual increase in such accidents.

From accounts I have read in the press I have hardly found an instance where airmen lost in the woods appear to have built a fire, or for that matter, done any of the normal things that a man trained in woodcraft would do. Nor have I read of any instances where these aviators were provided with the necessary equipment to enable them to put up a fight for a reasonable length of time against starvation or freezing. I presume a very large number of these boys are city bred and the very nature of their business would indicate a mechanical turn of mind and much more familiarly with the workshop, machinery and mechanical devices than with the primitive business of sustaining life in the bush.

I noticed that one of the men recently rescued said that he had never been in the bush before, so he just sat down with his back against a tree and hoped for the best. Another made the remark that he only knew one direction, and that was North. Just what he meant by this it is hard to understand. Also one of them said he left the spot where his parachute had come down and was unable to get back to it. Apparently in neither case did these men build a fire, presumably because there was snow on the ground and they had no axe. The account did not say whether they had matches.

All I would suggest is—(1) that all these young men now training for the Air Force be given a short course in woodcraft, (2) that every plane making a cross-country flight, which in this country means practically every plane leaving the immediate vicinity of its training ground, be provided with a kit for each man would contain the following:—

(a) A pocket compass. (It is presumed that all these young airmen must have a fairly good general knowledge of the lay of the land and would need only a compass to allow them to travel in the direction offering the best chance of rescue.)

(b) A small Hudson Bay axe with a handle preferably of metal. (You can't do much with an axe with a broken handle.)

(c) Some type of concentrated food, enough to sustain life for, say, two or three weeks.

(d) A fish line and hooks with a suitable artificial lure. (You can't dig worms in the bush.)

(e) A very small First Aid kit.

(f) A 22-calibre pistol with a detachable, collapsible, shoulder butt and a small supply of cartridges.

(h) In summer, fly oil or fly ointment of some sort.

(i) Some kind of very small collapsible boiling dish.

This complete paraphernalia would go in a very small parcel and weigh very little. When a young man, I am sure that with this equipment I could have faced a long time in the bush at any season of the year in comparative comfort.

With the facilities I have outlined, coupled with a few hours of instruction in woodcraft as part of the twenty-five or thirty weeks of training they undergo, a great deal of the danger and suffering that these untrained kids have to go through if they had the bad luck to find themselves down in the bush would be removed.

CARL R. BROWN.

P.S.—If a German parachutist can land in enemy country complete with a machine gun, rifle, food, ammunition, etc., in fact, as a one-man army, surely our boys could be provided with the little kit I have mention without encumbering them, and be required to have it attached to their persons while in flight.

A Bit of Nonsense

Returned

"Do you happen to know," Mr. A asked the hall porter of his club, "if I left an umbrella here last night."

"Why, yes sir," said the hall porter. "And thank you very much. It is the one that Mr. B missed two weeks ago."

Colonel (to Irish servant): "This is going to be a terrible war, Pat."

Pat: "Sure, it's going to be a terrible war, sor, but it'll be better than no war at all, at all."

Almost As Bad

The master of the house, exasperated beyond endurance by the cooking, had the cook up before him.

After a long tirade upon her shortcomings, he pointed to the table.

"Look at that piece of bacon I've served to your mistress," he said. "Absolutely unsatable! And this piece I've taken myself isn't much better."

They All Did

Bride: "When you married me I thought you were daring and courageous."

Groom: "That's nothing. Name one person who didn't."

Barter

"Mister," said the ragged man, "will you give me a loaf of bread for my wife and little one?"

The stranger looked at him kindly. "I won't take advantage of your destitution. Keep your wife and children. I don't want them!"

All In One This

A choir was being organized among soldiers in an army barracks. They were put under the instructions of a sergeant and in rehearsing them for one of their songs he announced: "The tenors will sing alone until they come to the gates of hell. Then you will all come in."

PATRONAGE

Mr. NICHOLSON:

1. Did the Post Office Department notify the branches of the Canadian Legion at either Preeceville or Endeavour, Saskatchewan, of the intention to appoint a new postmaster at Hinchcliffe?

2. Did the Post Office Department write to J. Ross Barrie of Pelly, Saskatchewan, on July 19, 1940, asking him to recommend a suitable person for the post of postmaster at Hinchcliffe, Saskatchewan? If so, for what reason?

3. Is it customary for the Post Office Department to write to defeated government candidates in connection with recommending suitable postmasters?

Mr. MULOCK:

1. No. But in accordance with the usual practice a notice was sent to the provincial command.

2. Yes. To obtain a nomination.

3. Yes. Where revenue of the office is under $3,000.

A MAGIC TRICK

THE least optimistic of English economists, Mr. Maynard Keynes, admitted recently that the admirable management of the British Government is on the way to accomplish a magical trick of which he himself was in doubt. While England is repulsing the assaults of the German air power and while she is carrying the war into Germany, she continues to import, to produce, to sell and to deliver her merchandise to all her clients in the Empire or foreign countries. She has spent in one year for her defence and counter-offensive more than she spent from 1914 to 1918. (This time she has not had to lend billions to her Allies.) And she is entering the second year of the conflict with a program that will be still more costly. But John Bull knows where to get the funds for this magnificent effort.—Le Soliel, Quebec.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And it came to pass about an eight days after these sayings, he took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray. And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistening. And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias . . . . But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias; not knowing what he said. While he thus spake, there came a cloud, and overshadowed them: and they feared as they entered into the cloud.

And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him.—Luke ix.

WEE WULLIE O.K.

A LETTER from Scotland says that a bomb fell on a home. The family was rescued, but one little boy sobbed piteously.

He had one of these birds that you can teach to talk and it had been left behind.

To pacify him the air warden said he would go into the house and see if he could find it.

Among the rubble and the debris the warden found the crushed cage and lying inside it was a limp dusty bundle of feathers.

He stirred the feathers—and was amaze to hear them say:

"I'm wee Wullie Watson."

Even the birds in Britain can take it.

BOMBS AND ROME

BRITAIN, it will be noted, has given an undertaking not to molest the Vatican, but this undertaking has never covered the city of Rome. It has been shown conclusively enough that Fascism, as exemplified in Italy and in areas outside of Italy where Fascist troops are operating is synonymous with cowardice. The mere threat of bombardment may be sufficient to affect the knees of Mussolini, already highly flexible.—Montreal Gazette.

LOVE BY CABLE

In the midst of the bombardment of London—Beaverbrook cabled his reply to Dixie: "Your message has inspired me and will encourage the air force to retain your affection." — New York Post.

Girl 6, Beaten Up, Did Milking, More Demanded

MIDLAND, Nov. 30 — A farmer who was angered because the 6-year-old daughter of his housekeeper did not do all the housework in addition to milking cows was sentenced to three months' imprisonment yesterday on a charge of wounding.

The accused, Sam Losko of Tay township, threw a curtain rod at 6-yetr-old Mildred Grkovich. The rod pierced her skull and she was rushed to the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, where she remained five weeks. The child attended court with her mother.

"This man is apparently subnormal and subject to fits of temper," said Magistrate C. F. Bick. "We cannot countenance such wild outbursts."

Losko, who speaks no English, is a Ukrainian, 58 years old, and has lived on his present farm many years. He pleaded guilty to the charge and his attorney, Oliver Smith, told the court the man was very remorseful over the event and had paid all medical and hospital expenses.

The three months' sentence dates from the time of Losko's arrest and he has already served six weeks in jail.

"He always had a spite against Mildred," said Mrs. Anna Grkovich, in giving evidence. "He kept complaining that she did not do enough work. He wanted her to do all the housework, in addition to milking, so I could be free to work in the fields."

"A 6-year-old girl milking?" exclaimed Magistrate Bick.

"Why, yes, she did all the milking," replied the mother. "Her younger sister, now 5, also milks cows."

The court expressed amazement at a child of such tender years milking cows. Through an interpreter the accused was told of the seriousness of his actions and what might have been the outcome.

Attorney-General Conant, when advised last night of the case, said there would be an investigation.

"We will certainly investigate it," said Mr. Conant, "and if the circumstances justify it we will appeal the sentence."

CAMPBELLFORD

Auction Is Planned For Bombing Fund

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 30. — (ENS)—At least one new way of raising funds for war sufferers is to be tried out here in the near future, and it remained for the enterprising manager of the local theatre, A. Rappaport, to hit on the plan by which he expects to raise money for the Lord Mayor of London's fund. The plan is to hold an auction sale between shows in the theatre on the two evenings, December 5 and 6. A large amount of useful merchandise donated by local merchants and even gifts from housewives who might care to offer a jar of fruit, a hand-knitted sweater or even sox will be sold. Only difference is that the articles themselves will not be sent to the sufferers from bombing raids—the money they bring will go instead, and the highest bidder gets the article.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Out of a job, and asked to leave her boarding house because of the wide publicity she received as the result of an attempted prison break, Lona Ackerman is almost desperate because she cannot locate Jim Claridge, the only friend she has left. Just before Lona sped to the penitentiary to see her dying father, serving a life term for murder, she and Jim had fallen in love. At the warden's house during her visit to the prison, two escaping convicts force her into the warden's car and make a safe getaway until Lona grabs the steering wheel and the car crashes. Only slightly hurt, she finds her father has died in the meantime. After taking his body home, she returns to the city. Finally Jim calls her and asks her to marry him. To escape further publicity, they decide to elope. Lona is recognized when they go for the marriage license and Jim slugs a photographer when he attempts to take their picture. They are married at a parsonage in a small town. Driving on, they stop overnight at a tourist home in another quiet town along the highway.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

A TAP AT the door of their room in the tourists home awakened Jim and Lona the morning after their wedding night. Sitting up in bed Lona saw the sun streaming through the windows that had been eerie with moonlight in last night's darkness

"Yes?" she called out, laughing at Jim's tousled head and sleepy eyes.

"The morning paper.... thought you'd like to see it," came in the friendly voice of the woman of the house.

"Thank you," Lona murmured, and turned to the clock. Imagine waking people up to give them the morning paper. Then her eyes widened as she saw the time. Ten o'clock! She laughed again, and punched Jim to make him wake.

"Sleepyhead!" she taunted. "Why didn't you tell me it was ten o'clock? Come on, we've got to get back to town and go house hunting."

Slipping out of bed she caught up her negligee and went barefoot to the door, tossing back her brown curls like a child. The paper was propped against the door, and she brought it inside expectantly. Perhaps in the "For Rent" ads she might find her future address.

Sitting on the bed where Jim still stretched and yawned, she opened the folded sheet, and then a little surprised exclamation forced itself through her lips. Sprawled across the front page was a picture of herself and Jim!

"Why, how on earth—" she began, and then she saw it had been taken in the same court house corridor where Jim had punched the reporter yesterday and smashed his camera. Jim was frowning in the picture, and she looked frightened. She recalled the click she had heard as the second reporter opened the door for them. He, too, must have had a camera, a hidden one.

"Prison Escape Girl Weds," the picture was captioned.

"Lona Ackerman, the girl who last week buried her convict father after being a principal in the sensational break and kidnaping at the state penitentiary, applied for a marriage license at the license bureau late yesterday. The above picture of the couple was snapped just after the groom-to-be, who gave his name as James Claridge, twenty-nine, had knocked down Reporter Ellis Butler of The Times, and smashed his camera, when Butler attempted to snap a similar picture. Claridge is a structural iron worker on the new Terminal building. Wedding plans of the couple were kept secret.

It was a deliberately irritating bit of publicity. As if the reporter writing it had tried to get even for Jim's outburst by including as many notorious details as possible. But, somehow, in her new status as Jim's wife, Lona failed to get more than slightly angry over it. Perhaps, she thought, as she read the familiar phrases that a week ago would have caused her to flinch in shame, she was getting used to it. Or was it that, now she had Jim to protect her, things didn't seem so terrible as when she had been alone?

"Look, Jim!" she said, and held out the page to him. "They got us after all."

"Got us? What do you mean?"

He stopped short at sight of the picture staring out at him, and his face went a sickly white. His fists were clenched as he took it in, and instant a look that Lona knew instinctively as fear. Bewildered, she watched him in silence.

"That woman downstairs! Do you think she's seen this?" he demanded, almost roughly, after a moment's silence.

"I—I don't know. I—suppose so—"

"They mustn't recognize us. We'd better get packed and get out of here." He was almost furtive.

"But Jim, after all, it's just a picture. Why should we be so—"

"Just a picture!" He whirled on her, his fists clenched into hard white knots. "You don't know what you're saying, girl."

Financier Suicides

Leaving a note for his wife, which said in part, "I am tired of fighting. I can't go on," Jesse L. Livermore, 62, former "Boy Wonder" of Wall Street, who made $10,000,000 out of $10 only to go bankrupt four time, shot and killed himself in an ante room of a New York hotel.

London Writer Differs On Censor Case

LONDON, Nov. 30—(AP) — The Times diplomatic correspondent yesterday took issue with a dispatch by Drew Middleton, Associated Press staff writer, claiming that his strictures against British censorship were unfair and his description of Britain "passing through the darkest hours of the war" since Dunkirk was inaccurate.

Such a picture, the Times correspondent said, must "cause surprise on this side of the Atlantic." He said British authorities must give correspondents "all the help needed for a fair and balanced picture."

He added that "it is no accident that within the past few days American correspondents should in the same dispatch have criticized British censorship and then have gone straight on to paint the British position in unusually and unduly gloomy colors."

(In a dispatch Tuesday Middleton wrote that "the way the censors work is reminiscent of the conduct of French censorships before the fall of France." He said also "the Germans have killed thousands of civilian men, women and children without really damaging morale.")

The Times said Middleton's comparison of British to French censorship was "less than fair," and argued that the directness and openness of British criticism and reporting "would not have been allowed in France."

Not All Roses

"If American correspondents are to be treated supremely well here," the writer said, "it does not mean they will all send declarations home that 'everything in the garden is lovely.' British interests wouldn't benefit if they did paint such pictures... Less than the truth, or more than it, can only help the enemy who is ready to exploit any point for the sake of propaganda.

The Times correspondent said that United States correspondents were given unrivalled press facilities and added that "doors have been opened to them where British journalists have knocked in vain."

Commenting on the conclusion that Britain is passing through dark days, the article said "Greek courage, and talent in tactics, Italian unpreparedness, and British courage, both at Taranto and in the air on other fields, have brought brighter prospects than would have seemed possible a few weeks ago."

Cease Farming Is Farm Head's Advice To Youth

TORONTO, Nov. 30—R. J. Scott, president of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company, Ltd., yesterday advised Canadian farm youth to "get out of agriculture," for present-day policies "lead to agricultural bankruptcy and then peasantry."

In the presidential address before the shareholders' meeting of the company, Mr. Scott painted a grim picture of farm conditions and predicted conditions becoming steadily worse "if present policies" are continued.

"Apparently our national setup permits the underwriting of munition plants, the bonusing of industry, and the assuring of profits to it, while with agriculture there will be more farm land sales next year, and at lower prices, than there were last year," he said. "The road seems quite clearly defined—agricultural bankruptcy and then peasantry.

"For most young men the farm is now the least desired occupation—it is little better than the internment camp. Economic barriers surround his operations, while barbed wire surrounds the internment camps. My advice to farm boys is to get out of agriculture now, for if you are prepared to stay with it you will have to fight as you have never fought before.

"The consequences of the war have left the farmer, thus far, in a still worse position," he continued. "Farm labor shortage is growing weekly more acute. Economic conditions are driving people from the land. Canadian agricultural policies are not good enough for Canadian agriculture. Rural culture is declining. No provision is being made for the 'after-the-war crash.' "

The solution, Mr. Scott said, lies in the direction of co-operation among farmers. "The co-operative future has never looked brighter," he said. "During the year your company has made satisfactory progress. We are now carrying out a new program of district co-operative services, which is apparently meeting with the approval of the farm people in these districts."

Mr. Scott predicted that a unified, all-Canadian movement would shortly emerge, with offices at Ottawa. "This will permit us to have continuous contact with the Department of Agriculture, and to meet the many different problems of agriculture in wartime."

Mr. Scott is a former president of the U.F.O.

North Smith Couple Is Given Shower

NORTH SMITH, Nov. 30. — A large crowd gathered at Wesley Orange Hall on Wednesday evening to tender a miscellaneous shower for Mr. and Mrs. Adam Harris in honor of their recent marriage. The hall was prettily decorated in pink and white for the occasion. A very enjoyable program was presented, after which an address was read by Mrs. Rufus Bullock and a heavily-laden basket brought in by Miss Joyce Pearson and Mrs. Robert Armstrong.

After the unwrapping of the gifts Mr. and Mrs. Harris made gracious replies and extended an invitation to all to visit them at their new home in Lindsay.

Lunch was served and a pleasant evening was brought to a close with the singing of "God Save the King."

Penalty Undecided

NEWMARKET, Ont., Nov. 30 — (CP).—Officials of the compulsory training camp here said today they have not decided on future penalties for Willem Hansler, 21, of Newmarket, who has refused to wear the King's uniform and take training.

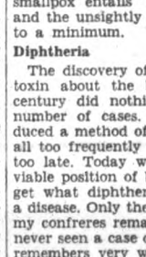
Lt.-Col. R. B. Harkness, Camp Commandant, denied a report carried by The Canadian Press last night that he would sentence Hansler to 14 days' detention if he refused to wear the uniform after serving the term of seven days' detention imposed when he first refused.

"There is no question of sentencing a man in advance," he said. "If he still refuses to wear the uniform, then he must pay the penalty. He will, of course, have to face a court martial."

HEALTH PROBLEMS

By DR. L. A. CLARKE
Peterboro M.O.H.

This morning in the office we were looking over the old register of the Isolation Hospital. In it are recorded the cases of communicable disease that had been admitted to that institution. Reading down the columns we found scarlet fever, diphtheria, smallpox, measles, whooping cough—Scores of them! What a difference during the last couple of years. There have been no cases of diphtheria, no smallpox, the odd case of scarlet fever and some whooping cough. The remark was passed that the Health Department really had to work in those days because of the amount of communicable disease. All kidding aside, health departments are busy today in keeping the register free from entries.



Dr. L. A Clarke

Smallpox

Why they had so many cases of small pox at that time was probably due to the fact that the population had neglected vaccination, which is, in almost one hundred per cent of cases, an absolute preventive against smallpox. It was just as efficacious in 1911 and 1920 as it is today so the reason the people had an epidemic of smallpox in 1920 was because they had neglected vaccination and that experience will be repeated if a sufficient percentage of the population is allowed to go unvaccinated. There is on the statutes a law requiring vaccination which is observed largely in the breach rather than in the observance because of the prejudices of some people. It is amusing however to notice how quickly these people forget their prejudices in the presence of a smallpox epidemic. As performed today, vaccination against smallpox entails little discomfort and the unsightly scars are reduced to a minimum.

Diphtheria

The discovery of diphtheria antitoxin about the beginning of the century did nothing to lessen the number of cases. It merely introduced a method of treatment which all too frequently was administered too late. Today we are in the enviable position of being able to forget what diphtheria looked like as a disease. Only the other day one of my confreres remarked that he had never seen a case of diphtheria. One remembers very well, however, seeing sufferers from this disease given, by hypodermic, enormous doses of antitoxin, being too such with the poison of the disease to mind the discomfort caused. This disease used to be one of the chief causes, if not the chief cause, of death among children in this province. How different is the picture today! With the discovery of toxoid in 1923 the medical profession was armed with a measure that will prevent diphtheria in 92 per cent of cases.

There has been only one case of diphtheria in this city since 1933—an enviable record!—and one which it is the object of our Health Department to carry on. How is this to be accomplished? By having all our children gives three doses of diphtheria toxoid at intervals of three weeks. The children seldom suffer any appreciable reaction to this procedure and it is advised that after four years have elapsed, one dose of toxoid be given to maintain their immunity at a high level.

Scarlet Fever

Scarlet fever still keeps too large a place in our record book. We have a preventive against this disease which unfortunately has not met with the whole hearted support granted to vaccination against smallpox and toxoiding against diphtheria, for three reasons. The first is that it requires five doses given at intervals of one week. The second is that some children do have reactions of greater or lesser severity, generally to only one of the five doses. The third reason is that as an immunizing measure it is not as complete as the former two. It does, however, give results in 85 per cent. of cases which makes it well worth advocating.

Whooping Cough

A new vaccine has been perfected for the prevention of whooping cough which, like diphtheria toxoid, is given at intervals of three weeks. The opinion of experts, at first given very cautiously, is gradually becoming enthusiastic and the latest reports are very satisfactory. The indications are that as time goes on we will advise this measure with the same confidence we now place in toxoid.

Measles

Your doctor has a measure at his disposal which will either prevent measles of greatly limit the extent of the disease, in the use of blood from convalescents or adults who have had the disease.

Whooping cough and measles, according to the latest reports from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics stand near the head of the list of causes of death among children. Why do we continue to be recording year after year cases of these illnesses which are largely preventable, in our statistics? In view of the suffering, anxiety, and danger involved it cannot be that it is because parents are indifferent as to whether or not their children acquire these illnesses. I prefer to think it is because they do not know that these measures are available. Any competent physician will be glad to discuss these measures with you.

Kiwanis Told Freedom Of Speech Is Democracy's Safety Valve

"Freedom of Speech, and all that", was the subject of a most interesting address to the Kiwanis Club by T. J. Carley, K.C. at the Empress Hotel, Friday noon.

"We are engaged in the making of history," Mr. Carley said "on a colossal scale, and the various liberties that we enjoy are worth of our consideration."

The speaker defined freedom of speech as, "freedom of discussion in problems of public interest." He said there must be restrictions imposed upon the individual, and for this reason our laws forbiding slander exist. One of man's first rights in the democratic set-up, is his reputation, and English law has ever jealously guarded that birthright. Another restriction is one that prevents a man advocating the use of force in an attempt to change existing governmental codes and manners; this could not be classified as freedom of speech if it was tolerated, it would be the abuse of speech.

The inherent rights of the British Empire are such because they have been won by sacrifice, and they are deserving of defence in the same manner.

Must Exercise Care

Parliamentarians and lawyers are allowed certain priviledges, but even they are restricted, and must exercise care in their accusations and statements. The best of all restrictions, the speaker said is a liberal amount of good common sense.

The definition of free speech is an abstract one, and one that will not be found in the British Constitution. It is, rather, laid down in many laws and enactments among which are the Magna Charta, and the Bill of Rights. It is not a thing that is arbitrary, but is rather one of the most observed of all unwritten laws.

The real freedom of speech, and freedom of thought is distinct from the code established among themselves by the Puritans. They believed in a one way freedom, freedom for themselves, and no freedom for anyone that was at difference with views held by them.

Communists, said the speaker, can be tolerated in a country during peacetime, and as long as force is not advocated by them, in such times, their existence might seem to justify itself.

We are going through times of change, the speaker said, and there will be changes during the next few years that we would be inclined to regard as impossible ones today. Here Mr. Carley mentioned Socialism as a thing possible in this country, and as one that would, perhaps, in a few years actualy enjoyed.

In wartime the restrictions are multiplied, he said, but the people in this Dominion, like those of all other nations, should be careful lest regulations be imposed that might threaten the existence of all such freedoms. It would be "tyranny of the worst sort, if a government were enabled, through regulations, to restrict free speech.

Freedom of speech serves as a safety valve, for in a democracy such as ours, a man with a grievance may make himself heard, and others will tolerate his views; in this way he satisfies himself, and all is well. On the other hand, the speaker pointed to the French revolution, and to the Russian revolution. They might have been missing among the pages of history had freedom of speech instead of opression been the rule in those respective countries. There were, in those times, two forces at work and at odds. There was the weight of the ruling class, theoppressors, the fighting strength of the opressed. The pressure upward, on the part of the people proved to be the greater. "It was a matter of souls struggling for liberty."

Preserving Liberties

The various Service Clubs on this continent, said Mr. Carley, feel, and like to think that they are playing a part in the preservation of the liberties for which others are fighting. It becomes them, as service clubs, to support the fight for free speech and tolerance in thought. Canada and the United States of America may yet be the bulwarks of liberty in a world torn by war. They may yet be the defenders of the rights they have inherited from Britain.

A new member was welcomed into the club, in the person of Bill Garner, Advertising Manager of the Examiner. Mr. Garner was introduced to the club by C. S. Browne, and welcomed by Bill English and the members present.

Ottawa To Ensure Fair Wages Paid Upon All Government Contracts

OTTAWA, Nov 30—(CP).—Steps whereby the Federal Labor Department proposes to see that fair wages are paid on government contracts have been embodied in an Order-in-Council passed under authority of the Fair Wages and Hours of Labor Act, the Labor Minister, Hon. Norman McLarty, announced this week.

Six new regulations, drafted as a result of representations by Labor provide a procedure whereby claims shall be investigated and settlement made. They were given out in a statement to the press.

Under the new regulations when it is found, through Labor Department investigation, that employees have not been paid the required rate of wages the contractor must deliver to the Deputy Labor Minister a cheque payable to the Receiver-General of Canada for the amount due.

If payment has not been made by the Government to the contractor, the amount due his employees will be held back and paid over to the Deputy Labor Minister to be deposited with the Receiver-General in a fair wages suspense account. Cheques on this account payable to the workers concerned will then be issued.

Text of the new regulations follows:

1. The Deputy Labor Minister shall be responsible for investigation of all claims for payment of wages at rates set out in the fair wage schedule embodied in Government contracts and in any case where the actual rates have been less than the rates so set out in the fair wage schedule he shall ascertain the difference between the amounts actually paid to employees and the amounts which they would have received had they been paid at the rates set out in the fair wage schedule.

Must Pay Difference.

2. The contractor shall deliver to the Deputy Minister a cheque payable to the Receiver General of Canada for the total amount of differences ascertained under Regulation No. 1, or if settlement has not yet been made with the contractor concerned, then the government department concerned with the contract shall withhold payment of such amount from the contractor and shall deliver to the Deputy Labor Minister a cheque in the required amount, payable to the Receiver General of Canada.

3. Amounts so collected or deducted from contractors and other departments of government shall be paid to the Receiver General of Canada to be deposited in an account, known as the fair wages suspense account. In settlement of all claims of individual workers the Deputy Labor Minister shall authorize the issue of cheques in the appropriate amount in the name of the worker concerned, these cheques to be charge to the fair wages suspense account.

4. The Deputy Minister shall endeavor to ensure the safe delivery of these cheques to workers concerned.

5. In cases where departments other than the Labor Department have occasion through default by the contractor to seize his security and pay off claims direct for wages, then any unclaimed cheques for payment of such wages shall be delivered to the Deputy Labor Minister with all relevant information concerning each case to be deposited in the fair wages suspense account.

6. It shall be the responsibility of the Deputy Labor Minister to maitain adequate record of receipts and disbursements connected with both funds referred to above.

Australia Moves Her Taxes Higher

SYDNEY, Nov. 30—(CP).—Legislation was introduced into Parliament yesterday to increase steeply Australia's income tax as part of the Commonwealth's plan to finance her war effort.

While incomes which hitherto were not taxed would be affected only slightly by the new measures, incomes ranging from £500 to £2,000 (from $1,776 to $7,106), would be taxed heavily.

A married taxpayer with one child who previously paid £6 on £500 now pays £25. A taxable income of £1,000 pays £118, compared to £35 previously; £1,500 pays £278, compared to £85; £2,000 pays £490, compared to £140.

State income tax in the highest taxed States is about the same. The personal exemption scale rises from one shilling in the pound on a taxable income of £300 to five shillings on £1,500. Excess income over £1,500 pays 10 shillings. Property income pays one shilling three pence in the pound to £300, five shillings at £1,200 and 10 shillings thereafter.

The tax would be deducted weekly by employers beginning January 1, 1941. The majority of the States also collect their income tax in this fashion.

Observers predicted that the new taxes would have the effect of rigid curtailment of expenditure on clothes, holidays and non-essential matters.

While putting into effect this tax program to meet the costs of the war the Government, without a working majority in Parliament, is faced with Labor demands for increases in the pay of the armed forces and their dependents, increased old age and invalid pensions and increased use of central bank credit.

Observers predicted the Government faced the possibility of defeat in the House of Representatives on these issues.

Warehouse Blast Kills Seven, Many Are Buried

YAKIMA, Wash, Nov. 30—(AP)—A death-dealing explosion, followed by fire, ripped a large warehouse asunder at Toppenish, Wash., yesterday, killed at least seven persons and left an untold number of others buried beneath the ruins of five shops in the plant.

The blast was believed caused by gas which had collected in the warehouse basement or by dynamite which had been stored there.

Five of the dead were identified tentatively as: Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Cline, operators of a merchandise store; Patrick R. Oldfield, Vernon Ramsdell, Bill Duncan.

Two other bodies, one headless, were taken from the ruins.

About 12 persons were injured; six were taken to hospitals in serious condition.

The blast reduced the two-storey, 250-foot long warehouse to rubbish. Destroyed in the warehouse were a merchandise store, a real estate office, barber shop, beauty shop, produce company office and a cafe.

The explosion apparently occurred in the centre of the building. The roof collapsed and the four cement walls crumbled.

Fire broke out almost immediately and raged uncontrolled for two hours.

The explosion occurred about noon and shattered windows in a six-block area.

Earl Hanson, one of the injured, fought his way through the flames to rescue Mrs. Ralph Wheeler, who was trapped in the debris of the beauty shop. Both were burned severely.

Mrs. Wheeler said she smelled gas two hours before the blast. A repair man, Ray Snyder, was called. The explosion came just as he turned on his flashlight to investigate the leak, he said.

Alfred Bollin, a witness said, the explosion seemed to "roll out of the basement."

Another witness, Ken Goetz, said debris was hurled 40 to 50 feet into the air, and "I saw chunks of masonry fall 150 feet away."

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Two great explosions of mysterious origin destroyed the du Pont powder plant's black powder mill yesterday on the edge of the near-by Fort Lewis military camp, but no one was killed or injured. A preliminary estimate of $5,000 damage was announced. The explosions were so terrific windows were broken in a schoolhouse 14 miles away. Earthworks prevented damage to near-by buildings.

A company official said: "We have no way of knowing what caused the explosion, but whe have no reason to believe it resulted from sabotage." The du Pont plant was not working on national defense orders, officials said.

BILLY CONN IS AWARDED 12-ROUND DECISION OVER LEE SAVOLD

Winner Feared Not Ready To Meet Louis

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 — (AP) — Billy Conn added no stars to his fistic crown in beating up befuddled Lee Savold in Madison Square Garden last night. As was reasonably suspected, the punch that used to do no worse than wound middleweights is only a minor irritant to a heavyweight—even to a heavyweight no better able to defend himself than Savold.

The Pittsburg profile punched the Des Moines boy with everything he had for most of the 12 rounds. At times he even leaped off the floor to see if he could get a little extra weight behind his blows. But nothing happened, and at the end Savold actually looked better than the lad who wants to fight Joe Louis next summer.

Conn had a cut under one eye, whereas Savold bore no mark on his countenance except an expression of honest bewilderment.

"He is a pretty sharp puncher," Savold said of the light-heavy champion. "Naw, he never dazed me. He might do as good against Louis as Pastor did. I dunno."

Promoter Mike Jacobs, even though he saw the fight and heard the boos presented Billy by the crowd after it was over, refused to concede that his candidate had not furthered his campaign for a title shot. It was pointed out to him that Savold was only a 187-pounder and in appearance a trifle muscle-bound, whereas in Louis, Conn would be meeting a great big, limber fellow.

"I thought he did all right," Mike insisted.

"He licked the guy, didn't he?"

"We'll be ready for Louis next June," chimed in Johnny Ray, who manages Conn. "Maybe we didn't look so good to-night, but we been having boils up to six months ago."

"You had him hurt two, three times," he finally yelled, "and what did you do? Nothin'."

It was true. Savold finally did come out of his trance in the late rounds and hit Billy back few times and Billy didn't appear to like it much. But Savold didn't know what to do next.

For these occasional spurts some of the boys gave Lee a couple of rounds, and another when Conn fouled him. Conn won the others.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Peterborough's curling fraternity are all set to go, the drop in the temperature this week having got the whole colony interested. Herb Martin started in Wednesday to make ice an already has a fair start. If Old John B. Frost does his stuff in the next few days, the knights of the stane and besom will be out there at their favorite pastime. Meanwhile the annual winter meeting of the curling club is called for Monday night at 8 o'clock in the club rooms and all interested in curling, old or new members are cordially invited to be on hand. Drawing up rinks for the season is the principal item on the agenda but there may be other business. Applications for membership have already been received from a number of new curlers and it looks as the club is in for a good season with reinforcements of new members coming along to assist the old guard.

* * * * * *

Older members of the Peterborough Curling Club were shocked yesterday to hear of the sudden death of Louis Williams, president of the Lindsay Curling Club. Williams was held in the highest regard by local curlers who regarded him as one of the most formidable opponents to come out of a town that has always been noted as a training ground for clever curlers. "He was one of the greatest vice-skips in the game when he curled for Frank Carew," a Peterborough exponent of the fine art of curling remarked last night and that seemed the general opinion of the members of the Peterborough Club. He had often appeared here with Lindsay rinks and local skips knew, as soon as they saw him on the ice, that they were in for the keenest of competition. The local club sympathizes with their Lindsay friends in the loss they have sustained in the unexpected passing of a fine executive and a great curler.

The Peterborough Ski Club is taking advantage of the cold snap to get their season under way at an unexpectedly early date. It is a novel feeling for a club that several times failed to find any snow for a mid-winter meet to discover that it is able to start operations on the first of December. Nevertheless the club is cashing in on the unlooked for arrival of real skiing conditions and tomorrow sees the lid taken off with a bus service to Bethany, the tow in operation and prospects good for some lively skiing under unusually fine conditions for this time of the year. Prospects are that the club will have many new members this year. Led by a bunch of wideawake officers who believe that every season should be better than the last the organization has sold itself to the sporting public as an up-and-coming club, the kind of an outfit that is worth joining.

Millions of Bowlers

Bowling is fast becoming the major sport in the United States, according to a sport writer who has been digging into the statistics. He has arrived at the conclusion that the alley game is becoming more popular all the time and that is now embraces 16,000,000 ardent players throughout the country. Over the border it should be understood bowling means the ten-pin brand. There are 50,000 alleys in the United States and they are all busy. The American Bowling Congress has 14,913 sanctioned leagues, made up of 132,116 teams while the Women's Bowling Congress boasts of 100,000 sanctioned women bowlers. And they all play the 10-pin game not the five pin brand that is so popular here and in many other sections of Canada. The Dutch started the bowling game but in 1840 the gambling angle had become so pronounced that a nine-pin game was virtually outlawed. In 1895 the American Bowling Congress was organized for the purpose of reviving the game as a 10-pin sport and from then on bowling really went to town.

Strongely enough while we copy many of our sport ideas from our American cousins we have practically abandoned ten-pins and gone in for the five-pin variety in which a much smaller ball is used. Attempts to get American bowlers to follow the Canadian example have been a complete failure. The only game the men and women bowling enthusiasts over there are interested in is the ten-pin stuff with the big mineralite ball. Bowling alley proprietors in the United States would prefer to see the five-pin game played for it necessitates fewer pins, they last a lot longer and the games are run off more quickly than 10-pin fixtures. But the bowlers don't want any part of it; they regard five-pins as kids' stuff and so they go on rolling the big mineralites at ten hunks of wood instead of at five as bowlers over here do.

Last night's doubleheader in the Ladies' Basketball League at the Y.W.C.A. failed to produce the competition in evidence on opening night and both winners finished out in front by a comfortable margin. The Y Cadets, a new organization, composed of younger players were stacked up against their clubmates, the Y Gym, and the senior outfit showed no mercy for the freshman team, defeating them by 24 to 1, the score giving a fair idea of the play. The other end of the bill which saw Westclox win their second straight game to go out in front in the loop race was considerably closer but at that the Clockmakers had little trouble in finishing in front over Quaker Cubs 14 to 6. Elinor Craig sparked the winners' attack, scoring eight points.

Rougher or Just Bad Luck?

Is the N.H.L. hockey rougher than usual this season or are the players running into a streak of bad luck? Nearly every battle sees some one put out of action. Rangers for instance have already lost the services of Art Coulter and Alex Shibicky, Amerks have two or three players out of action and last night at Detroit the Red Wings ran into their share of trouble when Eddie Wares, one of their best forwards had to leave the ice with a possible fracture of the wrist. Incidentally Detroit who have lost only one game all season defeated Black Hawks 3 to 1 and strengthened their hold on second place. The Wings are only two points behind the Toronto Maple Leafs and have a crack at Hap Day's gang in Detroit tomorrow night.

That Oshawa senior club is going at top speed right now and Soup Campbell has to dig deep to get out enough adjectives to describe the flashing play of the G-Men. In Oshawa last night the Motor City boys handed Niagara Falls their first defeat of the campaign and they did it in a style that left the Brights without a single alibi. Oshawa turned on the heat early and never slowed up with the result that the Cataracts were beaten 6 to 1. And with that kind of a score there isn't much the defeated team can offer in the way of an excuse. Edmison and Tisdale sparked the Oshawa attack and did it so impressively that the critics are beginning to look at the G-Men as championship possibilities, not merely a gang brought in to build up the loop.

Trent River News

Snow fell for two consecutive days this week making car traffic difficult in some side lines. Up to Friday the snow plough has not been operating through Highway 30 at this division.

The necessity of careful packing and addressing of parcels for the forces overseas is being stressed by officials at Ottawa. Parcels for soldiers should not include any sort of glass container. Tinned fruits or pickles can be sent, matches and explosives of all kinds are barred from the mails. Parcels should be wrapped or sewn in cloth covering before wrapping in paper. The correct way to address mail to friends in the Army overseas is to give the regimental number, rank, name and details of unit.

The following report of Red Cross overseas shipment from Campbellford will be interesting to those of the community who have "done their bit" knitting socks, mitts, sweaters and helmets which have been sent to Campbellford. Shipment made to headquarters in Toronto last week consisted of the following: 86 pairs socks, 19 pairs mitts, 3 sweaters, 5, turtle-neck sweaters, 5 scarves, 4 helmets, also a box containing 17 quills and 2 afghans for refugees.

P.C.V.S. PRESENTS - - -

Special The Examiner
By Two Students of the P.C.V.S.

The Glee Club

On Wednesday morning the girls' glee club was effusively greeted by the First and Second formers in their assembly. This was the second appearance for this organization this term, their debut being made at the Armistice Day service. Miss Weddell deserve orchids for her perseverance in the face of many difficulties, since this group has had to meet under conditions that would daunt a less worthy organization. This club helps to overcome any trepidations that the pupil may or may not have regarding their personal appearance on the stage as singers or announcers. In 1950 the Madrigal singers may be largely composed of these girls—some may even become music teachers. Would it be possible for the Glee Club to appear in the Assembly to entertain us on Monday and the orchestra to attend each Friday morning assembly, or possibly a get-together could be arranged? All of P.C.V.S. is interested in the Glee Club so let's give them all the support that is needed to produce a really fine organization.

Oscar the Snake

Pupils who have frequentd Mr. V. R. Henry's sanctuary, the physics laboratory, this term have probably wondered where dear old Oscar (the snake) has disappeared. Oscar was (or is) a wonderful pet. Many of the more daring students were probably wont to stroke his sleey and shiny hide, while others shrank with inherent dread of all writhing creatures. They, no doubt, deemed it wise to keep a safe distance from sinewy body and gleaming fangs.

Oscar, unlike many boys, had a peculiar and puzzling lack of appetite. Frogs could be temptingly dangled before his snout and, worse luck, there would be no result. But no, all he would (or could) eat was an ordinary mouse once a week. Another strange quirk was that he utterly refused to eat in company, no doubt consuming his meal when the deep pall of night spread over P.C.V.S. We understand that a movie was made while he was eating a mouse, but this has never been verified. Oscar spent the warm days of summer on a nearby farm but now he is missing. Let us place a picture of this dearly beloved serpent in the show case, in reverent memory of his wriggly coils.

The War Stamp Christmas Cards

Your Christmas shopping worries are over. No more thought need be given to this most puzzling of all problems. Why wrack your brains, large or small, when you could put your ability to much better use in the coming exams. How? You ask. Well, the National War Savings Committee is putting out a special Christmas card that sells for 25 cents. Far too much for a Christmas card you immediately clamor. But wait, now for the surprise. Included in each and every card is a War Savings Stamp that costs 25 cents. Therefore you receive a lovely Christmas card absolutely free. They are engraved, embossed and otherwise, as worthy as any 10 cent card down town. The card is in the form of a War Savings Certificate application blank and all you have to do is buy the other fifteen stamps to complete the certificate. There is a suitable verse on each card making it a very acceptable card. They will also do a great service to our war effort since everyone who receives a card will have to buy fifteen other stamps.

That distant aunt that sends you a five dollar bill each Christmas will appreciate this card more than anything else that you can send her. We have a habit of forgetting these relatives, possibly because they live so far away, but more likely because we do not know what to mail them for Christmas. These cards should be in town by the time you read this so why not think about it. The school will, no doubt, order a supply of these cards if the demand warrants it. It may seem early to purchase these but it is for a wonderful cause and much personal pleasure may be derived also. Ask your parents soon in order that they will not have their own supply of cards already bought.

The Echoes

The voice of spring began to whisper softly on Tuesday, the twenty-sixth. This may seem early for spring but nevertheless, they were signs that designated that season. The occasion was the meeting of the Echoes executive. A banner magazine, though somewhat different than former years, is promised in 1941 and Hugh Kenner is editor-in-chief to see that this supposition is true. Norma Timlin and Margaret Westbye will always be on hand as his assistants. Our managing editor is Bob Carley, who ought to be able to smooth out any difficulties that may arise. Muriel McCarrell and Mary Hooper are head of the School and Form news sections respectively. Literary editor is none other than Beverly White, Maralin Munro heads the art section and photography will be presided over by Fred Garner. Advertising manager is Davis Graham, circulation manager is Lloyd Williamson, Mary Dalliday is looking after all the typing, and the exchange department is under Jim Hooper. This group of business men and women is headed by Don Metheral, who announces the weekly stamp sale, the business manager.

The school depends on the Echoes to link it together, for without it the students of P.C.V.S. would be divided into sects, not bound together by one central emblem of unit our Echoes.

Did You Remember It

Thursday morning we were greeted by the sing-song tunes of Alden Gourley as he proclaimed the institution of a thoroughly new, and less ideal, type of club. It was appropriately named the "Did You Remember It Club." The task of its members, and every student is a member, is to remember to bring last night's newspaper to school. It was also requested that each pupil phone their friends before going to school and say "Did you remember it? We believe that everyone should make a point of phoning four friends each morning, not forgetting to bring some paper themselves, and plead with them to add to the now slowly increasing pile of papers. Incidentally it is a wonderful chance for an excuse to phone the girl friend (or boy friend as the case may be). It is to be hoped that this new and unique club will bring far-reaching results as far as the paper collection is concerned. Did you remember it?

Teasettes

It was announced on Friday that $1196 worth of Stamps had been converted into War Savings Certificates. A sidelight on this is interesting since it was said if one handed his application blank (properly filled out, etc.) in on Friday, he or she would be able to redeem their certificate one month earlier in seven and one-half years. That is, the money would be available in seven years and five months. If the application form was handed in on Monday it would be necessary to wait the usual seven and one-half years. This week's sale of Stamps amounted to $360. Wonder what it will be next week since Christmas is coming?

Wreaths are coming along fairly well, one way of producing them in quantity was shown on the third floor this week. The art class was making them. Good work.

The girls' basketball team got under way this week (in practice only) and the badminton club started anew.

Many students have noticed the tinkling of bells as they walked along the corridors. Few know the origin of this fad. A trio of girls in the third form academic might be able to tell you. We know already, but are keeping it a secret.

Repasz Band was played once more by the Orchestra on Friday morning. Aren't the copies of this song ever mislayed? Singing seemed more feeble than ever on Friday but this was due to the song, not our orchestra.

The commencement is but one week away. We hope to be able to tell you all about it in next week's news. The fifth and special commercial voted for the Head Girl and Boy this week. Until the commencement the results are a secret.

As Shakespeare said through the medium of Brutus in the play, "Julius Caesar," "What monstrous apparition this..." so many students wonder at the bedraggled boys seen each day in some part of P.C.V.S. or another. These relics are not ghosts but are just victims of misfortune, for many of them find it mentally and physically impossible to put on ties without the aid of mirrors. Houdini, the magican, might have done it, but the boys simply can't do it. The students' council is urged to install mirrors (long called for but never obtained in the gymnasium in the interests of humanity.

Two ex-students of P.C.V.S. had their pictures in the paper this week. They were Wireless Telegrapher Ben F. Ackerman and Private Kenneth Thompson. Ken is with the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders and Ben belong to the Royal Canadian Navy. The best of luck to these ex-students.

Mr. Corneil gave an instructive talk on composition in photography at the Junior Camera Club meeting on Wednesday. Attendance has been good so far this term.

The Christmas exams are but two short weeks away. This is the penalty for the curious absence of many students several weeks before Christmas last year. They considered a steady income for one or two weeks more important than their school work. It is also hard on our teachers since they will now have to mark papers through the Christmas holidays. Such is life.

Beaten By Bill Conn

Lee Savold, LEFT, Des Moines heavyweight boxer, likes thick steaks and his manager, Pinky George, once a chef, saw to it that he got them, but steaks were not enough when he came up against Billy Conn Friday night at Madison Square Garden for the right to meet Joe Louis. Conn was awarded the 12-round bout decision.

"But I—somehow I don't seem to care about the publicity any more. I don't care if I am recognized. It doesn't seem to make so much difference—now." She gave him a shy glance full of meaning, but his mind seemed to be far away.

"Jim!" she burst out, then, "what's the matter? You look so strange—"

"Oh, it's just that it makes me so damned mad!" He made an obvious effort to return to normal. She could see him relaxing, forcing his whimsical half smile. "They've no right to take pictures of us! I'd like to get my hands on that reporter's neck, that's all. Don't you realize what this means, girl? We're going to have to travel now instead of going back to the city—"

"Travel! Why, what do you mean, Jim?"

"I didn't tell you, but my job back there on the Terminal building is finished. I didn't want to upset you, I was thinking of going back and getting into some other game because I thought you sort of liked the town and wanted to live there. But now . . . there's a new bridge going up out near Detroit. Guess we'd better make tracks for there."

"Jim, do you mean you're—out of a job? And we're not going back to the city?" She was bewildered.

"That's about it, girl. After that picture it wouldn't be very pleasant for you to be—hunting a house, as you say. Every landlady in the city would turn up her nose. I couldn't let you go back and—face that again. You must know that. We'll catch us a train and go places!"

"A train. But the car, Jim! Surely you're going to take that back to the city. It's only hired . . ."

"There's a garage man I know back at ——" He paused and she had the impression he was searching his memory for some unfamiliar name. "Back at Lewistown. We came through Lewistown yesterday, didn't we? About an hour's drive back, if I remember correctly. We'll go back that far and drop off the car. There's a through bus line makes this highway, I think, and we can take it to the nearest train stop. You're going places, girl, West! . . . Think of it!"

He reached for her, suddenly, and pulled her into his arms. His fear and worry seemed to have vanished. His good humor was restored.

"But I—I don't quite understand, Jim. To—pick up and—and change plans like this . . ." She still hesitated.

"I told you I was a rolling stone, didn't I? You're going to get used to quick changes, girl. Besides, why should you care? One town's as good as another, isn't it? As long as we're together?"

She strained against him, then. "As long as we're together, Jim," she repeated solemnly. "I don't think I could bear it if we ever had to separate. Don't ever leave me!" she pleaded. "No matter what happens!"

"Girl!" he said, and his eyes were bright as if with tears, as his seeking lips found hers. "Oh, girl!"

It was hard to realize that they were not going back to the city. As they drove back to Lewistown and Jim left their rented car in the care of a greasy garage mechanic, Lona caught herself speculating. It seemed so much like flight.

Loyally she kept at bay the doubts that crept into her mind as she sat beside Jim through the ride on the speeding bus that took them within thirty miles of the state capital, where only a week ago she had been in such trouble. How things had changed since then!

They would be obliged to spend the night on the train, Jim told her, after a consultation with the agent of the branch station where they finally found themselves late that afternoon Morning would bring them into Brighton, the place for which they were heading.

"But how can you be sure you'll find work there, Jim?" she asked him, her voice puzzled.

He shrugged. "There's always room for one more good iron worker on a bridge job," he told her. "That's one thing you never need worry about, girl. There'll always be work for me somewhere. . . . I've made many a change as sudden as this."

Westclox Girls Defeat Quaker Cubs 14-6

Crowding most of their points into the last half Westclox downed Quaker Cubs 14-6 to capture their second straight victory and take the top rung of the Ladies' City Basketball serie at the Y.W.C.A. last night. 'Y' Cadets, a new entry into the Ladies' League, lacked the experience of their senior sisters, 'Y' Gym and went down to a decisive defeat 24-1 in their first appearance of the season. Westclox had trouble in getting started and scored but one lone basket in the first half to lead 2-0 at that point, but turned in a more powerful offensive in the last half to win 14-6 in a rough, hard fought battle.

Y Gym functioned much more smoothly than in their first game and had little trouble in downing Y Cadets, leading 10-1 at the half and coasting in from that point. The somewhat green Cadets were unable to chalk up a single field, while counting one free throw in five attempts. The losers were guilty of no fouls and battled hard all the way but the more polished attack of the Gym team was too much for the Cadets' faltering defence and Y Gym led all the way. The losers had almost as many scoring chances as the Gym squad but their shooting was poor around the basket, and passing ragged to spoil many offensive thrusts. 'Y' Gym now have one win and a loss to hold down second place in the young race a half a game behind St. John's, who won their only start. S. Zacks with 8 was the winners' leading scorer, while R. Dalliday and B. Flynn each counted 6. M. Smith, D. Saunders and J. Collins were outstanding for the losers.

The teams:

Y Gym 24—B. DeMaio, S. Zacks 8, S. Florence, I. Young, B. Flynn 6, R. Dalliday 6, R. Ellis, D. Ackford 2, R. Sullivan, D. Duffus 2.

Y Cadets 1—D. Saunders, M. Lawless, M. Smith 1, S. Pringle, J. Collins, N. Dack, J. Cox, E. Jobbitt, S. McGuire, J. Collins.

Westclox had to turn on all their scoring power in the last period to down Quaker Cubs 14-6 after being held to 2 points in the first half. In a very even, hard fought battle Westclox counted once near the end of the close-checking first half and led by E. Craig and B. Saunders made an offensive drive in the last period that steadily pulled them ahead. Both teams' checking was unusually hard in this game and play was consequently slowed down as both squads were below form in passing and both missed many scoring chances particularly in the opening half. The losers had a good share of the play but fell down around the basket and were slow breaking to spoil many chances.

The winners missed all five of their free throw tries and Quakers made two of the seven shots awarded to them. E. Craig with 8 points, B. Saunders and D. Gibbs were prominent for the winners and J. Metcalfe, B. Fenner and H. White went well for Quaker Cubs. The teams:

Quaker Cubs 6— B. Frizzell, H. White 1, B. Fenner 2, R. Farr, J. Metcalfe 3, G. Allen, D. Smith, M. Yondell.

Westclox 14—J. Carter, B. Saunders 4, M. McFadden, E. Craig 8, A. Flynn, J. Crowe, H. Tighe, D. Cubs 2.

Referee— J. Cooper. Umpire, H. Smith. Scorer and Timer, S. Ecobichon.

GOODFELLOW LEADS RED WINGS TO 3-1 WIN OVER BLACK HAWKS

Veteran Ebbie Paces Youthful Club

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The team that Jack built is showing no signs of collapsing. Maestro Jack Adams' reconstructed Detroit Red Wings are riding the crest of a National Hockey League unbeaten streak that has kept them high in second place. They're only two points behind Toronto Maple Leafs and getting better every game.

E. Goodfellow

Ever since the Red Wings went into a nose-dive in the 1937-38 season after winning two straight Stanley Cups, Adams has been rebuilding. He infused some rookies into the lineup in the past two seasons, and added another group to start this campaign.

Good Solid Veterans

Only a sprinkling of veterans of the Stanley Cup champions remain in the lineup and these are of the more solid brand—such as Defenceman Ebbie Goodfellow and Winger Syd Howe. Starting his 13th season, Goodfellow was elevated to playing coach this year when Adams became vice president of the Detroit chain system.

The veteran Ebbie was travelling with a speed that belied his lengthy service last night as the Red Wings defeated Chicago Black Hawks, 3-1, to consolidate their hold on second place over the third-place Hawks. Goodfellow aided in one goal and scored another to pace the youthful club.

Goalie Johnny Mowers, Detroit's brilliant rookie netminder, meanwhile blanked Chicago until late in the final period when Cully Dahlstrom scored on a double relay from Joe Cooper and Johnny Chad. But by that time the Red Wings had rapped home three counters to run up a safe lead.

Rookie Line Prominent

The rookie line of Joe Carveth-Arch Wilder-Leo Douglas also was prominent in the victory. Carveth, right winger on the trio who performed last year with Indianapolis in the American League, opened the scoring at 18:06 of the initial period with his first goal in the N.H.L.

Detroit went two goals up about halfway through the middle session, when Sid Abel scored on Herchenratter's pass after Jimmy Orlando had carried the puck up the ice. Goodfellow made it 3-0 early in the final period.

The game, only one played last night, was a prelude to a crowded week-end of five matches in which every team sees action.

Two games are slated for tonight, with Montreal Canadiens playing the Rangers at New York and New York Americans meeting the Maple Leafs in Toronto. Sunday the Bruins play the Americans at New York, Toronto travels to Detroit, and Rangers go to Chicago.

Niagara Falls Brights Drops Game To Oshawa Generals 6 to 1

(By the Canadian Press.)

Niagara Falls Brights lost their first game of the season last night, and the way they lost is making other teams in the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior "A" series a trifle uneasy about future meetings with Tracy Shaw's spirited Oshawa Generals.

For while Hamilton trounced London 9-3 and St. Catharines nudged out Port Colborne 3-2, Generals turned the heat on Brights' unbeaten record for a smashing 6-1 victory. Following the lead of Ebby Edmison, who strenghtened his position at the top of the league scoring standings with one goal and two assists, Generals shattered with a loud bang Brights record of seven previous games without defeat.

But no matter how many threats appear on the horizon—and Oshawa's three straight victories this week constitute a definite threat—you can't get around the fact that Hamilton Dofascos haven't met a team yet this season they couldn't beat. Last night's rough exhibition with London was Dofascos' eight without defeat.

Jarv. Taylor, London defenceman, fell on his stick during the first period in attempting to make a check, and was injured seriously. Ten stitches were needed to close a cut near his left eye and sight of that eye may be lost, according to hospital authorities.

Hockey's Big Seven

By The Canadian Press.

Syd Howe of Detroit broke a first place tie with Syl Apps of Toronto for the National Hockey League point-scoring leadership last night by picking up a point on an assist as the Red Wings defeated Chicago Black Hawks 3-1 in the only scheduled game of the night. This was the only change in the Big Seven.

The leaders:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Howe, Detroit	4	7	11
Apps, Toronto	5	5	10
Drillon, Toronto	5	4	9
Hextall, Rangers	4	5	9
Allen, Chicago	5	2	7
March, Chicago	3	4	7
Watson, Rangers	2	5	7

Last Night's Stars

Ebbie Goodfellow, Detroit, who scored one goal and helped in another as Red Wings ran their undefeated streak to seven games by defeating Chicago Black Hawks, 3-1.

Cull Dahlstrom, Chicago, who got the lone Black Hawk goal.

The Sports Round-Up

By EDDIE BRIETZ, AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Only thing that kept today from being a freezer around this town was the news that the Dodger deal for Mickey Owen is hotter than ever... You'll all think we're plum daffy, but California vs Stanford today is the spot to end all upsets if there ever was one...The Minneapolis papers are giving Tommy Harmon down the country for popping off here that the Michigan team (which lost to Minnesota 7-6) was three touchdowns better than the Gophers.

From Near and Far

George Jessel, the comedian and his eye-filling wife, were at the Fordham football rally last night... Latest info from abroad is that old Paulo Uzcudun, who hasn't been quite the same since Joe Louis popped him, will try it again with Max Schmeling in a German Red Cross benefit bout.

Gus Kilian and Heinz Vopel, German six-day bike riders, have asked the United States government to extend their time limit here which has expired...Kilian and Vopel, former soldiers in Hitler's army came here six months ago via Russia and Japan...A practically unknown jockey last year, Earl Dew of Sac City, Iowa, will probably win the 1940 jockey title...Already Dew has booted home more than 250 winners...Jean Borotra, the Petain regime's national director of sports, has put a ban on all pro sports but cycling...Borotra, former French tennis player, at present is enjoying the California sunshine.

Ski Notes

Old Man Winter breezed in a bit early this year, no doubt catching many of us unprepared for November skiing. Two ski schools have already been held in Victoria Park with Fritz Loosli in charge of "loosening up" operations. A good crowd was out each night to take advantage of this excellent coaching and we are very fortunate in having such good skiing conditions while Fitz is still in Peterborough. You will be advised of further classes through the press. Plan to attend.

Provided the weather holds, a bus will leave the Empress Hotel at 11.30 a.m. Sunday for Bethany. Return fare same as last year, 35 cents. We are advised the tow will be in operation and it looks like a good day's skiing. A great many improvements have been made out there, as we said before, and another thing, there is a season ticket available for the tow at an interesting figure. Come out and get a line on things.

What have you done about your membership? Let's get them in this week-end and start the year off on the right foot. See you this week-end.—ED.

What A Reach This Team Has

The current basketball season in the U.S. was officially opened at Madison Square Garden with a match between Phillips 66 Oilers and the Ohrback A.A. Don Lockard six feet, two and a half inches forward of the Oilers, is shown leaping to sink a shot for two points. The Oilers, who hail from Oklahoma, boast great size, the tallest on the team being Fred Troutwine, 44, six feet, eight and a half inches.

Roughriders Out To Pile Up Healthy Lead

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—(CP).— Ottawa Roughriders arrived here last night with Coach Ross Trimble in a fine mood for anything but moaning.

Despite the fact that Halfback Tony Golab and Wingline Ace Dave Sprague are injured—neither seriously enough to keep him out of action—Trimble has nothing but enthusiasm for his club's chances in the two-game, total-point Canadian Rugby Union championship series that will start here this afternoon between Ottawa and Balmy Beach.

Trimble says he isn't going to play this one safe—keep the score down in preparation for a coup de grace in th second game at Ottawa next week. He claims his Roughriders will build to-day a large enough margin to ensure the abode of the Grey Cup and the C.R.U. title for the next year.

Fans Are Divided.

Football's local fandom is divided on the series. On one hand they like the Balmies for their unbeaten and untied record this season. But on the other they compare the strength of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, Beaches' stamping ground, with the powerful Interprovincial Union, from which Ottawa emerged as champion. The comparison is not flattering to the O.R.F.U., in most cases.

Beaches will be without Outside Syd. Reynolds, who was lost for the remainder of the season when stricken last week with appendix trouble necessitating an immediate operation. Coach Alex Ponton will use Leo Deadey in Reynolds' spot, and places much confidence in him.

The weather will make a hard, fast field, which would favor Beaches. Temperatures were falling during the night, freezing the turf left soggy after a slight thaw Friday.

Oshawa Is Beaten By Owen Sound

OWEN SOUND, Nov. 30 (Special) —Dominion Wreckers, Owen Sound's O.H.A. Intermediate "A" team defeated the Oshawa Generals, O.H.A. Memorial Cup champions of last season, 7 to 4, here last night in a fast and exciting exhibition game.

Both teams gave all they had, but the Wreckers showed the better staying powers and ran away from the Generals in the third period. Each scored a goal in the first and second periods, but the final period saw the fastest hockey of the night with the Wreckers scoring five goals to two by the Generals. Tobe White, local left winger, was the leading scorer of the night, getting three goals in the last period. The goal tending both of Hainsworth and Neath was outstanding.

Christmas Means More Than A Gift-Giving Time

(By Flora)

Small noses and those not so small will be flattening themselves against plate glass windows from now until Christmas. Wishful thinking will be mortgaging every other asset of the mind and the excitement that is good for everybody at times will make blood flow faster and hearts beat with hope.

There is something in every human being that needs this impetus to make life just a bit zippier. The band music that lifts one off his feet, the gay pageant of the circus, the adventure story that keeps the light on half the night. We all need something to take the hum out of humdrum.

This is Christmas. Let us not define it too carefully. What intoxication can be defined? So don't spoil it for the children. Don't say to the little folk, "There won't be any Christmas for us this year. Papa is away with the other soldiers and there isn't much money to spend for silly things we don't need. Try to remember that Christmas is more than gifts. It is gaiety and brightness. It can be as simple as you like and still be Christmas. It means color, though the color be found in tissue paper ornaments.

It means a pine bough that can be scratched up some way. It means, perhaps, pop-corn strings which the children can make. It means all the gay and foolish things the family can possibly connive out of thin air. It means fun and laughter and anything from a new fur coat to a pair of red mittens, but most of all, in many, many homes, it means a joyful reunion that may not be possible next year because a wide ocean rolls between the two countries harboring ourselves and our loved ones.

If you mothers haven't a great deal to spend on Christmas stockings, remember that dollies can be made of old stockings; or why not look through the rag-bag for bits of bright cotton or silk and fashion a new wardrobe for the doll your little daughter already has—she'd love it, and you can make a little trunk out of a shoe-box. Playhouses can be made out of carton, painted, and then furnished with spool furniture (you might get an older brother interested in this).

Children want Christmas—its fun and gaiety. They are not critics. And they have as good sense as we have. All they ask is to have Christmas a "different" day from all the rest. Something to look forward to and something to look back upon—remember your own light-hearted youth? Do not let warnings, war-talk or other gloomy things dampen their natural longing for the exceptional on this day of days at least.

The Girl With The Little Black Bag

A member of the Victorian Order of Nurses is the girl with "The Little Black Bag," who brings comfort and cheer into homes throughout all parts of Canada. Her services, which it is hoped will be available in Peterborough at the beginning of the year, have become even more valuable since the outbreak of war. Wives of soldiers particularly welcome her wise counsel; her regular visits to the home to check on the children's health; her advice as to their care, and her help in keeping up the lonely mother's morale during the trying time her husband is away at the front.

Country Fair To Be Colorful Event

The County Fair at the Y.W.C.A. Monday afternoon and evening will be a colourful event in which all 'Y' girls are taking part. Afternoon tea will be in charge of a group of senior members, with Mrs. Hugh Waddell, tea room convener, assisted by Mrs. H. Bradburn, Mrs. T. Gentles, Mrs. C. Collins, Mrs. Wilmot Gordon, Mrs. J. L. McKeever and Mrs. W. J. Gordon. There is to be a pancake supper in the evening, and the country store, a highlight of the affair, will be in charge of the Old Country Club, and the Happy Hour Club.

Members of the Girls' Council, representing the girl membership of the Y.W.C.A., are: Senior gym, Mrs. G. L. Young, Mrs. R. Choke; Silver Finettes, Mrs. Dunford, Mrs. J. Forbes; Thursday gym, Miss Betty Vardy, Miss Olive Cooman; '38 Club, Miss Grace Sargent, Miss Jean Walters, Miss Mary Mitchell; Gym Swim Club, Miss Muriel Byers, Miss Virginia Grant; Friday Supper Club, Miss Shirley Richardson, Miss Agnes Richardson; Happy Hour Club, Miss Ada Smith, Miss Isobel Coward; Badminton Clubs, Miss Lily Taylor, Miss Beatrice Sawyer; Residence, Miss Eleanor Haddow, Miss Anne Davis; Old Country Club, Mrs. H. G. Gray, Miss Anna McKenzie; Swimming, Miss E. Barnes.

We Noticed . . .

. . . That the majority of this season's Christmas cards are essentially simple, with sentiments that reflect to a large extent the deeper significance of the day. There are novel types, to be sure, but fantastic modernistic designs, ornate motifs, wise-cracking comics are, generally speaking, among the missing.

. . . Etchings and engravings of cathedrals and reproductions of famous paintings are widely used—the loveliest of these are obviously intended for later framing— and, accordingly, are most often on conventional cream or white paper.

. . . In less formal cards, the modern theme is prevalent. The favorite sports of young Canada also inspire a variety of appropriate greetings, with skating, skiing and tobogganing well represented. There are cards for the bridge player, too, wishing the recipient "all the honors" along with the Christmas greeting.

DIVORCE DOES NOT ALWAYS REMEDY A BAD SITUATION

When Marriage Is Failure, Wife Should Give Careful Thought Before Asking Legal Separation

Dear Miss Dix—My husband is a weakling and rotten at the core. He is unfaithful to me, does not love me, has no use for me except for my services as a housekeeper and my ministering to his comfort. He loves, so far as he is capable, a girl who is very sweet and fine and who is alone in the world. I think she loves him, too. But he is too much of a coward to divorce me and risk the censure which he would receive. Why do I not take some action? Well, I do not wish to be a divorced woman. I want a man who is my husband in the eyes of the world, no matter how poor a specimen of manhood I know him to be. Although he has money enough to support two households comfortably, I do not wish to go through the inconvenience and uncertaintly of trying to collect alimony. And, shamefull as is the confession, I love this miserable creature and am willing to keep him on any terms. From the picture which I have drawn, which is the weaker character, he or I?—WRETCHED.

ANSWER—I certainly do not think that you show any signs of weakness. Quite the reverse, for it takes a great deal more strength to endure an unhappy marriage than it does just to walk out on it. Some of the most heroic figures in the world are the wives who carry on, year after year, through endless daily misery of marriages that are failures.

Their hearts are broken; their pride humbled into the dust; they are forced to bear insult and neglect, but they stand by the oath they have sworn to be faithful unto death. And that takes far more bravery than it does to lead a charge on the battlefield.

Divorce No Badge of Courage

So do not think of yourself as a weakling because you stand and fight instead of running away. Divorce is no badge of courage. Rather it is a sign of cowardice. It is throwing up your hands and quitting instead of seeing the thing through and trying to wrest victory out of defeat.

It seems to me that you have thought your problem over very carefully and reached a very sane conclusion. You have nothing to gain by breaking up your home and leaving your husband.

As you say, you have his name, your position in society, the comforts and luxuries that money buys, and they are a very important factor in a woman's happiness. These would be jeopardized, if not lost, by your getting a divorce.

And you have common sense enough to see that a decree absolute works no magic that automatically turns an unhappy woman into one who is gay and cheerful, and you know from your own observation that the pathway of the divorcee is strewn with many a thorn.

Love Still Clings.

But the main thing with you is that however unworthy your husband is, you still love him. Like Audrey you can say: "A poor thing, but mine own." That being the case, you are happier with him than you would be without him.

Even in love, half a loaf is better than no bread, as the old proverb goes, and you are less torn with anxieties and jealousies and aching loneliness when you are with him than you would be if you were separated from him.

And—if this is a comfort to you—you may be very sure that your husband still loves you in his way, or else he would have asked you for a divorce. He has never wanted to marry any woman but you, or else he would have done so. And in the end he will come back to you.

Hard to Change Ways of Old People

Dear Miss Dix—I am a widow with two nearly-grown children and have had an old aunt living with me for the last few years. She is a fine woman and I am very fond of her, but she has lived much alone and she has gotten very careless about her personal habits. Her table manners in particular are atrocious. She is slovenly in her eating, and I hate very much for my children to see this. It disgusts me to have to look at her eat, and I cannot ask a friend in for a meal. I have spoken to my aunt about it, but it had no effect. What can I do? X.

ANSWER—Virtually nothing, unless you ask you aunt to leave. It is hopeless to try to change the ways of old people. They seem to take a delight in defying the world and doing as they please. Being contrary is their last gesture of freedom.

Why your aunt should break all the rules of table etiquette and make every meal a sort of shambles when she is your guest, and she knows she is making herself obnoxious by doing so, is something we cannot understand. You would think that the least return she could make to you for giving her a home would be to try to adapt herself to your ways and to be as easy to live with as possible.

But most old people are very selfish and self-centered, and never consider anyone but themselves. More than that, many old people think that age gives them the privilege of making themselves disagreeable.

All of us know old people who are cross and surly and never speak except to say something that will wound somebody's feelings or hurt their pride. We know old people who are whining and complaining and who show no appreciation of what is done for them.

And we know plenty of old people who, as they used to sing in one of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, are very imperfect ablutioners and whose clothes are always dirty and spotted so that it is unpleasant to have them around.

We are always adjuring young people to mind their manners and to try to make themselves as pleasant and attractive as they can to those with whom they live. But old people need to watch their steps even more than young people do.

How to Cope With Unmannerly Boys

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a girl of 23, with my own business in my home town. This is a small place where the girls outnumber the boys and there is such competition among the girls for dates that the boys can virtually commit murder and get away with it. They refuse to go with a girl unless she will be "nice" to them and the things they expect for a ride around the block is a pretty high price to pay. They refuse to call on a girl at her home, or make dates in advance. You can't even demand manners from them. When there is a dance or a football game or any of the other things that come so seldom to a small town, they go out of town for their dates and that leaves us poor town girls on the rocks. Please tell me how a girl can possibly get decent dates.

CLARA BELL.

ANSWER—The thing for you girls to do is to get together and form a union and call a strike on these unmannerly cubs. I know that it is difficult to do this because there will always be some sort of a scab girl who will be disloyal and sneak dates, no matter how much she has promised not to, but if you will blacklist her if she breaks the rules she, too, will come into line.

What girls never will understand is that they are just as important to boys as the boys are to them, and that boys can no more have a good time without the girls than the girls can without them. So if you girls will only stand together and refuse to play ball with these spoiled boys until they agree to act decently, you can make them treat you properly, and they will respect you for it.

For Sunday, December 1

SUNDAY'S Horoscope opens the door to much gratification, happiness and high culminations of cherished ambitions, with augmented prestige, popularity and worldly as well as spiritual success. It is a time to push with purpose, security and confidence to the most exalted goals of achievement.

Those whose birthday it is may look to a year of definite achievement of long desired hopes and wishes, mainly with the recognition and rewards of industry, solidarity, worthiness and dependability.

A child born on this day may have most diversified and dependable talents for going ahead in life, reaching high places and power through its own merit, soundness and steadfastness in the service of those of prestige.

For Monday, December 2

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for gratifying climaxes of expansion, increase, achievement and exalted personal satisfactions mainly in the private affairs, domestic, romantic, social cultural and financial. These are all under splendid impetus for promotion, favors, increased popularity with augmented values in possessions. There might be a surprising legacy.

Those whose birthday it is stand on the happy threshold of a prosperous year, with a sudden precipitation of good fortune and beneficences of far-reaching effect on the future life. Change is imminent, incited by growing wealth, gifts, increased values in possessions or perhaps unexpected inheritance or other "windfall."

A child born on this day should have outstanding talents and mentality, inventive or creative genius, pronounced social qualities, benefiting by sudden coups or surprising strokes of good fortune.

Do You Know?

When windows or mirrors are marked or stained rub them over with spirits of camphor applied with a soft piece of linen to remove the marks. Finish off by polishing with a dry duster.

Silver spoons and forks should be put into hot, soapy water with a little ammonia in it. If a pinch of borax is put into the rinsing water an excellent polish can be obtained by rubbing them with a chamois when dry. They will then only need an occasional polishing with silver polish.

VOL. LXXXIV, No. 128 — PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1940 — PAGE 9

MAIN STREET TOPICS

MEMBER IS ILL

Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., arrived home from the session at Ottawa Friday suffering from a very bad cold and today he is confined to bed at his Burleigh Falls home.

A QUIET NIGHT

The police department reports an unusually quiet night. There were few complaints, no arrests, and in spite of the slippery nature of the streets, no accidents. As a consequence there was no police court either.

SKIIERS

The skiiers of the Peterborough district are looking forward to a winter of unbounded generosity, in the matter of snow. Last night, in Victoria Park, members of the Peterborough Ski Club had their first ski school of the year on the snow.

MONEY COMING IN

Inspector J. F. Reid of the Peterborough police department, who is Dominion treasurer of the Canadian Police Spitfire Fund is receiving donations these days from police forces in different sections of the country. In some cities the officers are each donating 50 cents to the fund and the money is being sent on to Inspector Reid.

MONDAY'S SPEAKER

Rotarians at their weekly luncheon Monday are likely to hear something about the Scots on the St. Andrew's anniversary, for the speaker will be John McLaverty, M.A., who in addition to being vice-president and director of personnel of the Consumers Gas Company is also an author and an executive of the St. Andrew's Society.

HIGHWAY SLIPPERY

Highway 28 was decidedly on the slippery side Friday but in spite of the treacherous surface there were no serious accidents. Several trucks slipped off the highway between here and Bewdley, Provincial Traffic Officer L. A. McClure reports, but in all cases there was no one hurt and no damage was done.

"CURLEY" GETS THE NOD

A man bought a ticket at the Centre Theatre the other night, put it in his pocket and handed the attendant at the door $24. That sounds cockeyed, but Jack Gibson says it is true, and you just have to look at him to know that you can take his word for anything he says. "We counted the money," Mr. Gibson added, "then one of the ushers was sent in to ask him for his ticket, and this man said he thought he had given it at the door. He fumbled around in his pockets, produced the ticket and found incidentally that his roll was gone. Of course we had it for him, but can you beat that for being absent-minded?"

BANK CLEARINGS

The bank clearings in Peterborough for the month of November amounted to $2,679,121 while for the same month last year the total was $2,561,557.

FIRST JOB ENDING

Steel men will have their first job at the C.G.E. plant completed by Wednesday, so they say down in that neighborhood. The riveters have pushed forward their rows of pillars and girders without missing a step, taking all kinds of weather of late in their stride, and in the meantime other groups are coming along behind them with the rest of the construction.

USED TOYS

The Peterborough Fire Department is responding to the call by the city's needy; used toys, as in past years, are being repaired by the members of the Department, and are being made ready for distribution at Christmas time. The Firemen have nearly all of their present supply mended, and would ask those having toys to call 5712, and they will be picked up by a member of the department.

TWO CARS DAMAGED

Damage estimated at $65 was done to two cars in an intersection clash at Ware and Lock Streets Friday afternoon. N. S. Fee 74 Ware Street was driving west on Ware Street and making a right turn at Lock Street when his car and an automobile driven south on Lock street by B. Krom, 518 Monaghan Road met in collision. The front right fender, bumper and headlight of Fee's car and the bumper, hood and grill of Krom's automobile were damaged.

A FAMILIAR SON MISSING

Main Street has missed for several months the old man with the stick who has been shuffled at last into the discard of life. In his last appearances he used to go singing along the street, and most people had noticed him. He is now domiciled at Whitby, his cash possession down to something over one hundred dollars, and there is no unkindly thought in reporting that that finance committee of the council agreed the other night to assume any cost of his maintenance after his money runs out. Nothing is gained by using his name in this passing reference to him.

Douglas Claims Malton Output Too Slow

OTTAWA, Nov. 30—(CP).—T. C. Douglas (CCF Weyburn), in the House Thursday, said the war had brought a new sense of the value of the common man, without whose co-operation the war could not be won.

Mr. Douglas claimed the House was entitled to know 'what is wrong' at the Lysander Aircraft Works in Malton, Ont. He quoted reports that more than 900 men, many of them key officials, had quit their jobs in the last year. He said delivery from the plant on war contracts had been slow and he thought members of parliament should be told why.

Mr. McClarty was complimented on his address by Karl Homuth (Con., Waterloo South), who said "an address like that is the sort of information which this House wants from the Ministers who have the responsibility of carrying on our war effort."

Mr. Homuth said jail was too good for some of those who refused to register for national war service. "There can be no neutrality in this country in regard to war," he said. "We are either for the war effort or against it."

Mr. Homuth said he was afraid the Government was endeavoring to operate on a peacetime set-up. He referred to the numerous boards which had been established and declared his doubt that any Cabinet Minister could give the number and duties of all the boards created in Canada since the start of the war.

He said there was no likelihood of Canadians shrinking from any sacrifice necessary to win the war, but they wanted to know where the money was going and if it was being put to the most efficient use

Too Much Centralizing.

Mr. Homuth feared too much money was being put into "bricks and mortar," constructing new factories in order to centralize war industries in Quebec and Ontario.

There were many unused factories throughout the Dominion and use should be made of them. Centralization of industry would mean tremendous expenditures on temporary housing for the workers.

"Some say it does not matter how we spend money because if we lose the war it will be no good anyway," Mr. Homuth said. "Well, we are not going to lose the war."

He said the war effort should be conducted with that in mind. Mr. Homuth ended his address with a plea to the Government to "give members of this House something to do to help win the war." He recalled that members of the House had co-operated readily in carrying out national registration.

"Give us something to do," he urged, "whether it is on the war loan or anything else we can do to help.

"There are no politics now. When the war is over and won we will go back to politics and fight it out, but until then let there be no politics."

Thomas Farquar (Liberal, Algoma East) said the speeches of Opposition members failed to substantiate the charges of Conservative House Leader Hanson in his amendment to the motion on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

If Mr. Hanson was the man he thought Mr. Hanson was, the Conservative Leader would withdraw it.

Sandy Whitney Given Banquet

Members of the staff of the Peterborough Bell Telephone Company turned out almost en masse Friday night, to honor one of the most popular employees. A testimonial dinner was held at the Empress Hotel for Alexander "Sandy" Whitney, for more than forty years with the Bell Telephone, and the dinner was held after "a lifetime of service to the company," and marked his retirement.

Mr. Whitney, or "Sandy," as he is affectionately known, was born in Walkerton, and his first connection with the telephone company was in Owen Sound where he was employed under the foremanship of W. H. Lytle, now also of Peterborough. The guest of honor served in France for four years during the Great War, and was awarded the Military Medal.

The District Plant Superintendent, Joseph H. Brown, presented Mr. Whitney with a life membership in the Telephone Pioneers of America, on behalf of the company, while the Peterborough staff gave him a portable radio.

The evening was under the chairmanship of Ray Morrow.

Refused To Work Now Seek Aid

Relief Officer Metheral has turned away empty-handed three regular "customers" who applied to him this week for food and fuel vouchers.

One of them was a man with six children who refused to work a community garden last summer; wouldn't have anything to do with it and the little work it involved, after years of drawing relief from the city. Another has five children and the same kind of record of being unable to provide for his family and unwilling to take on the responsibility of planting a garden with everything provided except his own labor.

The third man planted a garden, but was leaving ten rows of potatoes in the ground, too lazy, it is said, to dig them some weeks ago. They were given to another man who readily accepted them.

These persons were warned, with the sanction of the provincial authorities, that if they wouldn't work they would not be put back on the relief roll — 11 children in two of the three families.

70,000 Chased Out

VICHY, France, November 30. — (AP)—Marshal Philippe Petain reported in a broadcast today that 70,000 residents of Nazi-occupied Lorraine have arrived in the unoccupied zone of France. Urging that they be received warmly "by their French brothers," he said they lost everything they had, adding: "They accept their unfortunate fate without complaining and without recriminations."

Certificates, Prizes Presented At Campbellford Commencement

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 30. — (ENS). — For two nights in succession High School students entertained large audiences with their presentation of "The Gypsy Rover," a three-act musical which formed the feature attraction of their annual commencement exercises. Traditionally an event in this town—an event which pupils look forward to from the time of school's reopening—when freshman and graduate meet to exchange salutations and the one recalls his first commencement.

A few years ago a shortage of talent compelled the school to revert to straight plays, but now a comparative wealth of pupils who can sing plus an amount of acting ability, combined with very capable direction, made this year's commencement one that will hold its place in the annals of the school.

Proof that pupils are becoming more musically minded lay in the fact the largest cast ever assembled for the annual affair took part. The entire cast included thirteen principals: Patricia Ironside as Meg; Fay Kelly, Zar; Jack Bell, Marto; Jack Davy, Sinfo; Ross Richardson, Rob; June Burgiss, Lady Constance; Phillip MacDonald, Lord Craven; Walter Greenshields, Sir George Martendale; Loretto Forestell, Nina; William Watson, Captain Jerome; Jack Thompson, Sir Toby Lyon; Donald Thompson, McCorkle; Glenn Maxwell, Lackey, and seven individual choruses which reflected great credit on those responsible for their training.

With a musical background of two pianos at which Jack Cassan and Arnold Bates presided, the entire action took place amid a typical forest scene with campfire, and wagons long associated with gypsies. The limited size of the stage forced some sacrifice in the number of props used, but this was more than compensated for by the quality and volume of singing provided by the larger choruses they permitted and by the additional space they allowed for dance routines enhanced by clever costuming.

Something just a little different was provided by one chorus, the Robbers, who, dressed in green and yellow, did a rhythmic dance in which the movement of arms and body kept time with music to add a mystic touch to the softly lighted stage. The costumes of gypsy girls and boys blended in a kaleidoscope of color, the former wearing bright waists with boleros and full skirts and the latter with colored knee-length trousers, vari-colored sashes about the waist and tight silk bandanas on their heads.

The chorus of Dames and Squires went back in history for their costumes complete with white wigs and floor-length gowns for the girls.

Well chosen for their singing were June Burgiss and Ross Richardson, both of whom gave an exceptionally good performance.

Following were those taking part in the various choruses.—Gypsy Girls: E. Armour, C. Archer, D. Beatty, H. Beatty, P. Cassan, M. Kerr, M. Lamey, C. Marsden, M. Mills, M. McCann, J. McAvella, J. Parties Settle Anker Will Case

Terms of the settlement of the Mrs. Margaret Anker will case in the Surrogate Court of Peterborough county before Judge D. B. Coleman of Whitby Friday afternoon were not made public. It was mentioned as a confidential settlement.

"I am glad to hear that you have come to an agreement," His Honor said. "I think that it is essentially a case in which there should be a compromise in the circumstances between the parties."

It was stated that the second will of Mrs. Anker was declared a valid will and would be entered for probate. Judge Coleman assessed costs against the estate. The settlement relates to an agreement by which, it is understood, two nieces of Mrs. Anker, Miss Etta Hill and Mrs. Vera O'Connor, are to share in the residue of the estate.

Captain Cleared

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Captain John T. Prout, Jr., New York National Guardsman, was acquitted early today by a court martial of charges of giving away government ammunition.

With Private Alfred J. Quinlan, Prout was accused of taking 1,800 rounds of ammunition from the 166th infantry—the old "Fighting 69th"—as a result of the so-called "Christian Front" trial in Brooklyn. Quinlan will be tried later.

Committee Of Board Of Education Discusses Incident Between Teacher And Pupil

"The matter will be considered further," was the announcement made to the press Friday night by Chairman D. G. H. Melton of the Board of Education after the supervision committee had discussed for several hours in camera the incident at the Queen Mary School in which a young boy sustained a fracture of the leg as the result, the lad says, of being pushed down by a teacher.

Dr. A. Moir, chairman of the committee, had had an emergency call just before the hour of the meeting and Chairman Melton was voted into the chair when the committee met, with Mrs. W. A. Morris, Dr. C. M. Scott and T. J. Carley, K.C., as the other members present. Inspector K. S. Wightman was also present.

"The press is here," said Mr. Melton after the meeting had been called to order. "While we welcome the press at our ordinary meetings, this is one of those occasions at which I think you will agree that it would be advisable not to have the press present." Other members of the committee took the same attitude and the one newspaperman in attendance withdrew.

Afterward, the brief announcement that appears at the beginning of this story was given out by Chairman Melton who supplied the additional information that the incident at the school had been discussed at length.

Rambling Reporter

IT WASN'T IN VAIN

This week, in this column, there appeared a story about a police dog. The dog had been seen running down Stewart street, with a full sized garbage pail, and it is now possible to complete the story; there was more to it than was at first apparent.

The dog had come across the garbage can, and on the inside of it there was a dead rabbit. The rabbit had become frozen to the side of the can, and try as he would, the dog could not remove it. He did the next best thing—took rabbit, can, and all.—J.W.H.

Few Streets Are 66 Feet Wide

"There are probably not six streets in Peterborough that are 66 feet wide from end to end." City Engineer Parsons told the Board of Works the other night.

They were talking about property encroachments, projections over the street line, public and private buildings, stores, houses and so on.

"Just go over here to the corner and you find the Customs House four feet into the street where it should not be; and your own building (town clock corner) is 2½ feet out," Mr. Parsons said.

In recent reconstruction, the C.D.S., Loblaws and A. & P. new stores were set back to the street lines, but further on to the west at Louis and Charlotte streets, several old buildings are substantial trespassers.

Alderman Bradburn suggested that if there are any more property replacements that new buildings be pushed back at least to the street line.

"But, suppose it was a store and it was set back five or six feet from the line of the other stores, you'd have a funny-looking street," was one comment.

Alderman McIntyre said that applications for new buildings would have to be made to City Engineer Parsons in any case and "they'll have to use common sense."

And so that little problem, like the sleeping dog, is not going to be disturbed from the present.

Dr. Kirkconnell Unfolds Tales Of West

Everybody loves a good yarn, but not everybody has the opportunity of hearing a well-known author and English Professor tell his own stories in a highly entertaining manner that is pure delight from beginning to end. Picking verses at random from his book, "The Flying Bull and Other 'tales", 17 rousing stories in lively verse that come off the press next week, Watson Kirkconnell entertained members of the Women Teachers' Guild Friday night, amazing them with his utterly "unacademic" style, as well as his legendary knowledge of the Canadian west, which first gave the tales their birth.

It was due to the urgings of such English celebrities as John Drinkwater that Professor Kirkconnell's new book comes straight out of the heart of a Canadian background, he admitted last night, and then proceeded his "yarning" in verse of tales of satire, parody, mystery and horror, with an occasional love story tossed in for a light and humorous note. From the tale of "The Flying Bull" to the story of "The Latter Day Job", the last told by a salesman whose words were "supercharged with slang", the stories were North American to the backbone in their humor, "tallness" and salty wit.

The speaker was introduced by F. S. A. Morris of this city, who knew Dr. Kirkconnell, Watson Kirkconnell's father, when he was principal of the Lindsay Collegiate. Watson Kirkconnell is Professor of English in McMaster University, and prior to this appointment was a member of the faculty of United College, Winnipeg. He has been honoured by election to membership in a score of learned societies in seven countries, and is without a rival in Canada as a linguist.

Miss Eva Elliott, president of the Guild, presided, and the speaker was thanked by Miss A. A. Howson. A group of two songs by the Norwegian composer, Grieg, "Princess" and "Good-Morning" were sung by Miss Olga Westbye, with Gwen Craw at the piano.

Pick Up Popular Dances in a Few Home Lessons

Sophisticated Rumba Is Easy

"Why I CAN rumba!" exclaims the young man who thought the rumba was as far out of his class as a ballet solo.

Yes, the rumba, the Conga — all the exciting new steps — are no problem at all when you have diagrams showing just how and where to place your feet. Try the Rumba Hesitation shown here.

Count 1—Move left foot a few inches to the side, keeping it flat on the floor with almost no weight on it; hips sway left. AND—Sway hips right. 2—Short step forward on left foot; hips sway left. 3—Move right foot a few inches to the side with almost no weight, hips sway right. AND—Sway hips left. 4—Short step forward on right foot.

For that expert "cafe society" look, you and your partner should stand slightly apart. As you sway hips to one side, allow the leg on the opposite side to relax, bending the knee slightly.

Make a hit, too, with the other popular steps in our 32-page booklet. Gives diagrams and directions for the rumba, tango, Samba, waltz, Conga, fox-trot, Westchester and shag; also the Peabody and Lindy Hop. Includes basic steps, variations; tells how to lead and follow, combine steps.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO DO THE NEWEST DANCE STEPS AND VARIATIONS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE LONE HONOR FIRST

KNOWING part of the rules for sound play can cost you tricks just the same as knowing none of them can. The important thing is to know the reason for a rule, or else to depend on plain everyday common sense. The trouble about the latter is that it wastes time at the table. If it is abetted by specific knowledge of certain card combinations, you have more time left for deeper thinking while the fellow without that knowledge has to finish his thinking where yours begins.

After ruffing the third heart lead, South laid down his trump ace, and was beaten forthwith. There was no way on earth to keep East from taking the setting trick in diamonds, once, South had made that single mistake.

Quoting the book, South bemoaned the fact that he had played the suit correctly by taking the first trump trick in the hand which possessed two honors. That is really not the rule in any good book. What it actually says is that you do that when you are in position to finesse against a disadvantageous holding in the hand of either opponent. If your suit is so distributed that you can guard yourself against only one defender having a bunch of trumps, then you take the first trick in the hand which leaves you protection against him.

In this case, South was able to guard against four trumps by East, but not against four by West, so he should have taken the first trump trick in dummy, especially since the bidding showed West with length in two other suits and hence probable shortness in trumps.

LINDSAY

Driver Burned Lighting Match At Tank

LINDSAY, Nov. 30 (ENS) — A serious motor accident occurred at Haliburton on Thursday morning, when a car driven by Mr. J. Bolander, of the White Star Mines, Eagle Lake, and a truck owned by the Bailey Lumber Company came together. The car had just rounded a bend in the highway on its way to the mines when it came upon the truck.

The Bolander car, a new one, was badly wrecked, and the truck sustained considerable damage. Mr. Sam Pasquino, an occupant of the Bolander car, received severe cuts and body bruises and his nose was also broken. He was taken from the wreckage and removed to the Red Cross Hospital.

Home Is Burned

On Thursday the residence of Mrs. William McDonald, of Haliburton village, was totally destroyed by fire. Mrs. McDonald was away from home at the time and left a fire in the kitchen. She was only gone a short time when flames burst from the structure. Villagers attempted to enter the home, but the doors were locked. None of the contents were saved. There was some insurance on the house. Mr. McDonald is a member of the Midland Battalion, and is stationed at Lindsay.

Burned in Gas Blast

Mr. M. Cowan, of Haliburton, was a victim of a serious accident south of the village on Thursday. He lit a match in order to see how much gas his car contained and in an instant he was a mass of flames, and his head, face and arms were badly burned. He had the presence of mind to bury his face and head in the snow. His hair was burned off completely and he was removed to the Red Cross Hospital.

Lad Cleared in Shooting

The story of the fatal shooting of Alfred Wiggins, 70, resident of Stanhope township, Haliburton County, in mistake for a deer by a sixteen year old boy, Robert Packard, of the same township, in the bush near Maple Lake on November 13, was unfolded at the inquest held in Lindsay on Thursday night. Packard, with a number of his companions, had started out on a deer hunt in the bush, and while he was on a knoll he discovered a movement in the bush. His view was obscured, but he faintly distinguished what he thought was a brown patch and discharged his rifle in that direction. Wiggins was taken to the Ross Hospital where he died from a shot in the abdomen.

The jury simply stated that Wiggins came to his death as a result of a wound received from a gun fired by Packard, who had fired at what he supposed had been a deer. Constable Pritchard, of Geederham, in his evidence, stated that boys ten years of age had secured deer licenses in Haliburton County.

goods might be substantially eased, to facilitate Britain's payment for war purchases in Canada and to allow more concentration on war production in Canada. On the other side, it was believed that restriction of imports of certain non-essentials from the United States was probable, now or nearly in the New Year, to aid Canada's exchange relationship with the United States.

The matter came before the Commons yesterday when the Prime Minister moved suspension on Monday of the throne speech debate, which has been running three weeks, to deal with "a resolution or two" by Finance Minister Ilsley.

Responding to a request from Conservative Leader Hanson for some indication of the nature of the resolutions, Mr. King suggested that after the resolutions were introduced, giving a general idea of the content of the measures to come, the debate might be resumed to give members time to study the resolutions.

Four speakers engaged in the debate yesterday. The government's administration of the Defence of Canada regulations came under sharp criticism from E. G. Hansell (ND MacLeod) who claimed it tended to instil fear in a free people.

The Fear of Dictatorships

"I believe there is a fear which characterizes people in Canada today," he said, "the fear lest in talking about politics, talking concerning what the government is doing or not doing, they may turn around and find themselves face to face with a row of brass buttons. That sense of fear is characteristic of a dictatorship; it is the very antithesis of democracy."

Mr. Hansell submitted that the government's "hush-hush" policy regarding the war program was responsible for the listlessness and lack of enthusiasm which had marked the debate. That policy was having an effect on the public, too. It appeared that the rights of a democratic people ended with the ballot box.

Two Ottawa valley members, R. W. Warren (Lib. Renfrew north) and Russell Boucher (Con. Carleton), discussed the present lot of the Canadian farmer. There was no great discontent among eastern Ontario farmers regarding prices, Mr. Warren argued, "because they feel that they are working in a world cause and they are satisfied if they can get along, provided that there is equality of sacrifice among all classes of people."

Mr. Boucher, in his maiden speech, held that the farmer, "more than anyone else, is shouldering the responsibility for our war effort," with valor and loyalty which merit the praise and admiration of the House.

He urged the distribution of a greater share of war contracts to smaller industries, instead of concentrating them in large industries.

With R. W. Gladstone (Lib. Wellington South) he contended that the government should make more use of the ability of the members of parliament, who were anxious to do everything possible in the war effort.

Mr. Gladstone said he would speak on "the supremacy of parliament," but he at once ran into a snag provided by Parliamentary rules.

On the long list of resolutions by private members, now on the order paper, is one by Mr. Gladstone asking the government to give consideration to "the matter of continuous participation by additional members of parliament in the responsibility of directing our war effort and of planning on after the war program for Canada."

Although he realized this motion might not be debated until next year, Mr. Gladstone said he would lay the groundwork for the debate when it does come.

This brought an interruption from Prime Minister Mackenzie King who suggested there was nothing in the rules of Parliament permitting debate of a private motion except at the time it was being moved. Mr. King said he had no wish to restrict discussion but feared a precedent might be established.

Conservative House Leader Hanson said the point was well taken. "Rules are rules," he said. Mr. Gladstone then proceeded with other sections of his speech.

Millbrook Club Organizes For Cribbage

MILLBROOK, Nov. 30 (ENS)—Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Campbell were host and hostess to the gentlemen members of the Millbrook Bowling Club for dinner at 6.30 on Thursday evening, at their home, King street centre, the event marking a birthday anniversary of Mr. Campbell's, and also having in view the possible organization of a cribbage club to be carried on by the guests throughout the winter months.

Grace was said by Rev. A. L. Sisco before the guests sat down to the daintily-laid tables arranged in the large living-rooms of the hospitable homestead, and assisting the hostess in the service of the dinner were Mrs. R. A. Ford, Mrs. Edmund Ball, and Miss Jean Fraser.

A pleasant surprise was prepared for the host and hostess at the conclusion of the meal, when ex-warden Percy Stinson made an informal address, and on behalf of those present, Councillor J. R. Eakins, the dean of the club, presented Mrs. Campbell with a large box of chocolates and Mr. Campbell with a solid leather utility case, with zipper fastening, and containing shaving essentials.

The recipients of the gifts acknowledged them gracefully, and cards were played at the various tables, many learning the 'inner mysteries' of cribbage for the first time.

The invitation of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Ford to have the club meet at their home on Friday evening of next week was accepted with thanks, and apparently the cribbage players are off to a good start for meeting regularly one night a week for enjoyment of the game while the winter lasts.

Among the guests on Thursday evening were: Rev. A. L. Sisco, Messrs. D. K. Chiles, T. H. Collins, H. D. Bigelow, J. R. Eakins, A. H. Jeffrey, W. E. Ball, Douglas Sheppard, C. B. Sutton, R. I. Fallis, Walter Barringer, P. Stinson, H. A. Kerr, R. A. Ford, Dr. M. E. Hobbs, Dr. J. W. Wright, and Adjutant W. R. Howard.

Winners of 'lucky chair' prizes were C. B. Sutton, Percy Stinson, H. D. Bigelow, and T. H. Collins.

Havelock's Choir Honors Mrs. Herb Davies

HAVELOCK, Nov. 30 — (ENS).—The members of St. John's Anglican Church met in the vestry after choir practice on Friday evening to say farewell to one of their members, Mrs. Herbert Davies, who with her family leaves for Toronto this week Mr. and Mrs. Davies have resided in Havelock for the past 24 years, during which time they have made many friends.

Mrs. Davies has been a faithful worker in the church, being a member of the Women's Auxiliary, the Parish Guild, and the choir, and also teaching a class in the Sunday School.

Rev. Mr. Lemon spoke on behalf of the congregation of the splendid work Mrs. Davies had done in all organizations, and was very pleased to know that Mrs. Davies would be attending the church in West Toronto where he spent some years as curate.

The presentation of a beautiful walnut table was made to Mrs. Davies and a lovely lace centrepiece for same.

Although completely surprised and with a feeling of sadness at leaving Mrs. Davies thanked all for the gift and expressed appreciation for the kind thoughts of her friends. She spoke of her family of five girls and one boy, all being born in Havelock, and baptized in St. John's Church.

Mrs. H. W. Roche spoke a few words on behalf of the Parish Guild, Mrs. (Dr.) Joseph Holdcroft on behalf of the Women's Auxiliary and Sunday school, and H. W. Roche expressed the feeling of the choir.

Rev. Mr. Lemon announced that Sunday morning would be Communion service, and invited all to come out and partake of the Lord's Supper and to say farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Davies and family.

Keith Pollock of town was called by the R.C.A.F. recruiting centre, Toronto, last week, leaving for Brandon, Manitoba, on Saturday, November 23, where he was to report for training the following Monday morning. Keith's many friends wish him the best of luck. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pollock and was a pupil in the Havelock High School.

A number of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Charles Taylor on Wednesday evening of this week and presented Mrs. H. Davies with a card table prior to her removal to Toronto.

Miss Ruth Hagerman is visiting with friends in Toronto this week.

Mrs. Annie Anderson left on Monday to spend a couple of weeks with friends in Toronto.

Mrs. Keith Chiles and baby daughter of Millbrook are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hill.

Mr. Harding spoke on Reconstruction. There were 24 members and 4 visitors present. The president, Mrs. J. F. Baker, presided. The roll call was, 'How we each can help to win the war.'

It was moved by Mrs. A. Burkitt, seconded by Mrs. Jason Baker, that the W.I. apply for the government grant.

A letter of appreciation from the Rawdon Red Cross was read, thanking the branch for their wonderful co-operation and help. Funds were paid into the Red Cross to pack Christmas boxes for thirteen soldiers overseas.

Reports of the group followed. It was decided that baskets would be packed as usual for needy families at Christmas.

It was moved by Mrs. Walter Heath, seconded by Mrs. Fred McKeown, that the W.I. donate one bolt of flannelette and one-half bolt of eiderdown to the Red Cross.

A demonstration dinner will be held at the home of Mrs. J. F. Baker on December 10. A fee of fifteen cents will be charged.

Mrs. Florence Bateman, convener for reconstruction, took the chair for the remainder of the meeting.

(At Ruse, Bulgaria, on the Rumanian frontier not far from Bucharest, artillery fire could be heard across the Danube River and travelers from the Rumanian border village of Giurgiu reported the Antonescu government was using heavy guns to crush the guard rebellion.

(These travelers said "at least 100" persons had been assassinated in Bucharest and that reports were current there that as many more had been slain in the provinces. Widespread anti-semitic activity was reported.

(The police chief at Giurgiu, reached by telephone from Bucharest, said he had heard no explosions of artillery. The government set the total dead in Bucharest at 67 and denied the reports of street fighting in provincial cities.)

Asks Maniu to Aid.

One sharply-censored despatch reaching Budapest from Bucharest said Antonescu had sought the aid of Juliu Mantu, peasant leader, and army corps commanders.

"The bodies of seven Jews were found to-day along a railway track between Bucharest and Ploesti," the despatch said. "How they met death is reported to be a 'mystery.'"

Anti-Jewish violence was reported at Galatz and Braila and Guardists were said to be in control of the latter city.

The disorders began on Wednesday when the remains of Codreanu and his 13 comrades, hailed as "martyrs" by the Iron Guard, were disinterred from Jilava prison yard and 64 members of the old regime slain in vengeance at the grave.

(Codreanu, 89-year-old chieftain of the Iron Guard, was sent to Jilava Prison on May 28, 1938, for treason.)

The Iron Guard, now led by Vice-Premier Horia Sima, had a long struggle for existence. It was banned repeated. Many of its leaders and members were jailed and slain. At best, it was authoritatively estimated to have had 50,000 members, but many more Rumanians were sympathizers. The most votes the party ever polled was 478,378—in 1937—or 15.58 per cent. of the total.

However, it said, neither casualties nor damage were heavy.

They Were Mistaken.

Some British sources attributed the severity of the raid on London to a German hope that the capital's anti-aircraft defences had been weakened to rush guns to hard-pressed cities in the Midlands and northwest.

If the Nazis entertained such thoughts they must have been unpleasantly surprised by the curtain of steel that greeted them, these sources added.

Abandoning formation flying, the raiders approached London from various directions and dropped flares, flame bombs and high explosive bombs.

A suburban shopping centre, hospital, and movie theatre were among structures hit by bombs. In one London district German planes roared over at the rate of two a minute.

A mother and her two children were killed when six bombs demolished a housing development in a southeast coastal town. Six were known dead and others injured in a district near London.

Daylight raiders smashed again at London during a one-hour forenoon alarm and dropped a bomb which damaged two buildings in a residential district.

Women Seek To Gain Control Of Council In Sommerville

LINDSAY, Nov. 30—(ENS). — A municipal mix-up faces the electors of the Township of Sommerville, Victoria county. On Friday last the nominations were held at Burnt River and the pot simmered to the boiling point and the councillors were bombarded with questions fired at them by women voters. They were confronted with the scandal of 1939 when, following the investigations of Ed. Humpage, Peterboro auditor, the township found itself short in tax collections to the tune of about $6,000. The investigation disclosed that the township had never had an audit of the collector's books, and that two or three officials had been receiving tax payments. The township tax collector was arrested and sentenced to eighteen months in jail. At the nomination meeting all the members of the 1939 council were re-nominated. Ex-Reeve Joseph Handley, who is also an ex-warden of the county, and Mrs. (Dr.) Millyard, of Coboconk, also entered the contest for reeve. The latter was backed by two women, Mrs. Clara Shonesberg and Mrs Anna Halliday, both being nominated for the council. At six o'clock in the evening, Clerk Hodgson notified Mr. Handley that his qualification had not been properly filled out. Two electors had filled out the nomination form and had left the office blank. The clerk accordingly had left his name off the ballot which had been handed to the printer. Mr. Handley intimated that the name of the office may have been wiped out. He sought legal advice and announced that he would stay in the race. His solicitor stated that when the office was not mentioned on the nomination blank it left the matter open and he could declare himself for any office he wished to stand for.

Mrs. Millyard, who is contesting the reeveship, said things were badly mixed and it had received bad publicity. She said she was going out to win the election and was not ashamed to ask the people for their support.

DECISION LIKELY DURING RALSTON, CRERAR TRIP TO ENGLAND—NAVY WINS, GREEKS CHANGE CANADIAN OFFICERS' VIEWS—PUSH FROM U.K. ONLY ROAD TO VICTORY

LONDON, Dec. 2—(CP Cable). — The Canadians may be thrown into Britain's increasingly important campaign in the Near East.

They are rated among the hardest striking formations in the Allies' growing army and many strategists believe power should be concentrated in the Mediterranean sector in an effort to beat Mussolini to his knees.

Nothing has been decided one way or the other but it is learned that a final decision regarding the disposition of the Canadians may be expected as a result of the visit of Hon. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Minister of National Defence, and Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, chief of the Canadian general staff, to the United Kingdom at the conclusion of their present visit.

The Minister and the chief of staff will have opportunity for all-embracing conversations with Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, corps commander, the commanders of the 1st and 2nd Canadian Divisions, and British military and government leaders.

It is understood that for a time high Canadian officers opposed the idea of moving the Canucks to the Mediterranean from the British home front. They were said to have reasoned the war would be won or

200 Bombers Batter Southampton

Thousands Homeless Wide Areas In Town Are In Ruins

SOUTHAMPTON, Dec. 2—(CP). —Some 200 German aircraft, coming over single and in small waves, pounded this south coast shipping centre last night.

Thousands are homeless as a result of the raid, in which the German bombers continued their mission of frightfulness until early morning.

Damage was considerable and areas of the town are in ruins.

The business section of Southampton was the main target on Saturday night, but the suburbs also were attacked and many homes were demolished.

Emergency measures were taken to minimize the disclocation of normal services and supplies of food and temporary accommodation were provided for the homeless.

Offices in Ruins

Hundreds of workers arrived at their offices and stores today to find them in ruins.

Casualties were unofficially reported to be fewer than on Saturday. Those taking shelter in one underground refuge felt the heat of the flames when a nearby hall caught fire, but they remained unscathed.

Hundreds of soldiers wrested with a big demolition job in the centre of the city and some streets were not passable. The biggest problem was the feeding and redistribution of the homeless.

At nightfall the raiders spread out over the island, striking mainly at the south coast, but a Midland town, a southwest town and the important port of Liverpool on the west coast also reported activity

Gallant Men Of Jervis Bay Honored In Mid-Atlantic

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Dec. 2—(CP).—A service in memory of the gallant Jervis Bay, and her captain and crew, was held at the approximate spot in the Atlantic where the British armed merchant cruiser made her suicide stand.

A naval man revealed during the week-end that on Sunday, November 24, a British war vessel was in the vicinity of the scene of the desperate battle.

Assembled on the afterdeck, nearly 200 men raised their voices in the prayer, beginning "Almighty God, Who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth and of them that are far off upon the sea . . ." The hymns sung were "Eternal Father, strong to save" and "O God our help in ages past."

When the vessel reached the position where the Jervis Bay opened fire, engines were reduced to half speed, the ensign was lowered to half mast and a cross of poppies splashed into the sea. Bugles sounded the Last Post and Reveille and three volleys for the dead were fired.

German Air Ace Downed, Drowns

BERLIN, Dec. 2 (AP) — Bursts from the guns of a British fighter plane ended the career of Maj. Helmuth Wick, 25-year-old German air ace, Nazi quarters said today.

They reported that Wick bailed out and descended to the water off the Isle of Wight and that rescue attempts proved unsuccessful.

Wick's group was said to have been engaged in a fierce dogfight with British Spitfires and Hurricanes at the time.

Wick, promoted to command of the Richthofen squadron Oct. 25, was decorated by Hitler Oct. 9 with oak leaves added to the Iron Cross.

Fear Four Killed In Powder Blast

TACOMA, Wash., Dec. 2 (AP) — Four men were believed killed or seriously injured early today when the mixing plant at the Columbia Powder Company, 15 miles south of here, exploded and was blown to bits, Undersheriff Clyde Knowles reported.

Company officials refused to discuss the blast but Undersheriff Clyde Knowles said the coroner had been sent to the blast scene after the company revealed that four men were working in the building.

The blast destroyed but one building, the mixing plant, which was isolated from offices and storage structures.

The explosion occurred shortly after the men went to work.

Identity of the men in the building was not disclosed.

"The company is withholding their names pending arrival of the coroner and a more complete identification by company officials," Knowles said.

It could not be determined immediately whether the company was engaged on national defence contracts.

It was the second powder works blast in the Tacoma area in a week.

Rome Reinforcements Fail To Save Day In 2 Key Sectors

ATHENS, Dec. 2 (AP)—Capture of 5,000 Italians, the largest mass of prisoners yet taken by the Greek army, was announced today from the northern front.

Their surrender, dispatches said, was the signal for a general retreat of other Italian forces in the area, leaving a huge gap in the Fascist centre.

Fresh Italian troops sent up to bolster sagging defence lines earlier had been reported being smashed back with the regiments they came to reinforce and the Greeks claimed "important" new advances all along the Albanian battlefront.

Mention of the exact place where the front was reported smashed was forbidden by military authorities. They permitted mention merely that it was in the north.

One frontline report said "the victory, without exaggeration, is of exceptional importance, for the enemy line in this sector has been destroyed and all danger eliminated for us."

The capture of the Italians, this report said, came after the Fascist commander sent a message to the Greek line that he was ready to surrender. The Greeks, fearing a trap, cautiously surounded the Italians with heavy detachments.

The psychological effect of the surrender was such that it broke enemy resistance in the area and led to a hasty precipitous retreat," it said.

"One after another of the Italian columns abandoned their positions, leaving behind all sorts of equipment in large quantities.

"Seventeen captured Italian officers disclosed that Elite Italian legions which had fought in Spain's Civil War had taken part in defence of this area and were retreating in disorder."

Subs, Planes, Cruiser Strike Off Ireland—5 Ships Hit, 5 Others Send Calls For Help

Distress Calls Come From All Quarters Of Area 130 Miles Wide By 240 Long In Greatest Shipping Raid Of War

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—(AP).—Undersea and aircraft raiders were believed to have attacked a convoy of British vessels about 400 miles west of Ireland last night and early today. Apparently 10 vessels were attacked.

Repeated distress signals picked up here by Mackay radio indicated the raiders were following the vessels in an eastward zig-zag chase which lasted for more than five hours.

Full details were lacking, but radio listeners heard distress calls from at least five vessels early today in addition to five others previously reported, all from the same general vicinity.

The chase was indicated as covering a course of about 250 miles, which led to the belief in marine circles that the attacking vessels included a German auxiliary cruiser.

Several of the stricken vessels reported submarine attacks and others said they were being bombed by aircraft. There was no indication of the number of raiders.

Marine circles said submarines cannot cover 250 miles in five hours —the indicated length of the attack —and concluded the raiders were numerous.

Head For Irish Coast.

The calls for help did not say in which direction the convoy was bound. There were some indications, from the positions messaged by the ships, that they were attempting to reach the Irish coast.

The positions given by the vessels covered a rough rectangle running eastward from the position of the first attack, a rectangle about 240 nautical miles long and perhaps 120 miles wide.

The first news of the attack was picked up from the S. S. Glanely, 5,497 ton British steamship about 4:15 a.m. E.D.T. She was among at least three British vessels which first reported trouble.

One Yugoslav ship, the 1,973-ton Cetvrti, reported she was attacked by aircraft.

The 12,247-ton Victor Ross, owned by the British Mexican Petroleum Company, radioed that a submarine had torpedoed her about 400 miles west of Dublin. The 4,958-ton British steamship Loch Ranza reported she was torpedoed and was sinking about 400 miles west of Northern Ireland. She reported she had the shipwrecked crew of another vessel aboard.

The 276-ton British trawler Kilgerran Castle radioed she was being bombed by aircraft 25 miles southwest of Kinsalehead, Ireland.

An unidentified vessel, possibly one which previously reported herself in distress, signalled she was in trouble about 450 miles west of the north Irish coast.

The first call came at 11.15 p.m. (EDT) last night, when the Portishead radio station said the 5,497-ton British steamship Lady Glanely had been torpedoed at 55 north and 20 west.

At 12.53 a.m. today the Valencia radio station said a British ship giving the call letters G-K-I-P was being attacked at 55.03 north and 18.40 west. This ship could not be identified otherwise.

At 1.45 a.m. the 5,448-ton British freighter Goodleigh radioed she had been torpedoed at 55.02 north and 18.45 west.

The air lanes were quiet until 3.55 a.m., when Mackay intercepted another call from a vessel apparently giving her name as "S.S. Victoria" and reporting she had been torpedoed at 56.04 north, 16.30 west. Mackay said it was not certain that the name given was "S.S. Victoria."

Lloyd's register lists eight Victorias with the following registry:

Hostility Grows Against U.S. Loan To China

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 — (AP). —The first evidence appeared today of Congressional hostility to the proposal for granting the Chungking Chinese Government a $50,000,000 loan from the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund to aid that nation in its stand against Japan.

Senator Alva Adams (Dem.-Colorado) told reporters that if the proposal was as represented, he would oppose it on the ground that the stabilization fund was not the proper source to supply the money.

This loan would be in addition to $50,000,0000 in credits to be advanced by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's export-import bank. Plans for the $100,000,000 "helping hand" to Chungking were announced during the week-end, giving pointed new emphasis to the administration's policy regarding Japnese activities in China.

Informed legislators said that Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau probably would outline the China loan proposal when he appeared to-day before a closed session of the Senate Banking Committee to discuss operation of the stabilization fund.

Chinese requests for loans were said to have been based on the contention that Chiang Kai-Shek's Government could not keep its army of 2,500,000 in the field against the Japanese much longer unless it had financial aid. The understanding of some legislators was that if the loan should be granted, it would be used not only to bolster sagging Chinese currency, but to meet current government expenses.

Senator James Byrnes (Dem.-South Carolina), another member of the Banking Committee, said he would not be adverse to giving financial assistance to China.

The French Fleet

Key To Weygand—He Needs It To Revolt

LONDON, Dec. 2—(CP).—The French fleet, which the British Navy battered into temporary eclipse at Oran July 4, may now hold the key to the Mediterranean problem of whether Gen. Maxime Weygand may one day swing French North Africa back to the Allied cause.

He is chief of French military and political affairs in Africa.

"Weygand might revolt," explained a spokesman at headquarters of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French forces here, "but French warships could bombard Algiers, Oran, Tunis and Moroccan ports, forcing him to submission. So the real power lies with Admiral Darlan (Jean Darlan, French Navy Minister). We need to be sure the French fleet would not act for Vichy."

Reports reaching London tell of Growing pro-British sentiment in those parts of the French Empire which have not capitulated to the Free French forces and close attention is being paid to Weygand's tours of Algeria and Morocco, where he has been addressing officers, reviewing troops and receiving Arab chieftains in audience.

Gen. Weygand himself has said nothing to encourage British hopes that he may come out as a rebel, and officialdom handles the question with kid gloves, for obvious reasons. The only official utterance came from the war office, which has repeatedly denied that Anthony Eden, Secretary for War, met Weygand on his recent visit to Egypt.

Gen. Weygand is regarded by some observers here as a man who made a mistake at the time of the French armistice with Germany and now does not know quite how to climb around it.

They believe it is possible that the general, who was commander in chief of the French armies when

Take War to Axis Via Greece?

Experts Think U.K. To Beat Axis To Punch, Carry Fight Inland

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

CAIRO, Dec. 2—(AP).—Increased British operations in the Grecian war sector were predicted today by observers in Egypt who expressed the belief Britain's armies would carry the fight to the Axis in Southeastern Europe.

These observers said they believed Hitler would have to go to Mussolini's aid within the next week or two if Italian reinforcements pouring into Albania failed to turn the tide of battle with the Greeks and regain prestige the Italians lost when their attempted invasion of Greece backfired.

(The Rome radio said in a broadcast last Friday that reinforcements sent to Albania had been given the job of beating back the Greeks "without German aid.")

While whatever plans Britain may have for moving more forces into Greece are kept secret, it was regarded as certain that any move by the Axis would bring a counter move by the British and that certain advance moves in anticipation of Axis action also were likely.

Opinion here seemed to be that—even in case Germany joins the Italian battle with Greece—the British command believed it would be better to meet German troops on the mainland than to permit them to break through to Mediterranean bases.

The feeling in the British Middle East was that since the Axis has not brought the fight to dislodge British troops from the Suez Canala, Britain must carry the fight to the Axis.

When the Italians first struck at Greece there was considerable caution on the part of British authorities lest the Axis might be trying to ensnare British Near East forces while preparing a major drive elsewhere. Too, even many Greek officers expressed doubts that the Greeks could hold the mainland long.

One Nazi Hope—Keep U.S. Out Till U.K. Beaten

LONDON, Dec. 2.— (CP) — The Evening Standard, published by Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production, urged "the people of the United States" today to consider giving Britain credits and "further help" in the Atlantic.

The paper asked the recruiting of unused resources of the automobile industry for aircraft manufacture and for "specific measures of assistance in the operation of our blockade." Victory, it said, depends on the "battle for America."

It said the "dominating fact of this war" was that "Hitler's only hope of victory resides in his power to hold America out of the ring when he gets us in a corner and

Argentine Exports Suspected

U.K. Pulls Net—See Goods To Spain, Russia, Sweden For Axis

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 2 (AP) — A survey of Argentine commercial and agricultural sources indicated today that Britain quietly is tightening her restrictions on ocean trade in an effort to keep vital supplies from reaching her axis foes through nations not in the war.

Well-informed sources said British economic experts were watching closely shipments of cotton, meats, fats and hides, and were checking on purchases in Argentina for Spain, Russia, Sweden, Finland and conquered France.

These sources said Britain already had killed a plan to sell 100,000 tons of Argentine cotton to Spain by declaring that navicerts for such a shipment would not be available.

The navicerts are certificates of British advance approval of cargo in ships heading through the British naval blockade.

Three months ago navicerts were granted for shipments of 50,000 tons of cotton to Spain and sources close to the cotton trade said they understood Britain approved the first shipments as normal Spanish imports but turned thumbs down on the later 100,000 tons as beyond Spain's present needs.

Negotiations were started recently to purchase Argentine meats and fats for shipment to France, but again indication that Britain would not approve, regardless of what boats were used, was said to have spilled the deal.

Heavy Russian purchases of hides and fats also have attracted the attention of British authorities. So far there have been no actual restrictions placed in the form of refusing navicerts but exporters concerned with such shipments to Russia have been given hints that "it would be unwise for you fellows to invest too much money in that business."

Swedish and Finnish buyers have been especially active in Argentine markets recently and the British were reported to be watching these

AN EAST CANADIAN PORT, Dec. 2.—(CP).—After months of dodging bombs and shell splinters in England I have returned to my native Canada unharmed, a trifle poorer materially, but a confirmed believer in fatalism.

In fact I owe my life several times to that strange something people variously call providence, fate, luck, or a guardian angel.

Ever since Hitler unleashed his attempted aerial knockout blow against Britain, I have secretly harbored the belief that this war correspondent, for some strange reason, had been singled out as Ger-

Army To Free Certain Skilled Men

Defence Dept. To Act On Employers' Call And Arrange Leaves

OTTAWA, Dec. 2—(CP). — The Department of National Defence has cleared the way for temporary return to certain designated industries of some skilled craftsmen now serving with the Canadian Active Service Force in Canada and Newfoundland.

The Defence Department issued a statement last night saying the move was aimed at increasing war production during the winter.

A memorandum has been sent to all district officers commanding, to the general officers commanding the Atlantic and Pacific commands and to other officers concerned, the statement said. In part, the memorandum said:—

"It has been decided to allow key men from essential industries in Canada, who are serving in the C.A.S.F. to be granted leave (without pay) during the forthcoming winter to return, temporarily, to those industries in order to help increase production in relation to the war effort."

"Essential industries" under the arrangement would be those defined as such by the Department of Munitions and Supply. There would be no compulsion upon the men to return to their work, and in all cases the soldiers' wishes would be taken into consideration.

Employers of the men concerned must originate application for their temporary release from the C.A.S.F., the department's statement added. Employers wold be asked to apply to the officer commanding the unit in which the soldier is serving.

Want Full Details

"Only applications for craftsmen will be in order and they (the employers) must give complete information as to the position the man will fill in the factory, as well as verifying that employers have been unable to obtain suitable help from employment bureaus," it added.

Final decision regarding applications would be made at National Defence Headquarters.

Some restrictions would be imposed on applications, in order to prevent technical branches of the service from losing experienced men. No applications for release of men from the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps will be considered, due to a present shortage.

The Defence Department's announcement followed by only three days Labor Minister McClarty's speech in the House of Commons in which he said an interdepart-lost when Germany's grey hordes attempted to invade the United Kingdom or when Britain's offensive thrust was aimed from the British Isles at the heart of Germany.

It is now reliably reported that these views were altered by the recent change in the Mediterranean picture wrought by the Royal Navy's pummelling of the Italian fleet and the surprising successes of the Greeks against Mussolini's army.

Some Canadian officers are worried over the prospect of the troops becoming restive if forced to sit through another winter of inactivity. Most of the 1st Division has been here almost a year.

While the 2nd Division is being brought to a state of keen preparation for battle, the infantry brigades of the 1st Division have been manning a section of England's coastal defences. In this branch of active service they would be the first to meet a force attempting an invasion.

When the late Norman Rogers inspected the Canadians at Aldershot April 23, and Britain's battlefront was extending into Norway, he was aked if it would make any difference where the Canadians served.

"Canadian troops always have gone where they were most needed and where they could make the greatest contribution," he replied.

There has been nothing to indicate that that is not the Canadian Government's view at the moment.

many's military objective number one. Wherever I went, whether in London, the provinces, at the port of embarkation and finally aboard ship, the crash of high explosives seemed to trail a few feet in my wake.

True, they didn't find my range but there were close calls and according to the law of averages, I should not be here to-day.

On the eve of my departure for home, where I had been summoned to take up a new post, Hitler's emissaries of frightfulness dropped one of their over-size packets of hate right in the centre of my London flat, but here fate intervened and I was not at home to accept delivery. For the first time since the so-called blitz began I had accepted the invitation of a colleague on a lower floor of the same building to spend the night with him.

All night long the enemy had been droning overhead, indiscriminately, blindly, unloading death and destruction in one of the most violent rads upon the metropolis.

Despite the din of the defensive barrage and the intermittent crash of bombs we somehow managed to drop off to sleep.

Suddenly we were aroused by the roar of a low-flying machine. Three times it crossed directly overhead and then we heard the ominous whine.

"Here she comes," my friend whispered. Before he had uttered the last word there was ablinding flash, followed by a volcanic blast which shook the nine-storey building to its very foundation. We were showered by flying glass and masonry, furniture in the flat was sent spinning about in the dark. We felt certain the bomb had landed in the adjoining room.

Not until dawn an hour later did we learn what had actually happened. The bomb, which experts claimed had been around 1,200 pounds in weight, had crashed through two feet of reinforced concrete roofing, ploughed through two more flights and exploded in the flat directly below what had been my bedroom.

3 Top Floors Ruined

The entire upper portion of this modern residential block had been reduced to a shambles. Three floors were completely obliterated, debris was tossed more than 100 yards across the inner garden court and spattered against the face of the wing directly opposite. The havoc was comparable to that following a point-blank blast of a heavy-calibre gun.

Throughout the day Air Raid Precautions crews worked without rest or relief in the remote hope of finding possible survivors in the piled-up rubble. Six hours later they recovered the mutilated remains of two brothers who lived in the flat next to mine and like myself had been convinced it was just as safe between your own four walls as in the shelter below. Their father and mother who had taken refuge in the basement escaped unhurt.

Four more bodies were found within the next 24 hours. In all 22 families lost all their belongings, 15 others were rendered homeless, and 12 more were less seriously affected. Hundreds of window panes were shattered, water and gas mains were broken and the lighting system was put out of commission.

Those whose relatives had been killed wept on the shoulders of comforting friends. But there was no evidence of panic or hysteria. Sufferers were herded into nearby apartments where they were fed and outfitted in whatever spare clothing could be found, clothing which was welcome although it didn't always fit.

They Pool Resources

Four married couples came to share the shelter of my friend's two-room flat where I had stopped for the night. We enjoyed the benefits of gas, water and light. They were of the so-called middle-class strata of British society, people moderately well-to-do and accustomed to the luxuries of life.

This day all gladly pooled their resources. While the women did their best to straighten out the flat, which looked as if a cyclone had struck it, the men went off to the nearest shopping district.

Without ration cards the selection was rather limited, but we accepted whatever food was procurable. Within an hour, our refugee group sat down to a communal lunch of fried sausage, mashed potatoes, turnips, cauliflower, bread and tea.

Ravenously hungry, all agreed it was the grandest meal they had ever tasted. Dinner was shared in the same way, but it had to be curtailed before the tea stage was reached. Dusk had fallen and the howl of the Banshee reminded us that Jerry is seldom late.

That night he dropped six more bombs in the immediate area, two of which struck another wing of the building. The damage this time, however, was not so severe and there was no loss of life.

All told 14 bombs had hit this large residential structure before I left which brought the apt suggestion from a colleague: "Why don't you move near some target of possible military importance? You're sure to safe there."

If it hadn't been for the fact I was homeward bound for Canada I might have put this theory to a test.

P. J. Mulqueen Seriously Ill

TORONTO, Dec. 2.—(CP)—P. J. Mulqueen, president of the Canadian Olympic Committee and one of Canadas' best-known sportsmen, is seriously ill in hospital here.

Hospital attendants said he had passed a "fair" night and that his condition remained unchanged through the week-end.

Known affectionately throughout Canada as "P. J.", Mulqueen is believed to have attended more Olympic games than any one in the Dominion. He is a former chairman of the Ontario Athletic Commission and vice-chairman of the Toronto Board of Harbor Commissioners. He was an oarsman in his active athletic days.

pummels us to pieces with his existing superior resources of metal."

"Hitler knows that," the Evening Standard said, adding that instead of giving up when President Roosevelt was re-elected," he set to work to turn the president's proud promises to naught by striking at our supply lines on the Atlantic by submarine, raider and long-range bomber."

"He still hopes—it is his only hope—to smash our cities and factories to rubble before Britain's blockade squeezes the juice from his war economy, before America has mustered her immense industrial strength for action."

Hitler's "empire" has outposts "even in the American hemisphere," the Standard said, and a "few ships...still deal with America and sail into America ports. Hoping perhaps to pick up a cargo destined for Germany in the end and, worse still, carrying in their holds golds or materials with which to buy dollars."

The newspaper said Britons "lost one battle for Europe" and, with "invalued" aid from the Greeks, are "holding our own in the battles for Asia and Africa, but victory will depend one one other battle—the battle for America."

transactions carefully.

Several Swiss firms, unable to import from Argentina, are continuing to make purchases of essential products, storing them in Argentina in the hope the war will end soon.

One famous Swiss manufacturer of soups already has a full year's supply of meat extract in storage in Argentina.

Meanwhile, Argentine packing firms who found the French government owing them more than 20,000,000 francs at the time of France's collapse as the uncollected 10 per cent on meat shipments which was payable when the meat arrived at French ports have asked the Argentine government to help them collect. They suggested that the government help negotiate an arrangement to collect the debt from the French funds frozen in the United States. They said the French government had acknowledged the debt.

Since then developments have dissipated both these views. Little likelihood is seen of a quick collapse in Greece, which would leave British forces stranded there and the Italians in the Western Egyptian desert have shown no signs of being ready to try a main offensive against the British lines.

Gen. Georges Catroux, who has assumed leadership of the Free French forces in the Near East, has declared that Italian reverses in the Greek campaign produced a deep effect among French troops in Africa and Syria.

He expressed the belief that any German or Italian attempt to occupy the regions these troops are holding would meet with their resistance.

to Rumania today as reports trickling across the border told of increasing anarchy throughout that country.

Unconfirmed reports from Bucharest said these additional German troops would attempt to restore order there and in other large Rumanian cities where Iron Guard extremists have taken revenge on officials of the ousted regime of former King Carol.

The German divisions, moving by rail through Slovakia and Hungary, will bolster Nazi detachments already controlling Rumania's oil fields and pipelines.

(Four divisions mean approximately 60,000 men. German strength in Rumania previously has been estimated as high as 500,000).

Rumanian Army Wavers

Over the frontier came a picture of Rumania's embattled Iron Guard split into three factions and the Rumanian army apparently wavering over what course to take.

One section of the green-shirted guardsmen was said to be supporting the guard leader, Vice-Premier Horia Sima, who has besought discipline.

A second was reported behind Ion Codreanu, father of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, slain founder of the Guard, whose death during the Carol regime it has been avenging with a blood purge.

A third section, and by far the biggest, reported was out of control.

A parade in Bucharest of a German motorized division was interpreted in Hungary as a warning that German troops are prepared to restore order unless the Rumanians do it themselves.

Day Of Vengeances

This last section was reported to be looming and satisfying personal vengeances under the protection of hastily donned green shirts.

Wearers of the green shirt, who number 6,000 two months ago, now number more than 200,000 with a greater part of the sudden increase made by indiscriminate recruiting and self-appointment of members, including most of the underworld of Bucharest and other large cities and inmates of hastily emptied prisons.

Confusions as to who was following whom, with the army unable to decide whom to support or how to distinguish between green shirts, made it probable, reports said, that the German armed forces would step in.

Premier Ion Antonescu, speaking at the mountain town of Alba Julia in commemoration of the 22nd anniversary of Rumania's acquisition of Transylvania, assured 100,000 members of the Guard last night that Germany and Italy had displayed "understanding" for Rumania's desire.

(Hungary, with Rumania a recent signatory of the German-Italian-Japanese military and economic pact, received half the province, of Translyvania August 30, in an Axis-dictated settlement. Rumania had gained it from Hungary at the close of the First Great War in the dissolution of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.)

"I went to Berlin and Rome for the Transylvanians," the premier said. "I pointed out all their sufferings and ours at this time. I found understanding."

Hitler, Antonescu said, gave him a message for the Rumanian army: "On your shoulders rests the duty to repair and correct any injustice Rumania suffered."

(Official Hungarian quarters in Bucharest scoffed at Antonescu's references to Transylvania, declaring that "What is being said in Rumania is of no importance and of no interest to us.")

Line Folds Up

Before this report was received, advices from the front described the fighting line at the start of the sixth week of war as swinging like a door toward the Adriatic coast, from a coastal area just north of the Greek frontier, to Lake Ochrida, on the Yugoslav frontier.

With this break, the arching battlefront appeared to have been cut into two segments, with the heavies, fighting still raging in the south around Argirocastro, the last remaining Fascist invasion base in Southern Albania.

Trainees To Get Week-End Leave

Working in relays, trainees from the Exhibition Camp tackled snowdrifts on Sunday morning and today all avenues in the big camp are as smooth as a billiard table.

This morning the officer commanding changed the daily routine a little, dispensing with physical drill and instead the trainees, 750 strong, went on a route march around the half-mile track. This not only gave them exercise but trampled the track smooth, so that platoon drill could be carried out.

The training is proceeding otherwise as per schedule and the men are in fine shape.

Church parade was dispensed with on Sunday morning to permit snow removal but the Roman Catholics all attended mass at the Sacred Heart Church.

Next week-end many of the trainees in camp will be given a pass entitling them to week-end leave. They will leave the camp at noon on Saturday and will not have to report back until reveille on Monday morning. This is the first time since the local camp opened that the privilege of week-end leave will be given. The men will have to provide their own transportation if they wish to leave the city.

Last Saturday the men were given late leave. They were out during the afternoon and did not have to report in until 11.30 on Saturday night. This extension of time allowed many to attend late shows and dances and removes one of the few grievances which the trainees have had.

The superstructure of the drill hall is now completed and it remains now for the camp engineer to sheet the building and have it wired and heated for the men.

Lewis Bearne Is Promoted

Lewis Bearne, a former resident of this city has been named assistant manager of the Colonial Fertilizer Company at Windsor, Nova Scotia, according to a news story which appeared recently in the Hants Journal, a local publication.

The announcement is of considerable interest in this city as Lewis Bearne is a son of Robert H. Bearne, 337 George street south and a brother of Leonard H. Bearne, cost accountant with the Johnson Motors.

He came to Canada when he was 10 years of age from England and his first job was in the general passenger offices of the C.N.R. at Winnipeg. Later he was transfered to Peterborough. In 1922 he resigned to take an office position with the Colonial Hide Company, Peterborough branch. In 1926 he was transferred to the Ottawa branch. Two years later he went to Windsor as chief clerk of the Colonial Fertilizer Company.

In employee relations, Mr. Bearne has been instrumental in the success of the Colonial Credit Union, a cooperative organization of the Colonial Fertilizer Company and Colonial Hide Company. He was chairman of the Board of Directors during the initial years of the union and its sound basis is due to his careful advice and guidance. Mr. Bearne is a graduate of LaSalle Extension University in higher accountancy and through 18 years service with his present employer, has attained a thorough knowledge of the manufacturing and sales departments of the fertilizer business.

He is a member of the Vestry of Christ Church, president of the Windsor Gyro Club, and a member of the Windsor Curling Club. He is married and has two children, and his home on Clifton street. Mrs. Bearne is formerly of Peterborough and she is a daughter of Mrs. A. Graham, Westcott street.

Scottish Program Given Rotarians

Rotarians paid tribute at their weekly luncheon today to St. Andrew, patron saint of Scotland. The program, in charge of Rotarian John Smith, was entirely Scottish in character and the only regrettable feature was that the speaker, John McLaverty, M.A., of Toronto, who was to have given an address appropriate to the occasion failed to arrive in time, owing to a late train.

President T. J. Carley read a letter from the Rotary Club of Sale, in the Liverpool district of England which said that the Peterborough club had been toasted at a recent meeting. The writer said that Sale Rotarians were carrying on in spite of the war and were assisting in war activities. "We are looking forward to the end of the war with ever increasing confidence," the letter said.

Scottish songs featured the community singing and Miss Isobel Duthie, guest soloist, delighted the gathering with her fine singing of the two old favorites, "Annie Laurie" and "Flow Gently Sweet Afton," in which her sweet voice was displayed to greatest advantage.

Rotarian Smith expressed the thanks of the club to Miss Duthie for her most enjoyable singing.

The French Fleet

they fell to Germany, is waiting for the Vichy government to commit itself to some further scheme for "collaboration" with the Axis powers before he openly repudiates it. In this, these observers point out, Vice-Premier Pierre Laval, who has been conducting "collaboration" negotiations with Berlin, may unconsciously be playing Weygand's game.

Gen. Weygand's adherence to the Free French cause, however, would create a delicate problem in London. As a much older man with a name which still carries immense prestige in France, he presumably would expect to lead the movement causing de Gaulle, who has little known in France before the war, to take a subordinate post in the movement which he himself created after the armistice.

Could Reverse Situation

If Weygand brought North Africa to Britain's aid, the whole strategic position in the Mediterranean and the Middle East would be reversed, military spokesmen said.

Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, British commander in the Middle East, faced a hazardous situation through the defection of French colonial armies in June when France dropped out of the war.

Instead of having an Allied army outnumbering the Italians, he suddenly found himself outnumbered by them. Although re-inforcements were rushed from Britain, Australia, New Zealand and India, he had to allow the Italians to advance in the western desert across the Egyptian frontier. British Somaliland had to be evacuated. But these were Italy's only successes. The drive across the desert halted at Sidi Barrani and Italy is having difficulty supplying the troops there.

Weygand could bring to Gen. Wavell a well-equipped, partly mechanized army of upward of 500,000 men, composed of native troops, the French Foreign Legion, and others. That army could press down from the heights of Tunis eastward into Italian Libya.

Marshal Graziani's Italian army could thus be squeezed in a British-French pincer, say military commentators.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

HIS eyes pleaded for understanding and, under their spell, the thing seemed as simple as he put it.

"You've a family to support now, Jim," she chided him, and they both laughed. It was good to be light-hearted, Lona thought. To be with someone with whom you belonged. To have that feeling of complete companionship.

The train ride to Brighton and what Jim expected to be their new home was Lona's first experience in a Pullman. For a long time she lay awake, her head on Jim's arm, listening to the grinding of the wheels below her. And, as if the crowded intimacy of the tiny berth had opened his store of memories, Jim talked to her as he had never talked before.

He told her of his childhood in the western hills. He talked of herding cattle and of round-ups, rodeos, words that to her were only printed names. He loved horses, it seemed, and dogs. They were to have a dog when they were settled in their new home, he promised her. A big, knowing, friendly beast that would be a real companion to her. None of your stringy lap dogs for him.

She could have lain there in his arms listening forever, she thought. In the shaded half light she studied his features as he talked. Relaxed, he looked boyish. The crinkling lines were smoothed out from around his eyes, and he smiled a little as he talked. She would like to have a son some day who would look like he did now, she caught herself planning, and blushing at the thought while she bravely pursued it. A fat baby with curly brown hair and brown "Tiny" eyes.

Lulled by the song of the grinding wheels and the wonder of her own dreams, she almost lost track of what he was saying, when she was aware that he had turned his eyes on her with a new intentness, and that a new, strained note had come into his voice.

"There's something I've been thinking ever since I saw that picture back in Fairfield," he brought out. "It's about the name of Claridge . . ." He hesitated.

"The name of Claridge? What do you mean?"

"They're on to it now. Maybe we shouldn't use it for a while. Somebody might—remember. Going into a strange place like Brighton, starting all over, maybe it would be easier if we used some other name."

Lona stared at him. "But Jim—"

"I want to get you away from everything that's happened to you, girl!" he burst out, and his eyes were intense. "Everything. Don't you see? Every little thing! The past mustn't catch up with you again, not ever. I won't have you hounded, and stared at, and talked about. You're my wife, now. I'm not taking any chances."

A cold hand took hold of Lona's heart. So that was the way of it. "You shouldn't have married me, Jim, if you felt that way," she said, in a still, hurt voice. "I'm sorry you're ashamed of me."

"Ashamed of you, girl? But you don't understand. It's not that. Don't think it's that, please. It's just that I can't stand to have you—talked about. Some jerkwater reporter out here will see that picture and my name, and connect us up if we don't change it. Can't you see? It's for your own sake, for your own peace of mind. You don't want to go through any more of that camera dodging, do you?"

"No, I suppose not. But I thought that, perhaps now, it would die down. I don't like changing names. It doesn't seem right, somehow."

"Trust me in this, will you, girl?" His voice was so earnest that she would have promised him the world if he had asked it. "I know what's best. My mother's name was Bennett. I have a right to use it if I see fit . . ."

"Bennett. Mrs. James Bennett! Just when I was getting used to Claridge, too. It's almost too much, Jim. Three names in two days!" She had to smile.

Then you'll do it?" His voice was unduly eager, it seemed, but she stifled her doubts.

"If you think it's best, Jim," she said, so demurely that he laughed aloud.

"That's the girl!" he approved. "I can see you're going to make a model wife." He tightened his arm about her slender shoulders as the train lurched onward through the night.

"After all, what's in a name?" he quoted, gaily.

Settling for sleep Lona was conscious of his approval, and it warmed her with an inward glow, quieting the questions that edged into her mind. It must be right or Jim wouldn't do it, she told herself. Why worry?

So it was as Mrs. James Bennett, that Lona roamed about the thriving, energetic little town of Brighton next day in a pleasant flurry of "house hunting." She found the place delightful, a change from the city to which she had become accustomed, a leisurely town with wide streets, overhanging and neat rows of brisk business places in its downtown section. The bridge where Jim so confidently expected to find work was to span one of the heavy rivers, draining into the rolling bulk of Lake Erie a few miles up from the town. It was already in construction, a graceful filigree of spindling wires above yawning concrete abutments. It made Lona shiver a little to look at its towering height, but Jim exclaimed at sight of it.

"Sweet job!" he approved, and was off to find the engineer in charge, leaving her to her own devices.

The place reminded her pleasantly of Bridgewater, as she hesitated, wondering just how to go about finding rooms. There was no morning paper with its familiar "To Let" column as there would have been in the city, and she saw no sign indicating a real estate agency. Deep within her some instinct warned against attracting attention by making any pointed inquiries, and finally, with most of the day before her, she struck out up Main street, away from the business section. Perhaps, by just walking, she'd happen onto something.

It was on a shady street leading off from the far end of Main street that she saw, at last, a "For Rent" sign. It was in the window of a homey looking white house with a wide porch and, with a sudden feeling of having come home, she went up the walk and lifted the old-fashioned knocker.

"Come in," a voice sang out and, wondering at the quaint informality, she stepped into the hall. Through a door to the right she caught a glimpse of a pleasant living room. Framed against the light from the windows was a wheel chair, and seated in the chair was a girl of Lona's own age.

The girl brought the chair forward to the middle of the room as Lona stood, uncertainly, and beckoned to the visitor with a smile. "In here, please," she invited.

Outlined in the streaming light, she was, Lona thought, the most remarkable looking girl she ever had seen. She was slight and straight for all her obvious slavery to the ugly chair, whose huge wheels flanked her on either side like sprouting wings. Her hair was pure golden, and fluffed about her small head like a halo. Her features were small, and perfectly molded. The eyes were a startling blue, shaded by long, doll-like lashes, and snapping with animation.

"You've come about the rooms, I suppose," she prompted, in a tinkling, silvery sort of voice, as Lona hesitated, a little startled by the unexpected encounter with such sheer beauty. "Won't you sit down?" she invited. "I'm Dinah Morriss. And this is the old Morriss home."

"Thank you." Lona heard herself murmuring, seating herself politely on the edge of the chair. I'm Lona Bennett. Mrs. Bennett," she supplied stumbling a little over the name. "I saw your for rent sign and I'm hunting rooms for my husband and myself."

"I'm glad you came here." The girl's smile flashed out again and Lona knew suddenly that she liked her. She liked this place, too, the old-fashioned but comfortable and obviously refined surroundings, the air of well being, and of good living that seemed to hang about the high-ceilinged room.

"The rooms are on the other side of the house," Dinah explained. 'I'll show them to you . . . if you'll help me a little with this chariot of mine." She laughed "This way. Just push it over the door jam, please. I can manage the rest."

She chatted gaily as they went along the hall Lona had first entered, and through the door at the farther side from the Morriss living room. This part of the house proved to be a wing, composed of three spacious rooms: a living room with comfortable, well-chosen furniture, a bedroom with an antique mahogany bedroom suite, and a tiny cream and red kitchen, obviously newly built and done up in modern style. The moment Lona stepped into the gracious living room, she knew she had to have the place. It was hers, somehow, made for her. Her face was alight as she followed the lame girl's clicking chair.

"They're just what I wanted!" she exclaimed when they came to the shining kitchen. "Imagine finding a place like this!"

British Cruiser Nabs 22 Germans

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 2 (CP)—A British auxiliary cruiser was reported last night to have halted the Brazilian coastal passenger ship Itape twelve miles off Brazil early today and removed twenty-two passengers, said to be Germans.

It was reported the captain of the Itape protested to the British captain, claiming the vessel was within the so-called American neutrality zone and was making a coastal run.

The passengers removed, with their baggage, were understood to have embarked at Porto Alegre, Sontos and Rio de Janeiro for Bahia and Belem.

The 4,970-ton ship left Rio de Janeiro yesterday and was reported halted off Cape Saothome.

Fear 10 Drowned Trapped Aboard Lisieux

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Dec. 2 (CP Cable)—Their vessel and 10 shipmates feared lost, 17 seamen from the Canadian freighter Lisieux recovered here today from the effects of a lifeboat ordeal that two others of the ship's company failed to survive.

The seamen, brought here over the week-end after riding through a storm in two lifeboats, revealed how one of the boats had been snatched away by the gale while the 10 men still on the Lisieux waited to board it Tuesday. The marooned men, without another boat, were believed to have perished with the sinking ship.

The stranded group aboard the storm-battered Lisieux included four Canadians, Able Seamen Arthur Ewing and Kelvin Traynor of Vancouver, Oiler Charles Munroe of Jersey Cove, N.S., and Gunner William Lower of Halifax. At least 10 other Canadians were among those picked up Wednesday by two freighters and landed here Saturday and Sunday.

Able Seaman Alien Lyons of Vancouver had the wierdest story—cast adrift alone in a life boat and rescued 24 hours later as he neared collapse. He and the others had suffered intensely from the biting wind, the snow and the flying seas.

None of the men held out any hope the 2,594-ton Lisieux, a former French craft taken over by the Canadian government, survived the storm that struck her Tuesday morning 400 miles northeast of here. She was sinking by the bows when the survivors saw her last.

Capt. Andre Perrin, a Frenchman, and five French members of the crew—including all the deck officers—were left aboard the Lisieux when the lifeboat with Lyons in it was carried away.

Lyons had gone into the lifeboat to fend it away from the freighter's sides as the other men entered. But before they started to get in, a great wave swept the boat up to the level of the freighter's deck and then carried it away, snapping its mooring rope.

The 38-year-old Lyons fashioned himself a sea anchor to keep the boat riding properly to the wind and sat back to await rescue. He never gave up hope of being saved, he said yesterday.

Greek Bayonets Smash Duce's Fresh Reserves

ATHENS, Dec. 2.—(AP).— Fresh Italian shock troops rushed to bolster sagging Fascist defence lines were reported to-day being smashed back with the regiment they came to reinforce as the Greeks claimed "important" new advances all along the battlefront in Albania.

Dispatches from the front and statements by a Greek spokesman pictured the fighting line at the start of the sixth week of war as swinging like a barn door toward the Adriatic from a hinge on the Albanian coast, just north of the Greek frontier, to Lake Ochrida, on the Yugoslav frontier.

Stiffest Italian resistance was reported near that hinge, around Argirocastro.

In the central sector the Greek High Command announced the capture of "points of special importance for the development of operations" around Premet, 16 miles north of the Greek frontier.

Near Lake Ochrida Italians were said to be retiring through ice and snow toward Elbasani, 40 miles northwest of fallen Pogradetz on the road to the Albanian capital, Tirana.

The High Command said last night the Greeks made "important advances on the entire front" and captured 150 more prisoners.

A spokesman added that the Italian retreat was general from Lake Ochrida to the sea, and that Greek bayonet charges had won new fortified heights.

"The booty we have captured (around Pogradetz) is very important and exceeds figures given in the official communique," he said. "More to the south, the fresh, select Italian troops which had been rushed to reinforce the enemy has contributed nothing. On the contrary, they suffered the effect of the contagions."

Helping The Greeks

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 2.—(AP).—The little girl selling tags for the Greek War Relief Fund asked Thomas McGee, insurance man, to buy one.

"Are you a Greek?" McGee queried.

"Oh, no sir," she replied earnestly, "I'm an Italian."

Several Italian misses joined Greek lassies in the tag sale.

Italy's Case Is Serious

There are times when it is correct enough to secure a survey of war results from sources not generally regarded as giving out such information. A simple case is this—conditions in Italy as they are regarded today in Washington and Berlin.

United States Agricultural Department has completed a factual survey based upon information obtained through diplomatic and reliable channels. It is the business of that department to follow food supplies throughout the world, so the information on conditions in Italy was secured in just the same manner as would be followed regularly regardless of the country.

From this source we find that Italy is entering the winter deprived of many vital foodstuffs and agricultural raw materials. More than 80 per cent. of Italy's imports have been cut off by the blockade by British vessels. Italian-bound vessels cannot get by Gibraltar nor can they go through the Suez.

This U.S. report says Italians were alarmed when Mussolini entered the war; they were more alarmed inside a month or six weeks because the quick victory which had been anticipated had not arrived. Now the whole population knows what Italy is in for, as food rationing has become so severe that the reason for it has become widely known. And this is not our own comment, but the wording of the Washington report: "This rationing cuts heavily into national morale."

From Berlin there is the report of the Associated Press correspondent who says there is open speculation "as to how Italy, already reduced to four meatless days a week, will get through the coming cold months under the blockade." It is broadly hinted that the position of Italy is going to create a new and serious problem for the Axis. The problem is now present whether it has been openly recognized or not.

The position of Italy leaves that nation sadly open to attack. It is a known fact that the country lives by reason of imports. It is also known that Marshal Graziani has a large force of Italians in North Africa, and he has to feed his men there every day, and supplies must come from the homeland. They cannot be secured in quantity in the desert country of Egypt.

Britain is so thoroughly in control of the Mediterranean that Italy cannot bring in supplies, and it is recognized that if the Italian army had to withdraw from Sidi Barrani, where it had been sitting on its haunches for weeks, it would be regarded as nothing short of disaster of major proportion. Added to the withdrawal of Italian troops from Greece it might be quite sufficient to challenge the continued existence of the Mussolini regime in Italy.

We do not believe there has been any exaggeration in presenting these plain facts. They have been stated just as they exist, and it is not mere wishful thinking to suggest that Italy is facing a desperately critical situation. And facing it right now.

Not a Sufficient Answer

T. L. Church, M.P., inquired in the House of Commons regarding fatalities occurring in the ranks of the air force and militia in Canada. He wanted to know if regular coroner's inquests had been held, or if the military authorities had made their own inquiries. Included in the question was this: How many soldiers were killed or injured in each military district on the highways by motor cars or in other accidents?

The answer given was to the effect that it would not be possible to answer the question: "Will any findings or reports herein be tabled?" It was contended that coroners' reports were public property and should be available, but the answer was that "the Department had no control over civilian inquests or coroners' investigations."

It is quite well-known of course that civilian inquests and coroners' investigations are outside the scope of the military authorities, but that is not a complete answer to the quesion, nor does it actually get at the matter at all.

It would probably be necessary to go outside the strict lines of official marking to handle this situation, and yet we believe the facts warrant such action. We are not suggesting that there be any changes made in inquiring into the facts concerning the death of a soldier while in this country because such inquiries generally do produce all the necessary information. But the military authorities ought to have a complete record of all such cases. They should regard it as a matter which is very much their concern. If there are habits, circumstances or any such thing which are a common contributing cause to the deaths of these young men, then the immediate and complete assembly of such information should be a matter of major importance.

If, in the perusal of these reports, conditions are revealed which for the safety of the men should be changed, then the change should be made, but it could not be made without having all the records. We regard that question by Mr. Church as being timely and the answer that the department "has no control over civilian inquests or coroners' investigations" as being quite insufficient.

Farmers And Cheese

Members of the Kingston Cheese Board had something like a field day talking about the price of cheese and the chances of keeping up the supply with a price which is not considered attractive because it does not represent profitable production. Much of the discussion was entirely practical, because the men doing the talking were speaking of a business which they thoroughly understood.

There was the experience of the gentleman who owns and operates the factory at Elginburg. During the early month of April he had lost $75; that was early in the season and the number of patrons was small. The Government was now calling for a high standard of efficiency and sanitation in the factories and it will take $500 to come up to the new regulations and the owner did not think he would again operate. He stated that much of the milk which used to come to his factory is now being sold in Kingston to take care of an increased population in that city.

W. E. Cooper, who owns and operates the factory at Sunbury presented a situation which appears serious enough. If production is going to fall off in 1941 it will take three years to bring it back to normal. The serious part of that is that Britain is going to depend more on Canadian cheese as a staple article of diet. Mr. Cooper made this statement:

> "I know of three farms in our district where farmers have sold their cows and are coming to work in Kingston where they can get more for their labor. The farmers are simply leaving their farms and going to the cities where the Government has shown a poor example by paying such high wages for war efforts."

And what can they do about it? Not a thing of which we are aware. If a farmer decides to leave the land and try his fortune in a city he is at liberty to do so, although we think he is taking a short view of the entire situation.

It has taken our people a long time to become aware of the basic fact that the well-founded success of our country is wrapped up in the well-being of the farm population, because it is on the buying power of this 45 per cent. of our population that the prosperity of urban centres largely depends.

For a long time provincial and federal governments have spoken much of what they have been doing for the farmer. It is not possible to claim that advances have not been made in many directions, but progress along one essential line has been dead still. That is, solving the problem of how amid all this activity the farmer is going to make a fair living.

Rumania Ruled By Murder

Prominence is given to the report that King Michael has fled from Bucharest in Rumania to seek refuge in Yugoslavia. There is no reason to attach much importance to that because it makes little difference whether the boy king leaves or remains in his terrorized country. He might be safer were he out of it and we are certain he could do nothing to restore order were he to stay in it.

Rumania today offers a 1940 illustration of what can happen when constituted methods of government break; when there is no one in a place of authority who can show any legitimate reason for being there; when men who prefer to take law in their own hands have opportunity to do so.

The Iron Guard (patterned after the Nazi organization in Germany in the first place) is actually in control today whether it sits in office or not. It is a collection of people who have green shirts, a gun and desire to kill. They regard murder as the most effective way of getting rid of those officials or personages who stand across their path. They "request" ministers to resign on the open threat that they will be murdered. If they resign and are reinstated by Antonescu, who is nominally the man in authority, it improves neither their position nor their safety. They continue to exist under the threat of the real authority—the Iron Guard. And the chances all indicate they will die under that same unreal and yet powerful authority.

Codreanu is credited with having founded the Iron Guard Legion, and in seeking to suppress it King Carol had him shot. In one of his moments of illumination Codreanu explained that rank and standing in the Legion was governed by the number of murders. The process was as deliberate and as much reduced to a system as being elected in our country by receiving the majority of the ballots in an election.

Those close to the situation blame King Carol for what is happening in Rumania today. Up to September 6 his position was not hopeless, but he had weakened it by dealing with Hitler and by depending on the Germans to make his position secure.

Carol outlawed all political parties, and only the Iron Guard continued to function—and with guns. That is undoubtedly why Carol fled the country. He feared for his life because the system on which he had depended for a measure of order and protection had disappeared. And the tragedy is that Carol himself has caused its disappearance.

Right now no political authority exists, and power belongs to the ones who can exercise it. At the moment the Iron Guard appear to be in control not because they were elected or appointed, but because they have the guns and will kill on sight. It is moving back whole centuries to the point where there is no safety for the individual or the state. And yet this seemingly impossible thing is being enacted right near the end of the year 1940!

He Can't Scare Us

Premier Aberhart was speaking in Edmonton, and it is clear he does not like the Sirois Royal Commission report, fearing it is going to centralize authority in Canada. He wound up by saying: "They are bringing in something that will destroy unity in Canada."

That is a great old argument, and apparently it is one which can be dusted off and made to fit in with any occasion in any part of our rather broad Dominion.

If the continued existence of this thing called unity had been the force on which we depended for the growth and development of this country we fear we should have perished long ago.. Probably when we were very young; if not then, certainly when we became older.

Never have we possessed a large supply of unity.

The East has never understood the West, and the West has planned a separate kingdom.

The Maritimes have been fighting for years for what they term their rights, and they feel they have been shabbily treated by the rest of us. And perhaps they have.

The people in the country have never quite understood the people of towns and cities, and it is certain the urban folk have never had any too much understanding of what takes place out on the concessions and the side lines.

And yet we have survived and grown.

So when Premier Aberhart says the Sirois report is going to destroy unity in Canada we refuse to scare.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Store keeper near Parry Sound was bound and gagged and $400 taken from his premises. We suppose that was one skunk's idea of how to win the war.

In Baltimore the draft for the U. S. army has such names as Ordakowski, Pskiewicz and Kryzstynski. Did these chaps have relatives coming over on the Mayflower?

Toronto man told police his pocket had been picked of $10 while riding in a crowded street car. When people are subjected to the sardine treatment anything is liable to happen.

VERY OLD STORY

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I met upon the village green a chap who hailed me as I went, he told me plain he was in need and did not own one lonely cent. His stomach it was empty too, it almost touched upon his spine, he'd be a friend for ever more if I would pass one shiny dime.

¶ He paused and said that years ago he had a job and earned good pay, nor did he have to line his ribs with mouldy bread and thistled hay. His raiment was a goodly thing, he had a wardrobe in his home, he had eight suits of clothes to wear, ten hats to decorate his dome.

¶ But he was fond of gay life then, he hired a man to shine his shoes, instead of saving up his tin he used to shoot it all in booze. And friends they followed him around and named him as a goodly guy, they lined up when he beckoned them and drank the suds he stopped to buy.

¶ Then when his kale had gone, he said, they dropped him like a poisoned flea, and now he sits beside the green and sleeps beneath a basswood tree.

¶ He said his friends were made of mud, that in their hearts there was no health, and yet he failed to see as how he'd been a life-sized sap himself.

Afraid of What Follows After "Boom Times"

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — Despite all the national administration's efforts to prevent it, an upward tendency in a great many prices is noticeable. It isn't pronounced enough yet to be called inflation. Nevertheless Wendell Willkie suggests that inflation is what it's the beginning of. What's more, it worries New Deal administrationists.

Chas. P. Stewart

For instance, Leon Henderson, U.S. defence council's chief economist, is opposing it vigtrously. The consumers' spokesmen and spokeswomen in various defensive and economic units also are appealing strenuously to wholesalers' organizations to put brakes upon any violent rise in living costs, because naturally consumerdom must feel the first effects of it. And wholesalers generally profess complaint intentions. The question is, though, can they make good on them, if the bulge continues and gains greater and greater proportions?

The New Dealers' contention is that the government's deficit spending, its unprecedented national debt and the increase in its limit, asked for by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, involve nothing inflationary. Still, a government can overstrain its credit, in which event its money shrinks in buying power — that is, prices sky-hoot.

NOT NEAR LIMIT?

MAYBE we haven't reached that point yet, or a point anywhere near it.

However, we've seen it happen in other countries. A few years ago it happened throughout Germany, so that a man with a several-thousand-mark bank account couldn't draw all his cash out and buy a decent meal with it. Finally the Germans had to abandon their old-fashioned marks altogether and invent a new kind.

I've observed the same thing in some of the Latin Americans. Illustratively, Paraguay hasn't any money at all, of its own, that anybody'll accept. Business is transacted there in English, Yankee, Argentine or Brazilian currency.

Of course we shan't so overdo ourselves. All the same, perhaps we can overdo ourselves somewhat.

Even as substantial a republic as Argentina did it. The Argentines started off with, as their unit, a peso, equivalent to about 94 cents in our Yankee dollar. The peso was redeemable on a basis of 100 per centavos. But the government presently had issued so much paper that the peso's buying power slumped to less than one-half its nominal value. Accordingly, many years ago, the Buenos Aires congress announced: "Henceforward the peso will be redeemable at only 33 centavos per peso." It's been that way ever since. If that wasn't inflationary, I'm no judge of inflation.

Here in the United States such prognosticators as Leon Henderson, to mention a pro-New Deal authority, see peril of a different sort of inflation of living costs.

CUT UNEMPLOYMENT

UNEMPLOYMENT'S being sopped up very rapidly. The hitherto unemployed, though, are going largely into military preparedness production or into the conscription army. Possibly peace time industries will soon find themselves with an actual scarcity of workers. If so, there's likely to be an actual shortage of processed stuff to eat and wear, to shelter us, to run street cars and railroads, et cetera. Correspondingly peace industrial toilers, back in jobs again, will have increased consumptive capacity, and conscripts will have to eat, war clothes and occupy barracks like sixty.

With consumption thus competitively expanded and peace production probably short handed, with a skimpy supply and a vastly greater demand, why won't prices go skyward? They will, is the expert prediction.

To be sure, the industrial crowd doubtless will see to it that they're taken care of. As prices rise, the workingmen's unions will insist on correspondingly advanced wages—and they'll get 'em. They're starting to attend to it already.

Boosts in the white collar elements' incomes will lag. They always do.

Ditto the incomes of folk dependent on invested money's returns.

The farmers' outlook is problematic. They have so large a surplus on hand already that presumably it will be a long while before it's exhausted.

At best, it looks like a boom ahead. A boom is what Leon Henderson is afraid of. He's observed one or two and doesn't like what follows them.

• British Army In France An Error?

HAS FATE, in a guise that looked like disaster, forced British war strategy at length on to the right lines?

Was the despatch of the Expeditionary Force to France a mistake from which we were fortunately liberated by the collapse of the French Army?

At the present stage of the war encouragement may be found in the emphatically affirmative answers to these questions given in an anonymous book called "Sea Power" which appeared recently.

Its author, who styles himself "T 124," is stated by his publisher, Jonathan Cape, to be "a well-known writer on naval and military affairs." He believes that Britain fought the last Great War by wrong and far too costly methods. He considers that the supposedly vital British need of keeping the Channel ports out of enemy hands is a delusion, and that to send an army to Flanders was a blunder.

British security, he maintains, can be much more cheaply and effectively preserved by the the use of our historic weapon of seapower, since "the vital factor in naval warfare is not bases but ships."

As "T 124" points out, "the Channel ports were held by the people who were regarded as our chief and hereditary enemies from the beginning of Queen Anne's reign to the end of Queen Victoria's"—yet even the genius of a Napoleon could not use that advantage to conquer this country.

Even the fact that the air has been added to the other two elements in which warfare is conducted, so that the possession of airdromes just across the Channel gives an additional advantage to the enemy, did not justify, in this writer's view, the despatch of an army to the Continent.

On the basis of the Service estimates for 1939, he concludes that for the same money as it actually cost to maintain the 400,000 British troops in France we could have kept another 6,000 first-line airplanes in readiness.

"Given enough ships and aircraft," says "T 124," "we could now be snapping our fingers at Germany and her mighty armies. But we have been looking all ways at once—out to sea, up in the air and landwards towards the Continent."—London Daily Mail.

• "Mr. Speaker" Says the Member

From Parliamentary Debates

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: I have to inform the hon. member that his time has expired. Unless he has the unanimous consent of the house to continue, he will have to resume his seat.

Mr. KUHL: If I could have about two minutes I could state my point of view.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go on.

MR. POULIOT RISES

Mr. POULIOT: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. We are now on the orders of the day and I do not see why the leader of the opposition (Mr. Hanson) should be permitted to make statements to the government at this time. There will be another opportunity for him to do so, and I am sick of listening to his sermons. I would ask the whip of the Conservative party to keep quiet. I am sick of these little sermons by the leader of the opposition at the beginning of each sitting. He has to give a lecture or make suggestions to the government all the time. He is at liberty the same as any other hon. member to ask questions of the government on the orders of the day, but to make suggestions is an entirely different matter, and I ask, Mr. Speaker, that he be made to conform to the rules.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Order.

Mr. POULIOT: I am not afraid of the howling or the groans.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): After that little interlude, may I be permitted with the consent of the house to complete briefly what I had to say?

Mr. POULIOT: The hon. member has not unanimous consent. I object.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): I was indicating that I think it would be desirable that when we adjourn—

Mr. POULIOT: Sit down, please. I ask for your ruling on the point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. SPEAKER: I gather that it is the sense of the house that these statements should be made by the leader of the opposition. He is dealing with a subject which is in the minds of all members of the house, and while I would not say he is strictly in order, yet I feel it is the sense of the house that he should make these statements and that the Prime Minister should reply to them if he thinks proper.

MAY I FINISH?

Mr. SPEAKER: Order. I am sorry to inform the hon. gentleman that his time has expired.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go on.

Mr. HAZEN: May I just finish what I was saying?

Mr. SPEAKER: With the unanimous consent of the house.

Mr. HAZEN: "Effective cooperation," to others who heard that address, may have meant whole-hearted and energetic participation in the war, such as we saw in the war of 1914-18.

But in the broadcast of September 3, 1939, the Prime Minister did not explain just what he meant by those words, and it is probable that we shall not know what he meant until the correspondence that passed between Canada and Great Britain before we entered the war is tabled in this house. We have been told that this correspondence, important though it is, will not be made available to us at the present time.

Mr. SPEAKKER: Do I understand that the hon. gentleman has unanimous consent to continue?

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go ahead.

Mr. HAZEN: I should like to complete the point I am making.

Mr. GOLDING: How many pages more?

Mr. HAZEN: You may not like it very much—

Mr. SPEAKER: If the hon. gentleman has unanimous consent, he may continue.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go on.

Mr. SPEAKER: There appears to be a desire that the hon. gentleman should conclude the point he is making.

• The Bombs Were Falling Wide

(By a Special Correspondent of the Manchester Guardian)

BRITAIN has complete control of the North Sea. Nazi claims that they have driven British shipping from our East Coast are like so many other boasts by Goebbels, completely without foundation.

For some days I have been on the North Sea on board a convoy escort vessel. We escorted two large, heavily laden convoys during my stay with her. Several others passed us. Merchant ships from our and the other convoys slipped in and out of East Coast harbors—all claimed by the Germans to be "bombed to ruins", to load and unload their cargoes. The smooth running of the convoy was disturbed only by weather conditions, not by "enemy activity." And this in spite of the greatly intensified Nazi drive of the last few weeks against our North Sea shipping.

After a lull bombing by the Luftwaffe has begun again. My convoy was bombed. The raid, like the vast majority of these German Air Force attacks on shipping, was completely unsuccessful. We were shadowed by a bomber and a seaplane until in the gathering dark we were passing another merchant armada. Both 'planes swooped down on us, dropping heavy bombs in three salvos. The nearest dropped 100 yards from any ship. The seaplane seemed so low that it was skimming the water beneath the level of the bridge of my armed escort. They made only one attack; the concentrated barrage of the escort ships quickly put them to flight. It was all over in seconds.

I watched the 'planes as they dived. Guns from every ship turned the dark sky into a glitter of bursting shells and spangles of tracers. There were three heavy concussions. My ship shuddered with the shocks. The gunfire was deafening in intensity and then suddenly died into silence. The two convoys moved on their appointed courses. Not a merchantman deviated a yard.

A few days earlier, while I was on board a patrol vessel, I had seen a similar attack on another convoy. The result was the same. Nazi warfare against British shipping has completely degenerated into fugitive hit-and-run raids. The skipper of my ship, who has been escorting North Sea convoys for months, has been often attacked. His convoys have been bombed, machine-gunned, tailed by U-boats and E-boats. And the net result of all this German activity has been several 'planes shot down, a few E-boats chased away and probably damaged. Not one British ship has been damaged by these enemy actions. These convoys proceeded serenely and safely to their ports.

And so it is happening daily in the North Sea. Cargo ships laden to the Plimsoll lines arrive at their ports; they unload, load, and sail. It is monotonous in its undisturbed regularity.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Behold, the heaven and the heaven of heavens is the Lord's thy God, the earth also, with all that therein is ....Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God; him shalt thou serve, and to him shalt thou cleave, and swear by his name....

Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that ye may be strong, and go in and possess the land, whither ye go to possess it....For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot as a garden of herbs: but the land, whither ye go to possess it is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven: a land which the Lord thy God careth for: the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year.—Deut. x, 24, 31; 9, 10-12.

A Bit of Nonsense

How Clever

Full of enthusiasm as a collector for the local hospital, the pretty girl tackled a film star who was visiting the town. She returned to the office, flourishing a cheque.

"Look what he gave me," she cried. "It's for ten dollars."

"Fine," replied the secretary, looking at the cheque. "But there's no signature here."

"I know," said the girl brightly. "I cut it off for my autograph collection."

NO WEAKENED FIBRE

THE majority, perhaps, to use an expression of Dorothy Thompson during the campaign in the United States, voted for maintaining the right to tell the other fellow to "quit shoving me around." There may be those who will say that dependence to so great an extent on the state, the demand for such forms of security indicates a weakening of the national fibre. They said that sort of thing in England when Lloyd George brought in his budgets. Nothing that has happened in the past few months lends color to the suggestion that the fibre of Britain has been seriously weakened.—Saskatoon Star-Phoenix.

East End Dwarf Genius As Shelter Head

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The dwarf, looking like a child in the half-light, came to the shelter entrance and said:

'I'm Mickey Davis; I run this shelter. Come on down.'

I went down the stairs behind the tiny figure. Mickey Davis is 29, less than four feet tal. His back is humped. He is absolute master of a shelter which nightly houses 2,500 to 3,000 in its labyrinth of corridors and cubicles.

He is master and policeman, judge, father-confessor and elder brother to these thousands of the East End whose homes and lives have been wrecked by the terror that flies by night.

He hasn't drawn any pay for it since he moved in Sept. 13 and found "just plain hell." Running the shelter gives him something to do since the German Air Force blew his "nice little optician's shop" to bits.

It was 11:30. Twenty feet underground, you could hear the rumble of bombs and thud-thud of the anti-aircraft guns. People were wakeful and restless, chattering in the narrow brick passageways.

Mickey pulled aside the curtain at the entrance to a cubicle. "Fifty people in there," he said, flashing his lights over three rows of bunks, stacked three high. Two little girls, their faces whiter than their pillows, lay in the nearest. They whined fretfully in their sleep.

People were sitting on their bunks in another cubicle gossiping. They greeted Mickey fondly.

"How is everything, momma?" he asked an old crone.

The people have striven to make the cubicles homelike with what is left of their possessions. Photographs of Deanna Durbin and Vivien Leigh smile down in the midst of squalor.

The names of London's swankiest hotels—the Savoy, Dorchester, Ritz, Grosvenor House—were chalked above the entrances to the cubicles.

There were figures lying in the corridors.

"We give married folks first call on the bunks," said Mickey, "but there aren't nearly enough to go around. We need another 2,000."

A man and his wife were sleeping with their baby between them on the cold cement floor. Most single men had only one blanket. It was damp and chill. The air reeked of disinfectant, and other smells.

Just as though it were a country lane in Hampshire, a boy and girl stood talking and giggling.

"We've got a doctor who used to practice among these people," Mickey said. "He isolates people with skin disease. He does what he can, gives the kids gargles and takes care of the old and sick. He tries to disinfect the place, but that's hard because we haven't got any real water supply. . . . We've only had him for a week though.

"There's no running water. We have to go outside with a bucket. Sometimes when it's hot (dangerous) outside, we cut cards for it. We need running water badly. Some of these people haven't had their clothes off or had a bath in weeks. Look at that old lady in the wheel chair. She's been out of this shelter only once since Sept. 13.

"When I came down here it was horrible. People were sitting up because there wasn't enough room to lie down. I got some young fellas that had been raising hell and put them to work. Work was all they needed. We got some bunks from the borough and some chemical toilets. We've been getting some stuff every week. Not much, not enough, but some."

He perched on the edge of the bunk and swung his legs. His eyes glowed with pride.

"People are pretty good down underneath. They can take a lot. If we can keep disease down, we will get through the winter all right."

Warsaw News

The play "Home Ties" presented in Warsaw on Wednesday evening by St. James Cheerful Workers' Bible Class was well attended and appreciated. Proceeds were divided between Warsaw United W.M.S. and Y.P.

The annual meeting of the United Church W.M.S. was held in the parsonage on Thursday with a good attendance. Don't Want To Pay

FLANAGAN, Ill., Dec. 2—(AP).—The voters have the Flanagan School Board just a little perplexed. They voted to build a new high school and authorized the board to purchase a site, but defeated a proposal to issue $100,000 in bonds to pay for the school, land and equipment.

WAR SAVINGS COMMITTEE

An Urgent Message

To Every Employer

It is imperative that $10,000,000 every month be saved from the pay envelopes of wage and salary earners — and invested in War Savings Certificates.

At present, the splendid co-operation of many firms and individuals is resulting in an investment of about $2,500,000 a month in War Savings Certificates. But with the present course of the war this is not enough — heavier demands for more production require the increased objective of $10,000,000 a month.

To secure this amount, EVERY employee in Canada must save, and EVERY employer in Canada must encourage his employees to save. This not only applies to those who are sharing in the $35,000,000 monthly addition to payroll earnings which has resulted from increased business activity during the first year of the war, but to every wage and salary earner in Canada there comes the "Call to Sacrifice".

Some employers are alive to this fact. Many of them are not. Or, if they have the War Savings Plan in operation in their plant or office, their employees are not in it 100%, or are saving in such small amounts as to make it impossible to reach the increased objective of $10,000,000 each month. This condition must be changed immediately, as only an all-out 100% effort from both employers and employees will do the job required.

This 100% participation must be Canada's answer to Germany, where coercion is used to secure money. We must show the enemy, and show him NOW, that we can do voluntarily what he is doing by coercion.

Why The Help of Every Employer Is Needed

FIRST — Because Canada is at war — a war for survival as a nation. To carry on this war requires a tremendous production of the sinews of war.

SECOND — Because we must not allow our productive capacity to be diverted from our war effort by unnecessary spending.

THIRD — Because to the greatest possible extent, employees must be protected against upsetting post-war readjustments.

Remember, War Savings NOW, will provide a vast backlog of purchasing power for ordinary commodities when the inevitable period of post-war readjustment arrives.

To the extent that savings from pay envelopes are mobilized, there will be a curb upon inflation. If employees spend all of their earnings as fast as they get them, there will be rising prices, inflation and the evils that follow.

How Employers Can Help

Experience shows that the easiest and most convenient way for your employees to save is by a War Savings Payroll Plan. We ask you as an employer — whether you have 5 employees or 25,000 — to instal such a Payroll Plan; and to see that it is carried out effectively for the duration of the war.

So that employees will understand the need for saving we shall send you at intervals small bulletins to put in pay envelopes, and shall publish advertisements frequently in the press giving reasons for savings, telling where the money goes, and how savings vitally affect our war effort. Factory posters will be supplied at intervals. Honour Roll Certificates will be awarded for achieving 75% to 100% of participation by permanent employees. The necessity for regular saving will be constantly impressed upon every man, woman and child in the country.

You as an employer have a grave responsibility. The leadership in your organization must come from you. We count upon you to give this leadership. To get the plan working efficiently will, we know, involve more clerical work, but we must ask you to consider that as part of your contribution to the nation's war effort.

Nothing is more vital to the successful prosecution of Canada's war effort than the mobilization of the nation's savings. It is a gigantic task, but it must be done. We must not fail. And in the fulfillment of this task Canada is relying upon you to do your part.

To Every Employee

If we could sit down as man to man and talk about War Savings, we know that you as loyal men and women would strain every nerve to help us do what it is imperative to do to win this war.

Because, in these days you men and women who are the wage and salary earners are really in the "front line". And you are a mighty important part of that "front line" — as producers and savers.

You are striking Hitler as you carry on with your day-by-day work — keeping up vital production for both war and domestic requirements.

In addition, you fire a shot every time you put a dollar into War Savings Certificates. Because some of you don't quite understand the tremendous importance of this, we are talking it over with you — frankly.

Because to defeat our foes — and make no mistake about this—we simply must count upon the pay envelopes of Canada to produce an investment of $10,000,000 a month in War Savings Certificates. At present, loyal employees in many firms are saving about $2,500,000 a month in this manner. But this is not enough, as the course of the war is making heavier and heavier demands for the production of military, naval and air supplies and equipment.

The enemy is coercing his people to raise money. We must show the enemy that we can, and that we will, do more by a united voluntary effort than any people can do by coercion.

We can and we shall get $10,000,000 a month if EVERYONE saves his or her share. There must be no shirking, no putting-off, no "letting George do it". If necessary, you must sacrifice in order to save, for therein lies the path of duty and honour.

Why You Should Save and Lend To Your Country

FIRST, because you are helping to build planes and ships — to furnish guns and ammunition.

SECOND, because you are building a cash reserve for yourself — for your family — for the "after the war" period.

THIRD, because every dollar you spend unnecessarily may take people and machines away from war production and thus help the enemy.

You may ask: "What about the big fellows, what are they doing? What are you getting from them?" Be assured that the government is going after the big money, and getting it. Employers, executives, and wealthy people will tell you that. But, in addition to the big money, you wage and salary earners must lend Canada $10,000,000 every month.

To buy 25c War Savings Stamps is good; they have their place. Sixteen of these buy a War Savings Certificate. But employees must save in dollars. Stamps alone will not bring $10,000,000 a month.

No one need go without actual necessities to save, but we urge you not to buy things which compete for labour and materials with war production.

Save Every Dollar You Can—Lend It To Canada

There's that other vital reason for saving. When this war ends, there will be a period of readjustment. Men who now have good jobs may suddenly find themselves out of work or on short time. Let us hope not. But if you have a substantial sum in War Savings Certificates (accumulated while the war is on), you will be able to "stand the gaff" when industry is changing from a war to a peace time basis. You will be eternally glad THEN that you have saved money NOW.

We have sent to every employer the message you see alongside. When your employer asks you to start saving, or to increase your present savings, co-operate with him.

The following table represents an average basis of saving for a group of employees. These figures are only illustrative, of course, as the amount of saving which is possible will vary according to each individual's family and other economic circumstances.

EARNINGS PER WEEK	SAVINGS PER WEEK	WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES PURCHASED PER YEAR up to $20	up to $1.00	$15 to $65
over $20 to $30	$1.25 to $2.00	$80 to $130
over $30 to $40	$2.25 to $3.50	$145 to $225
over $40	$3.75 to $9.25	$245 to $600*

Men and women, you have a grave responsibility. These are indeed critical times, but Canada has confidence in you. We believe that you, as loyal and courageous citizens, will face the facts. We urge you to save your money and buy War Savings Certificates to see our country through to victory.

W. H. SOMERVILLE and de GASPÉ BEAUBIEN, Joint National Chairmen, War Savings Committee, Ottawa.

DEFIANTS MAKE SURE OF SPOT IN THE BASKETBALL PLAYOFFS

Spitfires Beat Hurricanes In Second Game

Th high-riding Defiants hung up their fourth consecutive triumph by downing Wellingtons 45-30 to make secure one of the two play-off spots while Spitfires hung a 58-40 lacing on Hurricanes to take a long forward step toward the other in Saturdays night's House League games at the Y.M.C.A. as the teams opened the second half.

Defiants who lead the league by two full games can now finish no worse than in a first place tie, while the other winner, Spitfires gained a full game over the losing Hurricanes and Wellington with whom they were tied prior to Saturday's double header Defiants were pressed in the opening half of their game to lead by a slim three points at the half but broke into a scoring rash in the last period to win by a comfortable margin, while Spitfires were held to a last period tie by Hurricanes after amassing an 18 point lead at the rest period.

Defiants were pushed all through the opening half of their game before counting several quick baskets just before the half to lead 17-14 at that point as the losers were checking hard and easily, holding their own with the league leaders. The winners opened the last half scoring and a fast breaking attack began to pay off with their lead slowly increasing as the game drew to a close. Wellington's seemed to have trouble with the winner's rugged zone defense and scored a good percentage of their tries from well out, while Defiants were working the ball in close but missing good chances with mediocre shooting. Both teams were featuring a fast break and play moved from end to end at a fast clip all the way, particularly in the last half as the teams ran in 44 points in that fast period. Despite their comfortable margin, Defiants were forced all the way and it was anybody's game for the first three quarters of the distance, before the last period drive by the winners put them out of danger. Defiants made but three of the ten free throws awarded them while the losers were counting six of their nine tries from the free throw line. K. Gillespie and MacPherson at guard and C. Gillespie, Currie and Craig led the winners up front, with Ferguson, Marsh and Grose best for the losers. The teams:

Defiants, 45—Centre, Craig (15); forwards, Currie (7), C. Gillespie (3); guards, McPherson (4); K. Gillespie (9); subs, Spencely (2), Burns.

Wellingtons, 30—Centre, Ferguson (10); forwards, Dougherty (4), Broadley (3); guards, Marsh (11), Grose (2).

Referee—Al Clarke.

Spitfires crumpled Hurricanes' defense in the first half and ran up a commanding 32-14 lead at that point in a wide open second game and despite the losers' rally in the final quarter the best they could do was earn a tie in that period and never threatened the winners' long margin. Both teams opened it up wide and abandoning defense went all out in an offensive dogfight that featured long passing, fast breaking attacks and alternately brilliant and mediocre sharpshooting by both teams. Spitfires had a big edge in the opening period and taking full advantage ran up a big lead and the last period while ending in a tie was largely the losers' period, Spitfires just managing to match them in scoring with several quick break-away baskets near the end. Despite the winners' impressive margin it was a fast, wide open fray with Hurricanes holding a larger portion of the play than the final result would indicate and with a little more defensive play around their baskets and on Spitfires' fast breaks would have cut further into the winners' first half lead. Spitfires converted six out of a possible ten free throws into points and the losers made six points that way out of 12 tries. Stewart, Dyer, Gemmel and Sedgewick led the winners and McArthur, Rogow and Thorburn were outstanding for the losers. The teams:

Spitfires, 58 — Centre, Stewart (23); forwards, Dyer (13); Gemmel (9); guards, Sedgewick (3), West (10); subs, Kay.

Hurricanes, 40—Centre, McArthur (11); forwards, Csumrick (2), Thorburn (20); guards, Rogow (4), Weese; subs, Garvie (1), Clapham.

Referee—Lloyd Grose.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Ottawa Rough Riders, outlasting the Toronto Balmy Beach team in a tough battle played under the worst weather and field conditions possibly in the history of senior playoffs, picked up a six-point lead over the O.R.F.U. champions in Toronto Saturday. The final count was 8 to 2 and as a result Riders will start the second game on their own grounds Saturday with a sizable margin. Saturday's game proved little or nothing except that Ottawa had the equipment necessary in that kind of going and when they finally got it into play it was sufficient for them to win by the margin of a converted touchdown. That weapon was the plunging ability of Dave Sprague and Bunny Wadsworth with able assistance in the same department from Murray Griffin and Andy Tommy. They were called on when the steel arm of Burke and the fleet legs of Andy Tommy and Tommy Daly had been found of little value under the existing conditions and the tanks did the trick.

* * * * * *

In other words Ottawa fell back upon the power that they employed to so much advantage several seasons ago. Wadsworth had been used very little as a plunger this season; in fact Les Ascott remarked Saturday night that he could not remember the big fellow carrying the ball against Argos at all. Nor had Sprague been called upon as often as usual. The two came into their own Saturday, for after Beaches and Riders had battled each other to a standstill over most of the journey, it was Sprague and Wadsworth who pounded through Beaches' line for substantial, if not spectacular gains, paving the way for Ottawa's one touchdown that came with little more than five minues to go. With the field frozen and slippery, covered with snow and a blizzard blowing, only the tanks could make any sizable progress and they finally won for the Riders.

* * * * * *

The Bammies, always unlucky in the matter of weather for their big game lived up to their advance notices in two respects. They exhibited the dogged defence that was expected of them and they also showed the lack of scoring punch close in that the critics had complained of in reference to their season's work. Twice they had the ball practically on Ottawa's goal line and twice they failed to cross that line, although it must be remembered that on the second occasion Frankie Seymour, their best plunger, was off the field. Beaches, outweighed along the line, fought tenaciously and it was well into the last period before they finally had to yield to victory for the day at least, to the Rough Riders. It is too early to even guess at the weather conditions for the second game. Nor is it possible to imagine what might happen if the two clubs happened to meet on a dry field. As it stands, Ottawa will be odds-on favorites to cop the C.R.U. championship.

Looks Like A Real Group

Peterborough hockey interests have been worrying all fall about grouping for this winter. In view, however, of the group announced by the O.H.A. Saturday for this section of the Senior B series it looks as if much of the anxiety was for nothing. The addition of Kingston and Whitby to the setup along with Belleville and the Trenton R.C.A.F. furnished a group that in point of interest is superior to any arrangement in recent years, although the travelling expenses will necessarily be increased. Interestingly enough the group includes two champion clubs of last season, the Petes who were the intermediate A winners and Whitby who were the intermediate B title-holders. The junior grouping finds the young Petes in with Lindsay and Oshawa Bees, a group that should provide some bright hockey in the 'teen age division.

* * * * * *

That senior section should prove a real argument. The Kingston Hockey Club can be counted upon to turn up with a strong club. Belleville with Hastie, Gow and Donahue added to the squad, will be much more formidable than last season. They have new backing this winter and there will probably be a different spirit in the outfit than there has been for several seasons. Little news has come out from Trenton but Tommy Laurence is again at the head of things at the Airport and that means that the Flyers will probably trot out a smooth-working, well-balanced and fighting squad that will provide plenty of opposition for all and sundry. As for Whitby they won the intermediate B honors last season and there is no doubt that they will not find the step up to Senior B too big. They will be able to use Oshawa players who do not make the Senior A grade and that means they will have a lot of material.

* * * * * *

The Y.M.C.A. House Basketball League which has been featuring airtight games broke away from the pattern Saturday night when two of the freest-scoring games of the season were staged. Defiants, the unbeaten league leader, did not need the benefit of overtime on this occasion to register their fourth straight win. They took the battling Wellingtons into camp 45 to 30 and as a result of their victory made certain of nothing worse than a tie for first place at the end of the schedule. They only had a three-point lead at the half but breaking fast from their zone defence system in the second half piled up a lead. Spitfires took sole possession of second place by trouncing the Hurricanes in a rapid-fire game in which the two teams came within a basket of hitting the 100 mark. Spitfires sparked by Joe Stewart who scored so often he was tossing them in from memory at the end of the game won by 58 to 40, the top score of the current campaign.

Leafs Are Rolling

In a week-end of high-scoring feats Toronto Maple Leafs lengthened their lead in the N.H.L. race by overwhelming Amerks 6 to 1 on Saturday night and winning a hard-fought game over the hot Red Wings in Detroit Sunday by 3 to 1. The double victory put Hap Day's crowd far in front of the field. New York Rangers, after apparently coming to life Saturday night and slapping a 6 to 1 defeat on the Canadiens, bogged down again in Chicago Sunday night when the biggest crowd of the season, 16,206 fans, saw the Hawks win their first home victory of the season at the expense of the Young Men of Manhattan 3 to 1. Meanwhile the Boston Bruins were serving notice that they have shaken off their lethargy and from now on are playing for keeps. With the score tied at 3-3 at the end of the second period the Bruins cut loose with seven goals in a row in the third session to win 10-3.

* * * * * *

Incidentally there were some notable individual scoring records compiled over the week-end. Hank Goldup got the headlines by scoring four goals in a row against Amerks on Saturday night. It was not a record for Harvey Jackson scored four in one period years ago and Pit Lepine once scored five times in one game for the Canadiens. Goldup was not the only player to perform the hat trick, Eddie Wiseman of the Boston Bruins scoring three in a row Sunday night against Amerks. Bill Cowley of the Bruins however compiled the highest scoring record of the season by figuring in six of the 10 goals scored by Boston, getting two goals and four assists. His six points sent him right up to the top of the scoring ladder. Bryan Hextall and Sweeney Schriner were other players who fattened their averages.

Ottawa Roughriders Take 8-2 Lead Over Balmy Beach in Finals

The Eastern Canada grid final between Ottawa Roughriders, Big Four champs, and Toronto Balmy Beach, unbeaten champions of the O.R.F.U., was played on a slippery blanket of snow as a blizzard raged around the players. Ottawa defeated the Beaches, white sweaters, 8-2, in the first of the "home and home" games.

Shore's Team Is Well In Lead

(By the Canadian Press.)

The name of Eddie Shore rarely appears in the scoring summaries for Springfield Indians these days —the "Mr. Hockey" of 14 National Hockey League seasons has too many other duties with the top team in the American Hockey League.

There are few of the end-to-end rushes that were characteristic of Shore in his 13 seasons with Boston Bruins and one with New York Americans. He is attending strictly to business—the business being to coach his Indians while holding down a regular defence post on the team.

Springfield Well in Front

That the business is successful can be seen with a glance at the league standings. With nine victories and four draws in 15 starts, Springfield is well in front of the Eastern section and also has compiled three more points that Cleveland Barons, top team in the Western division.

Shore still can carry the mail on occasion, however, as he proved while the Indians were turning in two more victories during the week-end, with a 5-3 triumph over New Haven Eagles and a 6-5 win over Buffalo Bisons.

Springfield was trailing 5-4 in Buffalo last night when Eddie started the play that resulted in Chuck Corrigan slapping home the tying counter. The example inspired Fred Thurier, league-leading scorer, to bag his fourth point of the game and give Springfield the victory with an unassisted goal in the last minute.

Game Went Into Overtime

The Indians had been forced into overtime for their Saturday victory against New Haven in Springfield. Goals by Charlie Mason and Glenn Brydson in the extra session gave Springfield the triumph after Chuck Corrigan had scored two and Bus Wycherley one in the regular time. The New Haven scorers were Marcel Tremblay, Earl Roche and Don Willson.

Cleveland, top Western section team, failed to keep pace with their co-leader when they lost 3-2 to Hershey Bears Saturday, although beating Providence Reds 4-2 Sunday. In other Sunday games, New Haven defeated Philadelphia Ramblers 6-1 and Pittsburg Hornets downed Indianapolis Capitals 4-1, while Saturday's games were rounded out when Philadelphia beat Buffalo 3-1 and Pittsburg defeated Providence, 6-2.

Week-End Stars

By The Canadian Press

Henry (Hank) Goldup, Toronto, who was one short of the league record in scoring four goals as the Maple Leafs whipped New York Americans, 6-1, Saturday night.

Neil Colville, Rangers, whose first-period goal started the Rangers on their first victory in four games with a 6-1 triumph in New York Saturday over Canadiens.

Eddie Wiseman and Bill Cowley, Boston, who sparked the Bruins to a 10-3 triumph over Americans Sunday. Wiseman picked up three goals and an assist while Cowley scored two goals and helped in four others.

Paul Goodman, Chicago, who turned in another strong goaling exhibition as the Black Hawks whipped Rangers 4-1 last night.

Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, Toronto, who picked up his third point of the week-end by scoring the first goal in the Maple Leafs' triumph over Detroit Sunday night.

Kingston Wins Rugby Title

KINGSTON, Dec. 2. — Kingston Headquarters won the O.R.F.U. Intermediate "B" championship in a snowbound sudden death final here Saturday afternoon, beating Kitchener by a 7 to 0 score.

The Kitchener team, representing Training Centre No. 10, was originally awarded the O.R.F.U. title, but risked it in accepting the challenge of the Kingston soldiers, representing Military District No. 3.

Ground conditions made good football difficult, but despite the cold and bad footing, it was a good grid display, and the result was in doubt until Bob Elliott crossed the Kitchener goal line for a converted touchdown in the closing minutes of play.

Leo Banderia, a Queen's junior student, who was added to the team as a C.O.T.C. representative, was the difference in the two teams. His power plunges that knifed through the Kitchener line and often went past the secondary, put the Kingston soldiers in position for their first point, and also helped in scoring the touchdown, while his gains kept Kitchener away from the scoring zone.

Kingston scored on a kick to the deadline in the first period when Cass recovered a Kitchener fumble. Kinnear made 25 around the Kitchener end, Banderia plunged for a first down, and, following a reverse on a penalty, Jesse kicked for a point.

The teams fought on even terms until late in the last period, when Kitchener tried a forward pass in an effort to get a tying point and Elliott intercepted. After gains by Banderia and Kinnear, Elliott went over for a try on a fake forward pass play, which he also converted.

Ottawa Takes 6-Point Lead On Beach Team

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Dec. 2 — (CP). — The stamp of a champion is upon the team that has power within the opposition 10-yard line. Lack of that essential comomdity may make Balmy Beach runner-up to Ottawa for the 1940 Canadian Rugby Union championship.

You may think from Saturday's 8-2 score in favor of Ottawa here, and from statistics on the game, that the opening joust of the home-and-home, total-points Eastern title series was something of a cakewalk for Ottawa's ponderous but mobile Roughriders. If you have that impression, you are wrong. For Beaches had more scoring opportunities than Ottawa, but couldn't make them count because of something they lacked all season—power when the heat is on.

Beaches Outlucked.

Twice in the second quarter Beaches had the ball on Ottawa's goal-line. Both times they failed to score, and through the stands snow-sodden fans recognized that impotency as the one fault perceptible in the Balmy Beach team during an unbeaten and untied Ontario Rugby Football Union season.

From another angle, Ottawa's stalwart wingline had plenty to do with Beaches' failures in pay territory. That mighty forward wall was tossing 'em back all afternoon, digging cleats deep into Varsity Stadium's snow-covered surface to stand firm against the best efforts of Frankie Seymour and his running mates in the Beach backfield.

7,000 Saw Game.

A scanty crowd of 7,000 watched Riders' gain a six-point lead for the second game of the series in Ottawa on Saturday. Early in the game, Beaches looked good everywhere, but near the Ottawa goal-line, but by the fourth quarter they were tired and ineffective. Bruce Barron, outstanding as secondary defence during the contest's earlier stages, was hurt and forced from the game in stopping Dave Sprague in the second quarter.

Without him, Beaches couldn't stand the consistently heavy pounding and the interprovincial champions started to roll. In the second half there was only one team on the field, and with seven minutes to go when Dave Sprague took Andy Tommy's lateral and smashed over the line for the game's only touchdown he climaxed a show of power that had made that touchdown inevitable.

Navy Defeats Army Team 14-0

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(AP)— For one of the few times this season, major football games in the United States went strictly according to form Saturday—even to the classic Army-Navy game, considered about the toughest to predict.

Navy which had looked the better of the two all season, won 14-0 before 102,000 fans at Philadelphia, mainly on the strength of its fine line and the running of Bill Busik and Howie Clark.

Boston College, Tennessee and Stanford all came through to complete their regular seasons unbeaten and untied and to turn toward New Year's day Bowl games. Mississippi State, tied once but undefeated, also won along with Nebraska and Fordham. Fordham, once beaten but highly regarded, immediately received and accepted an invitation to play an unnamed opponent in the Dallas Cotton Bowl.

The Dallas group and the New Orleans Sugar Bowl were the first under the wire with their invitations, announcing them while Stanford was only halfway through the task of beating California 13-7 to clinch its right to play in the Rose Bowl on New Year's day. Tennessee and Boston College snapped up the Sugar Bowl bids as soon as they were offered. Mississippi State, 13-0 conqueror of Alabama, announced acceptance of an invitation to play in the Orange Bowl at Miami against an unannounced opponent.

Tennessee whipped Vanderbilt 20-0 through the great running of Johnny Butler and Buist Warren over a rain-drenched gridiron. Boston College's Eagles got just the break they needed to conquer Holy Cross 7-0, scoring in the final period after recovering a fumble on the five-yard line.

Stanford thrilled 80,000 spectators by staging two well executed scoring drives in the first half and then by holding California for four downs, on the one-yard line before finally yielding a touchdown late in the final quarter.

Fordham, upset in mid-season by St. Mary's of California, clinched its Cotton Bowl invitation by whipping New York University 26-0.

Fordham's opponent probably will be chosen tomorrow by Southwest Conference faculty members. In the running are Texas Aggies, who may be chosen for the Rose Bowl, and Rice and Southern Methodist, whose victories Saturday preserved their chances to tie the Aggies for the conference crown. S.M.U. defeated Texas Christian 16-0 and Rice turned back Baylor 21-12. They meet this week.

LEAFS DEFEAT AMERICANS AND RED WINGS IN WEEK-END GAMES

Goldup Scores Four Goals Against Amerks

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

To ex-pilot Dick Irvin must go an assist for the groundwork, but credit Coach Clarence (Happy) Day with the actual score for polishing off the play that already has Toronto Maple Leafs gaining plaudits as at least the equal of the "wonder teams" of the Irvin-coached "Kid Line" days.

The Maple Leafs, always a potent factor in the National Hockey League, never in recent years has been quite the club that swept to a Stanley Cup in 1932. That was when Irvin had the Conacher-Primeau-Jackson trio in its hey-day with men like Red Horner, King Clancy and Day himself roaming the defence.

Constant infusion of new blood by Irvin has kept the Leafs near the top since, but Dick switched to Montreal Canadiens before the start of the season with a revamped Toronto lineup still in its "potential" stage. The way that lineup is travelling is a tribute to the Irvin construction ability as well as to his successor and former pupil, Happy Day, for knowing what to do with it.

Play "Two-Way" Hockey

Specialists in "two-way" hockey —which is also an Irvin trait—Day has the Maple Leafs fairly flying at the top of the league standing. They've lost only two games and tied none in beating every other club in the loop at least once, and made it read "nine" in the win column with successive triumphs over New York Americans and Detroit Red Wings during the week-end.

It was the outstanding feat of a five-game week-end in which there were other surprises. Boston Bruins turned in the next biggest by running up 10 goals to defeat the Americans 10-3 while New York Rangers lost 4-1 to Chicago Black Hawks after showing a flicker of the form that made them Stanley Cup holders in whipping Montreal Canadiens, 6-1.

A New Leaf Line

There were new starts to herald in the Leafs' victory—perhaps a new line to revive the popularity of the famous "kid line." That was the Hank Goldup-Gus Marker-Pete Langelle trio, which Goldup sparked by scoring four goals in the Leafs 6-1 triumph over Americans in Toronto Saturday night.

Goldup scored Leafs four goals to come one short of a league record while Langelle helped in three of them and Marker in two. Norm Larson had sent the Americans into a 1-0 lead before Goldup counted three times in the initial session and once more in the second. Dave Schriner and Billie Taylor were the other marksmen.

Detroit Beaten 3-1.

The Leafs travelled to Detroit for their Sunday victory, turning back the challenge of the onrushing Red Wings with a 3-1 triumph over the second-place club. Goals by Schriner, Wally Stanowski and Gord Drillon gave them a 3-0 lead in the first period before Detroit countered on a goal by Sid Abel in the second.

At New York Sunday, Boston Bruins ran up the highest score of the season in whipping the Americans. Bill Cowley picked up six points in the victory with two goals and four assists while Eddie Wiseman planked home three goals and aided in another.

The other Boston marksmen were Woddy Dumart with two goals, and Art Jackson, Mel Hill and Roy Conacher with one each. Buzz Boll, Charlie Conacher and Lorne Carr scored for the Amerks.

The Black Hawks meanwhile jumped into third place behind Detroit with their victory over Rangers in Chicago before a crowd of 16,208. The Black Hawks took a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Max Bentley and Bill Carse, adding to it on Cully Dahlstrom's counter in the next. Phil Watson scored for Rangers and Bill Thoms for Chicago in the final frame.

As Leafs Defeated Rangers 4-2

Goalie Broda, of the Toronto Maple Leafs, has just made a save on a shot rifled at him by Heller (3) of the New York Rangers, at Madison Square Garden, New York City. Kampman (7) and Langelle (8) of the Leafs go after the loose puck. The Leafs won, 4-2.

Tom Grattan Is Winner Of Free-For-All

TORONTO, Dec. 2.— Tom Grattan, owned by the Pine Ridge Stable of London, proved the class of the free-for-all pace, only event completed of a seven-race harness program at Dufferin Park on Saturday. Right at home in the wintry conditions, the Orcus Grattan gelding swept to a straight-heats triumph under the skilful guidance of Driver James.

Installed as favorite, Tom Grattan did not let his backers down. He won the first heat in the fine time of 2.11¾, and the second in 2.14¾. Only in the third dash was he really forced to the limit, coming through in the stretch to nip Lastic Grattan at the wire and gain his third straight triumph. Lastic Grattan was second in each heat and Chestnut Bars third.

Ten of the scheduled twenty-one heats were completed. The remainder will be run off this afternoon.

Joe Harvester, the favorite, won the first heat of the first race, coming from behind to defeat Miss Harriet Forbes and Grim Frisco in 2.19¾. Guy Pluto won the only heat raced in the second event, winning handily over Oxford Lad and Peggy Patch in 2.20¼. Martha Lee, a 4-to-1 shot, took the first heat of the third race, making a fine stretch drive to beat Bruno Dewey and Grattan Lee in 2-17. Princess Lee won the first dash of the fourth race, setting her own pace to get home in front of Lee Oliver and Nealton. Second heat of the fourth race resulted just the reverse, Lee Oliver gaining the verdict over Princess Lee, Irene Harvester was third.

Albert E. Grattan, held at 5 to 1, defeated Laurel Watts and All Grattan in the fine time of 2.12¼ in the first heat of the sixth event. Another outsider, Teddy Davenport, clicked at 15 to 1 in the first event of the seventh race, beating Oliver Grattan and Tony Grattan.

Brooklyn Has Deal Brewing With Cardinals While Reds And Boston Bees Making Deal

ATLANTA, Dec. 2—(AP).— Major league trade talk was heard freely today as baseball's moguls began their annual bargaining season as a side attraction to Wednesday's convention of the minor loops. Two National leaguers, President Larry MacPhail of Brooklyn and Manager Frankie Frisch of Pittsburg, led the increasing procession of Big Time leaders into Atlanta.

Catchers Mickey Owen and Gus Mancuso, other players and cash were mentioned in a deal brewing between Brooklyn and the St. Louis Cardinals.

Cincinnati and the Boston Bees reportedly were considering a deal involving Infielders Eddie Miller and Billy Myers, along with about $60,000. The St. Louis Browns are known to be ready to dishout cash for two pitchers and a seasoned catcher, although they are unwilling to part with any of their regulars. Washington wants two infielders and an outfielder. Boston's Red Sox have an eye out for Catcher Frank Hayes of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Some hints were dropped that the minors are seeking a voice in the selection of baseball's commissioner. He is now chosen by the majors.

Club 104 Years Old

Hamilton, two past presidents, took part. Games were played afternoon and evening with prizes going to rinks skipped by Col. L. Jones, W. A. Mahoney, E. F. McIntyre, Rev. Dr. C. E. Kenney, Dr. Ruddell and H. C. Steele.

Man Is Injured Removing Car From Ditch

George Reynolds, 46, of Courtice, Ont., received severe injuries that may necessitate the amputation of his right leg, as the result of an accident on Highway 28, 3½ miles south of Peterborough early Saturday night when he was hit by an automobile as he was helping to push a tow truck that was trying to pull a car out of the ditch.

Reynolds was caught between the truck and the car and his right leg smashed so badly that he sustained a fracture of the upper part of the thigh and a bad compound fracture of the leg below the knee. He is in St. Joseph's Hospital in a serious condition.

The injured man had been a passenger in a car driven by Norman Bothwell, R.R. 3, Bowmanville, that had been proceeding away from Peterborough when it and another car driven by Walter Ockender, Carlaw Avenue, Toronto, slightly sideswiped each other. As a result of the impact Bothwell's car left the road and went into the snow-filled ditch. No one was injured but assistance was necessary to extricate the car. A message was sent to Peterborough and a tow truck from the Duffus garage, driven by Jack Buchanan, was soon on the scene. The truck was hitched to the ditched car but found it difficult to obtain traction and Reynolds and David Bothwell, father of the driver or the machine that was being towed started to push the truck.

Soon after Douglas M. Hall, of Toronto, and formerly of Peterborough came along in a car. He told police that he saw the light of the truck and though it was a machine proceeding toward Peterborough and attempted to pass it.

In doing so his car smashed into Reynolds, who was near the front of the truck and the unfortunate man was jammed between the two vehicles.

He was brought into Peterborough by Gordon Montgomery, Braidwood avenue, and Harold Babbs, 353 Stewart street, who came along in a bread truck and took the injured man to St. Joseph's Hospital.

It was snowing heavily at the time of the accident.

November Snow Is Heaviest In Twenty Years

Early Sunday morning Peterborough city and district residents started to dig their way out of the heaviest early winter accumulation of snow for the past twenty years. The three day snowfall blasted twenty year records with a total depth of 13.6 inches for the month of November, and practically all fell since Tuesday of last week to bring Old Man Winter in with a rush.

City residents suffered the most discomfort as cars parked in front of houses were marooned and close to a hundred cars slid off the road and stayed there. Taxi men did a land-office business and receipts of the Peterborough Bus system soared to Christmas levels.

Despite the heavy snowfall there was little disruption in essential services throughout the district. Farmers brought milk in to the city dairies as usual and Stock's Bread truckers got through without undue trouble Friday and Saturday. Alex John, the supervisor, reported that No. 2 highway from Port Hope to Belleville was the worst portion of highway the men travelled on. One bread truck had a smashed spring shackle and one of Darrel Rose's taxis had a broken drive shaft.

All rural mail carriers were through on time on Staurday and the DeNure bus to Lindsay is operating on schedule except that volume of business is heavy. Ivan Fletcher's bus from Keene is still maintaining the schedule and reports from other bus lines are equally encouraging.

Duncan MacKiver, county engineer reported that two power maintainers were in use on Saturday and Sunday on the county roads and on Sunday the county plow started its winter work. This plow was in use down to Keene, out to Westwood and down Hastings way operating from early last night until late this morning.

All main county roads were open and although somewhat heavy, truckers and other regular road users figured there would be little trouble unless it started to blow.

In the city the Board of Works departments found itself plunged into a mid-winter snow removal problem, but strange as it appears sufficient men turned up at the Board of Works yards to meet the demands. Two graders were busy all day Sunday and by Sunday night Jim Burgess, street commissioner had, 12 trucks and 34 men on the job removing snow from the city streets. This morning there was at least that many and a fleet of trucks moved in a steady line between the busy shovellers. The gang of men made short work of snow removal on several streets and looked like an army of ants, hard at work.

Mr. Burgess was on the job until three this morning and started the crews out on a program of work early today. The men were working with clockwork precision, and by 10 o'clock the downtown streets were cleaned up, from curb to curb.

The rumble of explosions from the French coast across the Channel indicated the R.A.F. was retaliating with new attacks on "invasion ports."

An air raid official in Southampton, discussing the heavy Saturday night raid on that town of about 175,000 population, declared that "if ever there was an indiscriminate bombing, we have had it here."

Many buildings in the centre of the city were wrecked. Several churches were destroyed, as well as a theatre, a newspaper office, a lending library, many shops and homes. The Government said all fires were under control and that the homeless were being cared for.

The Admiralty reported the 1,090-ton submarine Triad overdue and presumed lost. She was a sister ship of the Thetis, which foundered on a trial dive June 1, 1939. The Triad, whose normal complement was 53, torpedoed a 4,000-ton supply ship in Oslo fjord April 2 and nine days later attacked a convoy of supply ships. Two of her torpedoes were reported to have found their mark.

Official sources said the Royal Air Force had downed 201 German and 20 Italian planes over Britain and British waters in November. This was exclusive of planes brought down by anti-aircraft fire from ships or by the fleet air arm. Eight German planes were said to have been destroyed over axis or axis-occupied territory or water in the same period. British losses over Britain and British water were placed at 53 planes, with 28 of the pilots saved.

In the Middle East and the Mediterranean, these sources said, the Italians lost 58 planes in November to 18 for the R.A.F.

The Press Association said yesterday 3,006 axis planes, all but 20 of them German, had been shot down over Britain and British waters since the start of the war.

mental committee was endeavouring to ensure that soldiers skilled in certain types of work would be "returned to war industries as needed."

The men, who will be allowed to wear uniforms while not actually engaged in their work, will be reabsorbed into their former units when returned to active service.

"RING" BELLS MINUS CLAPPERS

Bellringers in a Buckinghamshire, England, church were so anxious to keep in practice that they kept on "ringing" their bells from which the clappers had been removed for the duration of the war.

Some Closeup Shots Of Capital Doings

OTTAWA, Dec. 2 — (CP). — The name of Jean Desy, Minister to Belgium and the Netherlands before the German invasion of those countries, is being mentioned prominently in speculation on forthcoming appointments to new diplomatic posts in Argentina and Brazil.

The Government's decision to exchange ministers with the two South American countries was announced in the House of Commons a fortnight ago by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. He said appointments would be made as soon as possible.

It is believed the Government will continue its recent practice by appointing "career" men to the posts and Mr. Desy fits into this category.

L. B. Pearson, counsellor to Hon Vincent Massey, Commissioner to London, and Escott Reid, Second Secretary at the Legation in Washington, are mentioned as being in line for promotion.

Col. George P. Vanier, former Minister to Paris, is in Canada at present, but the Government has expressed its intention of sending him back to France as soon as a favorable opportunity arises.

Sessional Sidelights

It was 5.50 p.m., 10 minutes before the set adjournment hour for House...Anthony Hlynka, young New Democracy member for Vegreville, stood up...said he: "I call it 6 o'clock."...setting the clock ahead like that is Speaker Glen's privilege so the House laughed... Speaker Glen thought it a joke too, put on his three-cornered hat and left the chamber, signal that Hlynka had the right idea.

R. W. Mayhew (Lib. Victoria) got his metaphors mixed..."shoulders to the task," he put it, instead of "shoulders to the wheel."... The debate was so quiet one day that J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) later said the House was "like a mortuary chamber."

Tom Reid (Lib. New Westminster) still plays the bagpipes in his third-floor office every night... the whole floor likes it...Dr. H. A. Bruce (Con. Toronto-Parkdale) wears a dark gray morning coat like the one Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett wore sometimes when he was Prime Minister.

Odds and Ends

One of the Hansard men reports J. T. Thorson (Lib. Selkirk) is the easiest speaker in the House to take in shorthand...T. L. Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview) is one of the hardest...and Pensions Minister Mackenzie's brogue makes him just about as bad.

The Supreme Court of Canada still is housed in an old building that used to be a carpenter's workshop...its new, ornate building is almost finished but almost all the space is taken up by wartime government staffs...when the Supreme Court moves in hasn't been decided.

Young Farmers Visit Show

A group of young farmers from this district visited the fat cattle show, on Friday, at the Union Stock Yards, West Toronto.

This group is feeding a test lot of butcher cattle for Canada Packers, and the trip to Toronto was a part of the program sponsored by this firm to improve the quality of the beef cattle in this district.

A conducted tour of the Toronto plant of Canada Packers, and the judging of a number of classes at the fat stock show, was of much interest to the members of the delegation. Those attending the show under the plan included, James Hawthorne and Hilliard Edwards of Warsaw; Frank Graystock and Fred Eason, of Keene; Jack Smith, Gordon Fallis, A. Fallis and B. Fallis of Cavan. Other farmers who are feeding cattle on this experiment are James Wittington, of South Monaghan, and V. Stanley-Jones, No. 7 Highway.

It's not only the news of foreign events and national affairs, of battle fronts and political struggles, that makes the newspaper so vital a force in people's lives. It's the news of happenings close at home, too. It's the news of what's going on in the town we live in, among the people we know...the intimate, personal things.

And only in the local newspaper can we satisfy our craving for the local news. For the newspaper first of all reflects the life of the community it serves...and each newspaper, like each community, has characteristics that distinguish it from others.

It's not surprising, in view of the eagerness with which people turn to their local newspapers every day, that advertisers who have anything to sell to any community...or group of communities or all communities...have found newspaper advertising so productive and so economical.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

NARROW SQUEAK

An icicle about 12 inches long slipped from the eave of a George street store and came zooming to the sidewalk on Saturday afternoon, narrowly missing a pedestrian who was loaded down with parcels. The man was so startled that he dropped most of the parcels.

SKIERS ACTIVE

Between one and two hundred skiers took advantage of the excellent ground over the week-end, and were indulging in their favorite pastime at Bethany Hills. All report the snow and the ground to be in the best of shape, and mid-winter conditions were prevalent all through the district.

BADLY NEEDED

In spite of numerous requests, the supply of toys at the Fire Hall, to be distribute amongst the underprivileged children of this city at Christmas, has dwindled rather than grown. A phone call to the Fire Department, 5712, will bring a fireman to the door, to call for any used toys, and Christmas is less than 25 days away.

PETERBORO ON AIR.

Peterboro will be featured in Fred Allen's radio program over CBL Wednesday at 10 p.m. This series of surveys of Canadian cities has been arranged through the co-operation of British-American Oil Company. City Clerk Armstrong said to-day that he had received the first enquiry about the Peterborough chapter nearly two months ago.

A FAMILY TRADITION

Private Tommy Maudsley of the Highlanders, whose picture appeared in The Examiner last week, is the second generation of a local family to serve in the Empire's forces. His father, C. Maudsley, 33 Lafayette avenue, served in the 21st Battalion in World War 1 and his older brother William enlisted with the 93rd and is now with the Veterans' Guard of Canada.

PRIZE WINNERS.

Prize winners at the C.C.F. Draw held on Saturday were G. Davis, 144 Sophia street titcket number 557; one ton of coal. Mrs. V. Bull, 539 Downie street, number 274, electric clock. R. Liddell, 603 Armour Road, number 457, electric toaster. Mrs. J. Gaside, 199 Reid street, number 199, six pairs of hose. W. A. Bromley, 497 Sherbrooke street, numberr 559, one book of theatre tickets.

RED FLANNELS

Red flannels, the real McCoy, are being sold in local men's wear shops for skiers. It seems that when colored ski slacks become wet the color soaks through to white underwear causing discoloration, and clothing manufacturers got the idea that red underwear would solve the problem. The experiment was successful and now several skiers, both male and female are wearing the ankle length flaming red undies.

UNITY ASSUMED.

Hon. G. D. Conant manifestly does not know Lindsay when he suggests that it should be included in a co-operative A.R.P. area with Peterboro as a centre. This is an extended civilian defense plan which the Ontario Government is encouraging as a precaution. The Attorney-General has never heard of Lindsay co-operating with Peterboro, neither have the people in the two neighboring towns, but the suggestion has apparently assumed that naturally they do join hands over the mere twenty-eight miles that separate them.

SPECIAL JUVENILE COURT

CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

Charles Hanna who told the court that he represented a Toronto roofing company pleaded not guilty in police court this morning when he was charged with vagrancy. The police however asked for a remand and the case was enlarged until Thursday morning to allow the authorities to investigate.

RAILWAY SIGN BROKEN

Clifford Lucas, 313 Louis street, who is training at the army camp at the Exhibition Grounds was driving a car south on Water street Sunday. He attempted to pass another vehicle near the Hilliard street crossing of the C.N.R. As he did so his car skidded on the icy road surface, ran over the curb and hit a railway sign, breaking it off.

RETURNS TO BUCKHORN.

Buckhorn's unofficia Mayor has returned to the land of wind, snow and lunge. He is W. A. Atkinson, of Pittsburg. Mr. Atkinson, affectionately known as "Bill," has been home since shortly before te presidential elections in United States, but says he is pleased to be back in Canada. Bill has returned for an "indefinite" period. His friends are asking if he got his man elected.

EXAMINER APPRECIATED

Pte. Perrin Clark, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has reported, in a letter home, that he and the members of the regiment now in England take great pleasure in reading The Peterborough Examiner. A great number of the boys in the H. and P.E. are from Peterborough, and subscribe to this paper. Pte. Clark joined his unit last May, and is now one of the First Division soldiers on active service in England. All the boys are fine, he reports.

DEAD HORSES

Operators of the city graders report that cars parked all night on city streets interfere with plowing the roads. In several parts of the city are cars which have been damaged in accidents and which have been sitting at the curb for several weeks. A parking bylaw makes it an offence to use the street as an all-night garage, but in a few cases where plugged lanes made it impossible to get cars off the streets, the owners had no alternative. Most of these cars however are moved every day but the real dead horses have been sitting at the curb so long, the snow is piled high around them.

SIDESWIPED IN SNOW BANK

An army truck and a private automobile were involved in a traffic accident on Highway 7 three miles north of Peterborough Sunday afternoon. David Tripp, Wilberforce, Ont., was driving his car north and was approaching the brow of the hill near the school house on the Chemong Road when his car plowed into a snow drift. As it did so an army truck from Lindsay driven by Pte. Willis Barr hit the same drift and the two vehicles sideswiped each other. No one was injured and the vehicles were not extensively damaged.

94 New Homes Valued At $293,181

Building figures for the first eleven months of this year soared the highest level in the past fifteen years according to records at the City Engineer's office, and building development in suburban Peterborough shows a healthy gain also.

The grand total up to November 30th is $1,256,376.00 which is almost three times the amount in the first eleven months of 1939 when the building permits totalled $497,635.-00. The figures for the month of November alone went sky-high due to extensive industrial expansion throughout the city, and comparative totals for November of 1940 and 1939 are $812,837 and $48,399.

Last year up to November 30th, permits had been taken out for 95 dwellings at a total estimated cost of $269,675.00 and this year while there was one house less, the grand total went to $293,181.00. This was not due to an advance in the price of building materials but rather to the fact that a better type of house was built. In 1939 there were 456 building permits, but only 394 so far this year.

During the past decade the only year that shows a figure any where near this year's total was in 1930 when the grand total for the 11 months was $787,525.00.

Aided By Industry

Large industrial permits issued during the month just passed were the Canadian General Electric Company, $750,000, Raybestos Company, $16,000 and Raybestos Company, $12,000.

Proof that the last two years have been banner years in home building is indicated by the fact that in 1938, there were only 53 new homes built while last year there were 95 and this year 94.

In North Monaghan township building permits are issued only for houses built in what is known as the building area, which consists of that portion of land bounding Highway 28, and south and west of the Exhibition Grounds. In that section there were 24 new homes built so far this year with several others under construction. In the west end from Monaghan road and north from Sherbrooke street there were at least 14 others, all exceeding $3,000 in cost and some going over the $6,000 mark.

This total tops last year's figures by at least ten per cent and it is possible if weather conditions will permit, other houses will be started before the new year comes in.

Boy Fractures Leg Skiing

Fred Hiln, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hill, suffered a fractured leg while skiing in Victoria Park on Saturday and it is the second time within twelve months tat he has broken a leg.

On December 15th last year he was playing at a neighbor's and was run over by a trailer, suffering a fracture of the right leg below the knee. He was laid up for the greater part of the winter and unable to enjoy skiing.

He has been skiing since he was five so his parents bought him a new pair last week in order that he might have lots of fun this winter, but bad lucky camped on his trail. He was skiing down the park hill about 11 on Saturday morning and had the mishap when he went ito a turn to miss a tree. It is believed that his skis crossed and when he fell his left leg was twisted. The main shin bone is broken and the bone is cracked down toward the ankle.

Fred's brother, Murry Hill, Teddy Broadhurst and Rob Roy were with him at the time, and they carried him over to Dr. Morgan's office. The doctor had him taken to Nicholls Hospital and placed the limb in a cast. He is now at his home.

Officers Under 20 Need Permit To Wed

Under an amended order issued for the Active Canadian Army subalterns and warrant officers under the age of 20 will not be permitted to marry without the permission of their commanding officer. (Warrant officers are those between the ranks of non-commissioned and commissioned officers).

It is also ruled that all non-commissioned officers and men under the age of 19 will be required to produce written consent of their parent or guardian before permission to marry is granted. If the intended wife is under the age of 21, written consent of her parent or guardian also will be required.

Officers, warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men who are required to obtain the necessary consent, and who marry without previously obtaining permission of their commanding officer, will not be eligible for dependents' allowance.

Man Given 15 Days For Theft From Store

"Drink is the cause of the whole trouble," Chief Constable Sam. Newhall stated in police court this morning after Clarence Scholey had pleaded guilty to a shoplifting charge. He was accused of having stolen sweaters and a scarf from Zeller's store on Saturday.

"The man was caught in the store," Crown Attorney McElderry told the court. "He produced a number of articles from underneath his coat and offered a $10 bill in payment. He still had other articles hidden. He had been drinking."

"I don't remember very much about it," Scholey stated.

"You had been drinking?" asked the magistrate and the accused admitted that he had.

"You are not the first man that has gotten in trouble," said Magistrate Langley in sentencing Scholey to fifteen days in jail.

75 Cars Are Parked Over Night On One Mile Of City Streets

In one mile of streets City Engineer Parsons counted on Sunday seventy-five cars that were left standing in front of residences during the night, contrary to the traffic bylaw, and impeding the progress of the two big graders confronted with an emergency job of clearing the roadways of snow.

"Since I have been with the city I have never seen so much snow fall so early in the winter," Mr. Parsons recalled this morning.

The graders were put into action at 1 o'clock Sunday morning, and covered a lot of mileage of snow plowing that would have been considerably increased if the curb sides had not been blocked by cars that should have been in their garages, if they have any.

The short avenues between Charlotte and King streets averaged four offending cars ignoring the bylaw that prohibits their parking for more than five hours.

Mr. Parsons said that he was going to remind the council tonight of this difficulty which prevents the graders of the Board of Works from moving along the streets as quickly as possible. And it happens that owners of cars occasionally complain that the big machines roll up snow barriers around them imposing a shovelling job on their owners.

However, on the other side of the snow picture is the type of citizen represented by the man who took the trouble to call at the city engineer's office this morning with a compliment on the work that was accomplished in clearing car-ways during the week-end.

The meeting opened with a lively sing-song conducted by Kenneth Murray, with Don Murray at the piano. Current events were interestingly given by Allan Eason. The meeting adjourned and dancing concluded the evening.

A FAST WORKER

Sammy Lowe, driver for the Trent Canal, likes boiled eggs, and thereby hangs a tale. At the locks above Nassau the repair gang were working on the gates last week, and they usually made tea in a hut fixed up for their comfort. Sammy secured a tin can and set the can in on top of the coal in the Quebec heater to boil two eggs. When they were done he reached in and grabbed the can, forgetting it was hot. He spilled an egg into the fire but managed to remove the can. Seeing the egg sizzling on the hot coals was too much for Sammy, so he reached in and salvaged it, but burned his hand some more doing it. Then he reached into his lunch box, took a well-buttered sandwich and stuck his fingers between the bread, the butter did the trick, smearing the scorched fingers, and Sammy was little the worse for the injury—McG.

Trainee Suffers Injury To Leg

Wilfred Mable, a trainee at the Exhibition grounds army camp had his left leg bruised Saturday night when he was struck by a car driven by County Constable Bruce Menzies as he was alighting from another vehicle at the camp gate. There had been another car parked on the south side of Lansdowne street facing west and it started to move off as Constable Menzies drove up. In swerving to avoid hitting this vehicle, the Menzies' car came into collision with a car driven by W. C. Carlyle, 203 Park Place, that had just stopped at the north side of Lansdowne street. Mable who was getting out of the Carlyle car had his leg bruised but was not badly hurt.

Winter To Give Nazi Order The 'Hate' Test

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(AP).—The cold gloom of Europe's second war winter is closing in amid multiplying signs that it may see the Axis "new-order" fellowship put to a supreme and perhaps decisive test.

Imponderable factors preclude even a guess as to when, where or how the war will end. Among the horsemen of horror loosed on Europe by the war to make this probably the most tragic Christmas season the Old World has ever known are starvation and freezing cold for tens of millions of non-combatants.

There are discernible, however, certain symptomatic items indicating that there may be greater concern over the winter outlook in Axis Europe than in London. They give the lie to the Nazi-Fascist assumption that mankind in the mass can be dragooned by force alone into a new way of life.

Intimations of tottering national morale point now toward Italy. No other reasonable explanation of the Italian army's fiasco in Greece has been offered. It may have stemmed from Italian public distaste, extending into the ranks of Mussolini's best troops, for the war and the Axis partnership.

Blockade Pinches.

Blundering by Italian strategists and army staffs alone cannot account for Greece's rout of her attackers against great odds of numbers and modern battle gear. The Italian army in Albania was handpicked and carefully prepared for its invasion job. It was composed of forces recruited from Northern Italy, from the Italian Alps. Those Italian units proved the toughest fighters of her first Great War armies, yet in this war they failed at the first test against a foe utterly inferior in numbers and equipment.

It now is revealed by Washington Government reports on Italy's economic plight that the British blockade has been grinding for months at Italian morale. Sharply rationed food and skyrocketing prices are noted. That is all Italy has thus far gleaned from Mussolini's great adventures at war in Ethiopia, in Spain and Greece.

By contrast, in bomb-tortured Britain there is no hint of declining morale. Bright visions of delivering a finishing stroke at Italy are reflected in London war news. The essential pillars of the Hitler-conceived "new order" structure for Continental Europe are lacking still Spain in the west and Bulgaria in the east are still standing aloof.

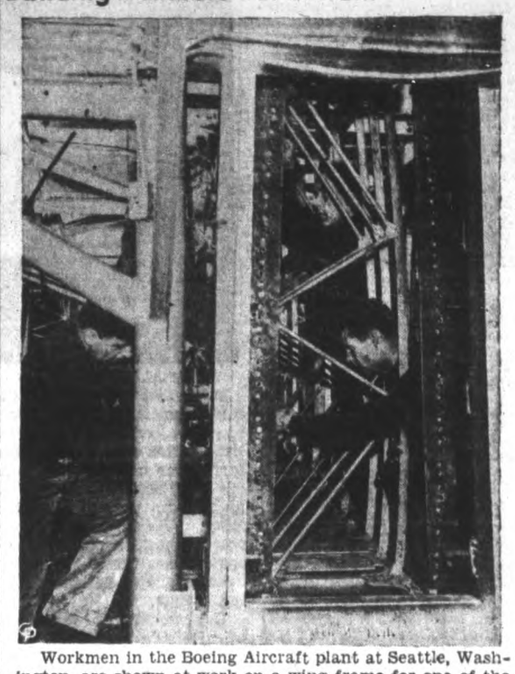
An upsurge of French public reaction has thwarted the Hitler-Laval hopes for an effective political union between Berlin and Vichy. Intimations of popular Free French demonstrations in both German-occupied and unoccupied France leak through censorships.

In Nazi-conquered Norway, Holland and Belgium, the same story is told day by day. Sporadic instances of increasing passive resistance to German mandates and occasional sniping at Nazi patrols dot the news. Quite clearly the first defeat-bred public apathy and despair is giving way across the Channel to hope instilled by Britain's sturdy stand and Greek valor.

The calendar onset of winter is Dec. 21. On that date the night is longest, with daylight lengthening each following day of the spring. As winter passes, Britain's peril from night bombing will decrease, but her peril on Atlantic sea lanes increase with better visability for Nazi raiders of all types.

All told, however, she enters the winter season thrilling with renewed hope that Christmas, despite its war tragedies, will be a season of good cheer if not peace in Britain.

Building Bombers For Britain



Workmen in the Boeing Aircraft plant at Seattle, Washington, are shown at work on a wing frame for one of the 20 22-ton flying fortresses which will go to Britain. The flying fortresses (B-17C's) weigh 22 tons, have a cruising radius of 1,500 miles and carry five-and-a-half tons of bombs at 280 miles per hour speed.

Ambassador J.P. Kennedy Resigns London Post To Aid Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—(AP). — The resignation of Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to Great Britain, made a fresh gap today in the war-depleted ranks of United States Ambassadors to European nations.

Kennedy announced that he was relinquishing the London post after a White House conference with President Roosevelt yesterday. Pending appointment of a successor, a chcice likely to be delayed, Kennedy said Mr. Roosevelt desired him to keep his designation as ambassador, but the envoy made plain he would not return to Britain in that capacity.

Kennedy's resignation, which had been in the President's hands since November 6, predated by a single day that of William C. Bullitt as ambassador to France. John Cudahy resigned last Thursday as ambassador to Belgium.

At present the United States has only two ambassadors at their posts abroad: Laurence A. Steinhardt in Russia and Alexander Weddell in Spain.

Kennedy's resignation did not come as a surprise for it was preceded by a number of such reports which the State Department refused to confirm.

From time to time, several names have been mentioned for the post in the event that Kennedy stepped out. Among those spoken of were Marshall Field, Chicago merchant who has been active in the work of bringing British child refugees here; John G. Winant, former Governor of New Hampshire and one-time Social Security head who is now a director of the International Labor Office; Ray Atherton, a career diplomat now acting Chief of the European Division of the State Department and a former counsellor at the London Embassy, and former Ambassador Bullitt.

Bud Clarke Writes New Regimental Song For Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Unit

One thousand Highlanders swinging through the streets of Canada's capital sing a marching song that was composed by Sgt. Bud Clarke, of Headquarters Company, and former member of the Peterborough Police Force.

The song is sung to the tune of "The Road to the Isles" one of the catchiest of Highland tunes, which although not the regimental march of the Glengarries is still appropriate enough for any Highland unit. Actually this is the regimental march of the Essex Scottish but the words are distinctly new and makes the marching song a perfect ballad for the S.D. and G's. The regimental march of the Glengarries is "Blue Bonnets Over the Border."

The regiment has had 1,200 copies of the song without music printed and every member of the regiment is becoming familiar with the words.

Sergeant Clarke, who was home on week-end leave, went into a huddle with Jack Smith, local barber and the little barber shop on Simcoe street echoed to the strains of the marching son as Jack soon got the swing of the song.

Following is the words to the regimental song of the S.D. and G. Highlanders, First Battalion.

We're the GLENGARRIES. We're the old S.D. & G.
We're the finest in the Highlander Brigade;
We're the GLENGARRIES and we'll soon let Jerry know
Why we volunteered to give Old England aid.

Chorus

We are out to finish something that was started long ago
By our fathers who once sailed across the sea,
And our enemies will wish that they had never heard the shout
GLENGARRY. We're the old S.D. & G.

On the shores of Lake Ontario our folks are filled with pride
Tho' they know that we are sailing o'er the sea,
For they know that England's enemies will dread the battle cry
GLENGARRY. We're the old S.D. & G.

As we go always we will sing our marching song
We'll send our war cry ringing on the breeze;
And we're bringing home the bacon if it takes us twenty years.
GLENGARRY. We're the old S.D. & G.

—By Sgt. W. A. Clarke, S.D. & G.

Fur Goes To The Head

By ALICE ALDEN

EVEN THE oldest inhabitant can't remember when there has been so much fur used for hats. This season the popular all-fur hat view for honors with hats that use fur as an integral part of the trimming. Helen Liebert, top-notch American millinery designer, uses fur to make the brim of one of her most flattering hats.

This model is of pale blue velour. The crown is slightly peaked and sloped in back. The brim, which is of medium width, is trimmed in front with a broad band of blue fox. The smoky blue fur is luxuriously high-lighted with a trimming of deeper blue feather wings at either side. This hat presages the growing importance of the brimmed hat or sailor as the season goes forward into early Spring trends.

St. Andrew's Y.P.S. Meets in Lakefield

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 2—(ENS). — Keeping in mind the theme "In All Things Christ Pre-eminent," Loyalty Night was held by the Y.P.S. of St. Andrew's Church, Lakefield on Sunday evening.

Mrs. Harold Trude, president, opened the meeting by leading in a short song service.

Miss Eva Hendren contributed a solo, entitled "Master No Offering."

The topic, "Christ pre-eminent in our lives, in the church, in the community," was given by T. W. Chaplin.

"In a book entitled, "In His Steps," written by Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, one of the leading characters was a man, who, when he became a Christian, applied the principle of Christianity to his own personal life. When he had to make a decision, he asked himself, "What would Jesus do?" and so the better way would be revealed through his own conscience. This was his way of making Christ pre-eminent in his life.

Christ, pre-eminent in the church life, recalls that one writer has defined the church as a company of people, organized in God and by God.

Lastly, Christ, pre-eminent in the community. It is a spirit of tolerance and mutual service which is most vital here. Such virtues as these which go to make up the foundations of administration must have their nursery. It is in the Christian community that these standards are raised.

The explanation of Loyalty Night and the scripture lesson were read by Miss Ethel Blakely. Guests were present from other Young People's groups of the village.

Peterborough Women Should Avoid Stuffy Rooms as Meeting Settings

(By FLORA)

To be sure there are well-organized, stimulating meetings, lectures and teas by the score in Peterborough this busy season from which anxious women go home cheered and uplifted by awakened knowledge of helpful things they can do to relieve strain and distress, but why, oh why must one sit in stuffy, overheated rooms to obtain this knowledge? Why has the poor lecturer to address an audience whose heads must finally nod because there's too much heat and too little air; why must he carry on though perspiration tickles his spine, his head is well-nigh bursting, and he longs to pitch his glass of water through closed windows and obtain the breath of air that would bring his audience back to him?

Surely the clever, competent women organizers and social workers of the city should be smart enough to know that a moderately heated, well-aired room should be their first consideration when planning a setting for important activities—that a room a little on the cool side becomes decidedly warm when crowded with people a few moments later. Not only should they think of the comfort of those who attend their meetings, but they should consider their own health, which must be kept up if they are to carry on.

A famous physician claims that colds come not from cold but from heat and over-crowding. To prove this theory, one of the physician's followers stood naked in a cold draught for one hour after a steaming hot tub; did the same thing after a cold tub; put on a wet shirt in a cold draught; went all day in wet shoes; heated then chilled different parts of his body. He suffered no colds whatsoever, however, until he had sat for two hours in a hot, over-crowded room with every window tightly closed.

Of course, we know very well that chills and draughts are dangerous, but they can usually be avoided. It is the hot, stuffy lecture rooms that we object to, the unnecessarily warm meeting-places from which one goes out into cold streets, and inside people are coughing and breathing germs on you if they are already infected, because there is no circulation of air. Do you sometimes wonder why your throat feels as if it's "sticking together" when you get indoors—it's because overheating causes a disturbance in the normal flow of saliva to your nose and throat.

Let's see what we can do about a better system of heat and ventilation, women, even if it's only a matter of managing the furnace properly and planning draught-proof windows, and then see how much faster our war-work activities will go ahead.

There's a Lot In The Way You Wear Your Hat

A milliner once made the somewhat unkind observation that the hats of most women look as if they had been lowered on their owner's heads by a pulley—lowered on and just left sitting there. Well, some of us really do know how to wear our hats, but there are lots of us who don't. The trouble is that many women regard a new hat as just a new hat, they do not consider it sufficiently in relation to their own faces.

This is a mistake, because your hat—and the way in which you wear it—can disguise, or emphasize the good and bad points of your face every bit as much as the way in which you do your hair. The halo should never be worn by those who suffer from a large nose, a bulging or receding forehead, lack of chin or a fat face. The halo lays brutal emphasis on all such face-faults, it's too revealing to be worn by anyone other than the regular featured. It's a real godsend to the girl with too small a face because its turnback brim acts as a frame.

It's doubtful if the pill-box type of hat will ever go out of fashion. It's excellent for people with narrow or receding foreheads for the simple reason that it covers them up. Don't wear it if you have a square face, because the way it perches on your head will emphasize your jaw-line.

The turban can look lovely on the regular-featured but tends to lay stress on receding chins and on over-large noses. It should be avoided like the plague by the long-faced (as should all high-crowned hats). The sailor is probably the most universally becoming hat of this day and age. It's smart; it's practical, it successfuly camouflages a large nose. It's cute little brim throws a glamorous shadow across a pair of sparkling eyes. It's trim and it's neat and it goes with almost all kinds of clothes.

The picture is very becoming to all types of faces except the very small. A boon to the elderly, it needs careful handling, though, from an angle point of view. Should be worn only with silk or summery dresses. The sports felt is a safe bet with all suits, tailored dresses and country clothes. Can look extremely smart—or thoroughly dowdy; depending upon the angle at which you wear it.

FASHIONS

Your underthings are just as important as your new dress. If your slip fits well your dress will look better and feel more comfortable. Here is a new slip that hugs the waist and is just right under the new frocks. Perhaps you are wondering what to give for Christmas and would like to begin making some of your gifts now. Well, this slip and pantie set is bound to be a welcome one. Sew with dainty stitches and trim with a tiny lace edging for lovely results. Be sure to make this set for yourself, too, to complement your new frocks.

QUESTION—In last week's paper I noticed Shrimps fried in batter, and would appreciate it very much if you could forward me this recipe. Thanking you.—Mrs. F. D.

ANSWER— Thank you for your letter.

Shrimps in Batter.

Drain cooked or canned shrimps well and trim free of black strip. Dip in batter (see below), fry in deep fat, and drain on unglazed paper. Serve with hot Tartare Sause (see below).

Batter for Frying Fish (or other savory food)——One and one-half cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2-3 cup milk, 1 egg. Mix and sift dry ingredients, add milk gradually, and egg well beaten.

To Fry in Deep Fat—When the fat begins to smoke drop an inch cube of bread from soft part of loaf, and if in forty seconds it is golden brown, the fat is then of right temperature for frying any cooked mixture.

Hot Sauce Tartare.

One tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, ½ cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup genuine mayonnaise, ½ shallot finely chopped, ½ teaspoon vinegar, ½ tablespoon each finely chopped capers, pickles, olives and parsley. To white sauce made from first four ingredients add remaining ingredients. Stir constantly until mixture is thoroughly heated, but do not let it come to boiling point. Serve with boiled, steamed, or fried fish.

We Noticed . . .

....Because dress fashions for spring are expected to continue a trend toward slimmer, straighter lines, heavier crepes will be seen.

....The trend in caracul coats is towards the fitted silhouette; much plaid in both wild and subdued patterns is seen.

....As a note for winter chic, select a furless cloth coat with with beautiful, simple styling, then choose muff and matching fur toque. If the budget permits, two muff and hat ensembles of different furs would add pleasant variety to the wardrobe.

Do You Know?

To remove tea stains from the inside of a china teapot, soak over night in hot soda water. The next morning rub with a cloth wet in vinegar and dipped in salt.

The next time you pop corn, moisten the grains before dropping them into the popper. Do this by putting a few drops of water into the saucer containing the corn kernels and stirring them until all the grains are damp. This will assure more thorough popping, and the flakes will be more plump and tender.

Soft tissue paper is specially recommended as a polisher for windows which have been cleaned with methylated spirits.

Pumpkin should be dried if one wishes to keep it for a long time. Cut it into thin slices and place around the stove to dry. Before using, soak for an hour or so, then cook in the usual manner.

The Stars Say . . .

For Tuesday, December 3.

A stubborn chain of adverse configurations among the important planets is observed in this day's astrological chart. Opposition, antagonism, resistance, and obstruction may be expected to challenge the utmost powers and talents for overcoming forces for impediment, defeat and hostility. The major conflict may come from elders or old institutions.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year in which their highest powers for resistance, struggle and fortitude may be called up to triumph over a succession and variety of antagonistic, undermining and frustrating circumstances, having unhappy reactions on the most intimate relations in life. The emotional upset may be outstanding, calling for especial discretion.

A child born on this day will have a very contradictory nature, with many conflicts and struggles beneath a surface of serenity and restraint. While moody or reserved it will be sociable, friendly and sympathetic.

DOTTIE WAS A WARM-ROOM OFFENDER
SCIENTIFIC FACTS ABOUT B.O.
DOTTIE always looked attractive ... She took infinite pains with her hair, for example, but she was careless about bathing—offended her would-be admirers ... And when "B.O."—offensive body odor—comes in, love flies out the window.
All of us have to perspire to live. In winter, heavy clothes, warm, stuffy rooms speed up the time during which sweat left on the body decomposes—turns stale. When this happens YOU have "B.O."
"B.O." can ruin romance, business and social chances. Check it before it starts with Lifebuoy. For Lifebuoy contains an exclusive deodorizing ingredient, not found in any other leading toilet soap. Used in your daily bath, Lifebuoy stops "B.O."—its purifying lather washes offensive sweat deposits away. And Lifebuoy peps you up—refreshes. Why not take this inexpensive precaution of careful people.
The adult skin has 2 to 5 million sweat glands which act as a cooling system, giving off from 1 to 3 pints of perspiration daily—even when we are sitting still. If perspiration stopped, we would die from hyper-pyrexia (heat stroke).
Because much of the water in perspiration evaporates, we do not see or feel it—especially in winter. Heated rooms, lack of fresh air and heavy clothes quickly decompose this sweat deposit—turn it stale—cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor).

Famed Maginot Line Now Stables, Barns

BASEL, Switzerland, Dec. 2 — (AP). — Horses are living in the Maginot Line and the stock of the Vichy Government is lower, perhaps, in Alsace than in any other part of France, travellers from the "lost province" reported on Saturday.

Alsatian newspapers, publishing an announcement of the German police warn of "protective custody for saboteurs and greasy sparrows," and cite these examples:

Three Alsatians taken into "protective custody" for trying to break up a public meeting of the Nazi Party;

A factory worker and a woodcutter taken into "acute custody"—apparently one grade tighter than the "protective" variety — because they "besmeared a public building with placards hostile to Germany."

The Germans, despite such occasional trouble, seem to have a comparatively easy time running Alsace. Recently reported troop movements there, at first laid to disorders, now are declared by travellers to consist of new German units entering the province for "rest duty" after service in the Channel ports under British bombings.

French-speaking inhabitants who left their homes before the armistice or have since been ordered out by the Germans, are, of course, vocal against the German occupation. The average German-speaking Alsatian peasant, however, is busy on his farm, fighting a battle against weeks of undergrowth.

Many forlifications of the Maginot Line are serving as stables and barns, and, in some cases, even as homes for those whose farmhouses were blasted away by the war.

Even the Alsatians who most favored the French are disgusted now with what they say is the Vichy Government's lack of interest in their cause.

Around Town

Called in the Sacred Heart last Thursday. All the cubs were busy on their cub craft work, sticking pictures on wood to which other items will be glued. Akela D. Grady and her assistants supervised. The hall was really cold, but like real scouts the cubs were laughing over discomforts.

This hall was built for the scouts by members of the group committee and has been improved on very much.

Then we travelled up to St. Andrew's, where the cubs were forming parade circle. Rev. Dr. Young took charge of a very fitting little ceremony when Jack Dinsdale was presented with his cub instructor's badge.

Jack, a former cub from the pack, who earned his two stars besides many other badges, is now a patrol leader in the troop. Among his decorations he wears the Leaping Wolf badge.

Patrol Leader Jack Dinsdale is to be congratulated on his increasing interest with the St. Andrew's group.

After cub pack dismissed your scribe was called on to inspect the troop, and would report that they were very good on the inspection given.

Leaving St. Andrew's we called on the Murray Street pack. Here the boys were in their final game; all in uniform with the exception of five chums.

On Friday we dropped into All Saints'; a fine bunch of cubs out under Akela George Brooks, all in uniform, and the scouts were on parade also with Scouter Art Rose calling the late comers to attention.

In all my visits proved very satisfactory. I hope to be able to visit every pack and troop in the city and give a short report on their doings.

Scouters' Club

All cub, scout, and rover officers of all ranks are notified that the Scouters' Club meets next Monday, at 8 p.m. sharp. The meeting will take the form of a Christmas party and all are asked to bring a small gift to the value of about 10 cents, nicely wrapped; just to add to the fun. All remember: Buy British.

2nd Armour

A full pack turned out for a short hike last Tuesday and on their return to the den was given a talk by Akela on that animal, well known in the Peterborough district, "The Muskrat." During the winter it is expected that many such talks and hikes will be enjoyed. The animals will be native of the surrounding districts and the cubs will do well to keep their eyes open at all times to learn things toward the observer's badge.

The 11th, Northends

Several boys, under P.L. Bob Lyons took a hike to Bear's Creek on Saturday last. Bruce Finnie, Peter Boothroyd, and Douglas Morrow passed their second class firelighting and cooking.

On Friday, Dan Simmons and Bruce Finnie passed compass, whilst second class first aid was the main item of instruction. Two new names were added to the long list of world scouts, as Jeffrey Cridland and Sam Anderson became fully fledged scouts during an investiture ceremony over which Scouter Charles Jefferies officiated. Peter Boothroyd was also presented with his second class badge.

Congratulations and good scouting to these scouts.

St. John's

The Cubs.—It was a night of games in the jungle; lots of fun and enjoyment. Miss M. Brown attended Red Flower, telling a very interesting story.

Commissioner L. A. Grant paid the pack a surprise visit.

Trent League Has 4 Teams

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 2—(ENS)—Only four teams have so far been entered in the Trent Valley Hockey League it was revealed at a reorganization meeting held Friday. Disappointed were delegates from Peterborough, Tweed, Marmora and Campbellford at prospects of perhaps only a five team league this year, and convinced that some additional teams might be drummed up in the next two weeks they decided to hold a second meeting after the 14th of December, the last day for filing entries. At present it looks as though teams from Tweed, Marmora, Peterborough and Campbellford will form the nucleus of the league, with Bata, Sterling, Madoc and Norwood out this year. This would mean dropping from a seven to a four-team league. There is some talk locally that "B" Company 1st Midland Regiment may enter a team in the league, making two entries from this town, but the feeling of some is that Campbellford is not large enough to support two teams. Election of officers resulted in Charles Davidson being named president and W. A. Kingston, secretary.

Select Right Girl if You Want Successful Marriage. But Young Man Has to Play Fair and a Fifty-Fifty Game to Keep Up His End of the Contract.

A young man who is about to take the dangerous journey to the altar asks me if I will give him a few tips about how to make his marriage a success. Well, son, if you want your marriage to be successful marry the right girl. Use as much intelligence and prudence in picking your wife—with whom you will have to live in all probability for 30 or 40 years—as you would in selecting an automobile that you will trade in for a new one in a couple of years. You wouldn't buy an automobile just because it was streamlined and a color that hit you in the eye and had some fancy gadgets. You would want to know if it was a good, reliable make, what horsepower engine it had, if it could stand hard usage and was the type of car you needed. Give at least that much consideration to the woman you marry. Don't marry a girl just because she has a pretty painted face and a slim figure and a trick of looking up at you through her lashes. Find out what sort of stock she comes from. People are thoroughbreds or scrubs just the same as other animals. Notice whether she is healthy or sickly, for that will determine whether you will get a wife who will be a perpetual doctor's bill or pull her weight in the boat. Notice her disposition. If she bosses her family she will henpeck you. And, above all, make very sure that she has plenty of good, hard, horse sense. A fool wife is the greatest affliction any man ever wished on himself.

Don't marry a girl thinking you can change her after marriage. There is no magic in the marriage ceremony that converts a nitwit into a sensible woman; that turns a virago into an angel; that makes a lazy, shiftless one industrious, or a selfish one altruistic. As a girl is before marriage she will be after marriage. Only more so.

It's a 50-50 Game

After you are married, don't dump the whole reponsibility of how your marriage turns out on your wife. Making a happy home is just as much your business as it is hers.

Besides, it is a twohanded job that takes teamwork. No woman can do it all alone. So give her co-operation. Take an interest in the house. Help her hang the curtains. Praise her cooking. Do your part about being a little ray of sunshine around the place. Many a woman is a poor housekeeper and a dismal companion because her husband never notices anything around home except to criticize it.

Don't cut out the lovemaking. Marriage doesn't automatically extract a woman's sweet tooth. Before she was married there were plenty of boy friends to tell her how beautiful and wonderful she was and to bring her candy and flowers. You will have to pinch-hit for the bunch. Don't renege on the job.

Let her see that you are trying to make her happy, and that you don't think that just being married to you is such a picnic that she doesn't crave any other amusement.

Take her window shopping and treat her to a hot dog if it is the best you can afford. It will break the monotony of cooking and washing and baby-tending and make her easier to live with.

Be Fair About Money

Be fair with her about money. If you have a good income, give her an allowance for the house and herself. It will save 30 breakfast table arguments and keep her from feeling she is being gypped. If you have a small salary, turn your pay envelope over to her. She can get twice as much out of a dollar as you can.

Deliberately start on your wedding day to cultivate companionship with your wife. Talk to her and listen to her when she talks. Discuss your business with her. Tell her about your hopes and plans. Make her read the same books that you do.

The reasons that most husbands and wives bore each other is that one goes one way and the other goes another way until they get so far apart that they become strangers who do not interest each other.

And Be Honest

Don't philander. Don't marry until you are ready to become a fireside companion. Don't think you can tear your wife's heart out of her with jealousy, and drag her pride into the dust with your infidelities, and then have her welcome you back with outstretched arms when you return from one of your adventures.

She may not divorce you. She may technically forgive you. But you will have killed her faith in you. You have taken the bloom off of her love for you. You have taken away from her marriage all that made it fine and sacred, and that is a pretty high price to pay for a few flirtations.

Marriage is a problem that you have to work out day by day; but if you will try as hard to make a success of it as you do of your business, you will never fail.

Alnwick Red Cross Reports Shipment

ROSENEATH, Dec. 2.—(ENS).—A large shipment of articles by the Alnwick branch Red Cross Society to headquarters in Toronto include one pair seamen's socks, one pair mitts, six sweaters and the following garments for refugee children: 20 dresses, 11 boys' coats, 100 nightgowns, 10 slips, 10 girls' coats, one pantie dress, 6 skirts, five blouses, five pair bloomes, 20 pairs mittens, one pair shoes, and one quilt donated by the Mission Circle.

Bayonet Charges Barbarous

SALONIKA, Greece, Dec. 2—(AP)—Use of bayonets, which many military observers predicted would be discarded as worthless in modern warfare, is proving a decisive factor in the Greek Army's drive into Albania against Italy's mechanized legions.

Wounded soldiers and neutral observers returning from the northern fighting front report that the capture of Pogradec and Koritza was achieved mainly at the point of the bayonet in the hands of Greece's Macedonian shock troops.

Especially was this true at Pogradec, wounded infantrymen said. After five days of artillery and machine-gun fighting, the hard-fighting Evzone mountain troops stormed a dominating hill sector with their bayonets.

The Greek newspaper Progref answered what it called an Italian radio assertion that Greek bayonet fighting is "a barbarous form of warfare which shows a nation is uncivilized" by declaring that "bayonet fighting certainly is less barbarous than using Italian bombing planes against non-combatants . . . it is not our fault if the enemy lacks the courage of soul against these bayonet charges . . . Greek bayonets will continue to do good work in Albania."

Dies In Gravel Pit

SASKATON, Dec. 2 — (CP). — George Morris Etsell, 23, of Colleville, Sask., who came to Saskatoon only a few days ago to seek enlistment in the R.C.A.F. and who took a job Saturday hauling gravel, was killed yesterday when tons of gravel fell on him at the Latrace gravel pit, north of the city.

Prisoners In Canada Expect To Be Freed By Hitler Before Christmas Scots Tolds

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 — (AP). — Sir Gerald Campbell, High Commissioner for the United Kingdom in Canada, told 700 Scots and Scottish-Americans at a St. Andrew's Day dinner on Saturday night that German prisoners interned in Canada expect to be freed by Hitler before Christmas.

"When they came, they said they would be returning to Germany in two weeks, and now that the two weeks are long past, they say they will be returning by Christmas," said Sir Gerald. "They evidently still think in terms of Father Christmas, but not of the Babe that was born."

He said that "the spirit of London is the spirit of Britain, and the spirit of Britain is the spirit of free men."

"I believe," he added, "that the world, in spite of terrific setbacks and continuous ups and downs in this present struggle, is still advancing towards peace, and we shall get there if everyone pulls his weight and has faith in the eventual outcome."

Broadview Team Defeats Petes

A good crowd was on hand at the Y Natatorium Saturday night to see the classy Toronto Broadview swimming team defeat the locals in an interesting dual swimming meet, in spite of the victory of the Peterborough senior team over their more experienced opponents.

The Broadview junior free style relay team of Vic Hearn, Bill Lyon, Ernie Fisher and Hal Johnson, who set a new Canadian record for the 160 yd. relay last week in Toronto, came within three seconds of their record to win easily over the Y junior team in the fast time of one minute and twenty-five seconds. A few minutes later the same team defeated the local senior team by four inches or less in only one second slower.

With the exception of one mistake, Don Pinch was outstanding for junior team, being the only one to compare favorably with the speedy Broadview lads. In the 14 and under races, Jim Shields did well to stay right up with Gordon Gildner of the visitors while Burt Young and Jack Thirnbeck turned in some good races. Of special interest was the effort turned in by Donald Ferguson in the 40 yds. breast stroke. Athough only 12 years old, his stroke is very good and he should go a long way in the swimming world if he keeps it up.

In the senior events Ralph Rogow tore up the pool to hold Walter Ockenden to a tie while James Brown placed third over Donald Anderson of Broadview. Not more than a foot separated the four swimmers.

Peterborough's only Canadian champion, Allan Marshall, having his first speed trial since having his right arm hurt playing for Bamforth's Collegians, came within two seconds of his own Canadian record for the 200 yds. breast stroke event. His arm is bothering him and it is hoped that it will be better for the Ontario championship race in Hamilton next Saturday.

Leonard Smith, swimming in the senior medley relay, got off to a good lead which Marshall and Rogow held to win the event.

The feature of the program was the diving lesson which Stuart Heffernan as "Gus Sassafrass," bestowed on James Brown, much to the merriment of the crowd. His gold striped racing suit was a scream. Heffernan has dived with the finest divers in the world from the seawall of the Canadian National Exhibition during the last three years.

The Broadview team proved to be good sports by bucking through the snow storms to fulfil their engagement and best wishes are extended to their coach, George Milburn, who is launching a career in accountancy starting Monday morning.

Alex Fitzgerald was on hand to act as judge and timer and special thanks should be extended to Bob and Gerald Juby for favors received.

Gordon Minty, 'Y' swim coach, was in charge of the program and reports that the meet was a big success in spite of the weather. He points out that the idea of these dual swimming meets is not only to provide an opportunity for competition but also to meet swimmers from other centres and share their methods and ideas.

DIED

HAMILTON, Alma.—At St. Joseph's Hospital, on Saturday, November 30, 1940, Alma Hamilton, in her 74th year beloved mother of Mrs. Charles Trotter and John E. Faucet, of the 3rd Field Park Co., R.C.E. at Debert, N.S. Funeral was held this (Monday) afternoon at 2 o'clock, from Funeral Home of D. Belleghem and Sons 190 Hunter street, with Canon W. P. Robertson officiating. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM

HARRIS.—In memory of Evelyn Isabel Harris, who died December 2, 1936.

Four years have gone since that sad day
God called the one we loved, away.
Forget her, no, we never will;
For in our hearts we love her still.
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought her death so near.
And to the grave not far away
Just four years ago today.
Remembrance is a golden chain
Death tried to break but all in vain;
To have, to love and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.

—Ever remembered by her sister and brother-in-law, Gunner and Mrs. William Hopkinson.

HARRIS.—In loving memory of Evelyn Isabel Harris, who died December 2, 1936.

The month of December is here again,
The saddest month of all the year
Because it took my dear daughter away,
Just four years ago today.
Sad and sudden was the call
Of her so dearly loved by all.
She is remembered as well today
As on the day she passed away.
The happy hours we once enjoyed
How sweet the memory still,
But death has left a vacant place
This world can never fill.

—Ever remembered by Mother and Father, and Brother and Sisters.

Colorful Glass Pictures Painted From Patterns

Give for Christmas Presents

A lovely picture—graceful snow-white swans on a shimmering lake of blue-green. You can easily paint it yourself on glass—in its real size, 9 by 12 inches—as a gift or to keep.

For you have a pattern for the picture, and after you place this pattern under your glass, you just follow its lines with your brush.

Your colors you get from three inexpensive tubes of oil paints—red, blue and yellow—and you mix them according to a chart. Green, for instance, is a mixture of blue and yellow. To darken or lighten a color, just add black or white household enamel.

In painting "Swans on a Lake," you mostly use varying shades of three colors, blue for the sky, blue-green for the water, green for the foliage. Swans have black eyes, orange beaks. Then, when the picture is dry, frame painted side in and back with silver paper to add sparkle to the water.

Besides "Swans on a Lake," our FOUR DESIGNS TO PAINT ON GLASS (Second Series) includes "Cabin in the Pines," "Rose Bouquet," "Doe and Fawn"—all 9 by 12 inches. Has color chart; tells colors to use.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps for our set of FOUR DESIGNS TO PAINT ON GLASS (second Series) to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of picture set.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE "DESCHAPELLES COUP"

M. DESCHAPELLES was a famous Whist player of France. He was particularly noted for a type of play which now is part of the standard equipment of all fine contract bridge players, a play which has been named for him, the "Deschapelles Coup." It consists of sacrificing a high card, which otherwise would be a sure trick taker, in order to knock an entry out of opponent's hand, heading off the run of his suit, and at the same time build up a smaller card as an entry to the hand of your partner, who has a suit of his own to run.

Upon occasion the Deschapelles Coup is used in the case of a suit contract, but more often by the defensive side against a No Trumper, as in this case which came up in a duplicate game. At one table the contract was made because the defense did not use the play, but at another it set the contract.

was led, declarer holding up his A, then winning the J with his A. The diamond 4 to the Q was won by the A, East returning the heart 4 to the Q. The diamond 6 to the K won, the club 10 was finessed, and then the diamond 10 lost to the J. Declarer still had the heart A as an entry for his now established diamonds, so took a total of three tricks in that suit, four in clubs, two in hearts and one in spades, getting an extra trick.

At the other table the play was the same for two tricks, then varied. East let the diamond Q win, South finessed the club 10 and then the diamond 10, East winning with the J. He fired back the heart K—the Deschapelles Coup. Now South's goose was cooked. If he ducked that, the next lead would knock out the A. In any event the diamond suit was blocked, so that at the end South had to lead a heart or spade to West for the setting tricks.

Churchill 66

London, Dec. 2 (CP).

PRIME MINISTER Churchill celebrated his 66th birthday today and received a gift from residents of the Netherlands East Indies of money to purchase seven Spitfires for Britain's defence.

"Business as usual," was the Prime minister's plan except for a week-end family gathering attended by his seven-week-old grandson and namesake, Winston, son of Randolph Churchill.

Mr. Churchill also received a cigar box carved with Maori designs from New Zealand's Arawa tribe.

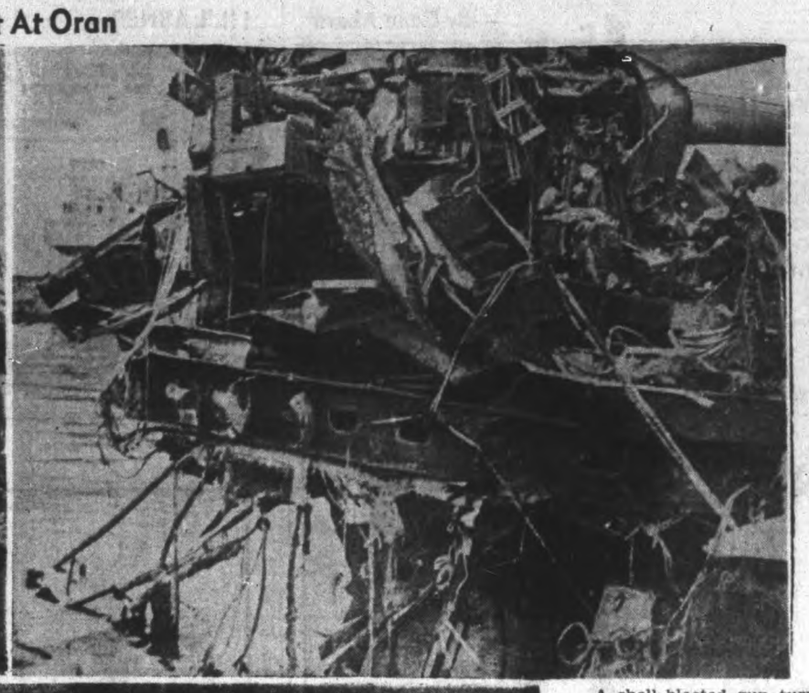
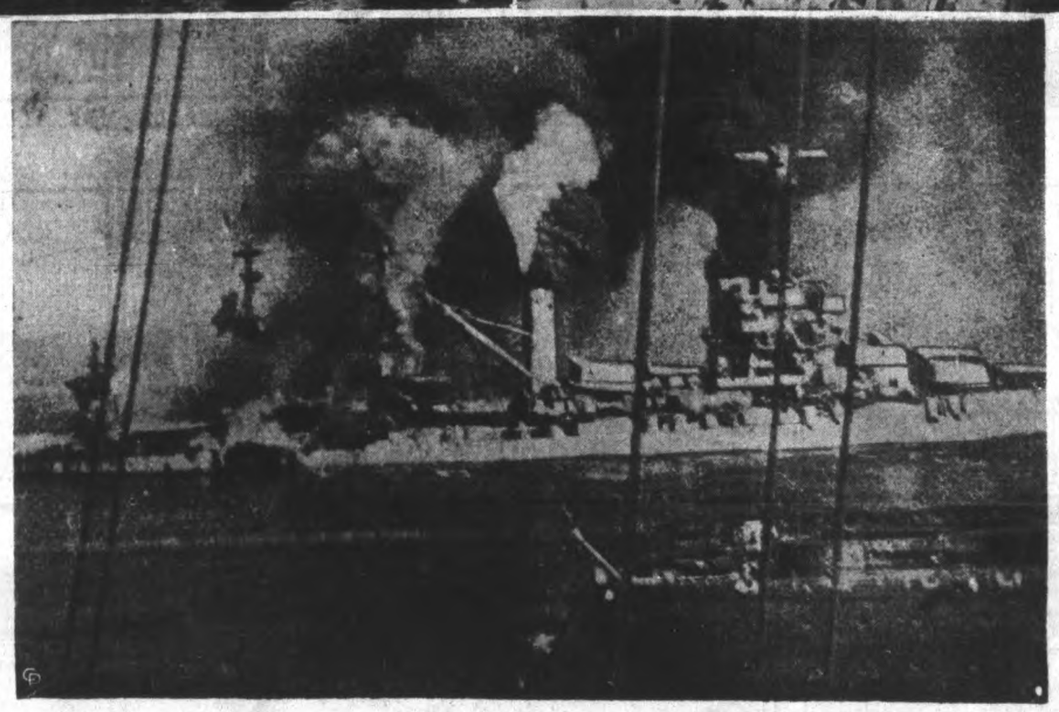
Vichy Government Tardily Admits Destruction Of Its Fleet At Oran

Blasted by the guns of the British fleet after British proposals had been turned down, sailors are shown moving about the smoke-covered deck of the French battleship Dunkerque, during the now historic Battle of Oran last July. The Dunkerque was repeatedly struck by the British shells and seriously damaged.



A shell-blasted gun turret on the French battleship Bretagne, which was wrecked by British naval action during the Battle of Oran, is shown ABOVE. The Bretagne was but one unit of the French naval force that was either sunk, wrecked or beached, as Britain moved swiftly to prevent the French fleet from being used by Germany after the French surrender.



Mortally wounded the French battleship Bretagne settles to the bottom in the Battle of Oran, which opened fire after the French commander, Admiral Marcel-Bruno Gensoul, refused to accede to British proposals that would have ensured the French fleet of not falling into Germany's hands for use against Britain. A decisive victory was scored by the smaller British force and Hitler's hopes of acquiring this portion of France's naval forces were rudely shattered. These pictures were released by the Vichy government as its official version of the battle.

Old Grist Mill Of 1812 Is Razed

PORT DOVER, Ont., Dec. 2. — (CP).—A grist mill dating back before 1812 was destroyed by fire of unknown origin here late last night.

The mill, owned by Charles G. Ivey, was operated by the Norfolk Co-operative Company of Simcoe and the loss was estimated at $10,000. There was a large stock of grain and flour in the mill when the fire occurred.

Flames spread so rapidly that firefighters were not able to save the building. It was believed the fire started in the wheel house containing the waterwheel that operated the mill.

BRITAIN CALLS U.S. SHIPS

Food Chief Doubles British Tea Rations as Christmas Gift

WARNS NATION ENGLAND NOW ON OFFENSIVE AND BELTS MUST BE TIGHTENED TO FREE SUPPLY SHIPS FOR TROOP TRANSPORT SERVICE TO CONTINENT.

LONDON, Dec. 3—(CP).—Lord Woolton, Food Minister, announced today his Christmas "gift" to the nation would be increased sugar and tea rations for the week of December 16.

They will be 12 ounces of sugar and four ounces of tea, instead of eight and two ounces, respectively, allowed now.

Apart from loadings for which arrangements have already been made, no cargoes of fresh or tinned fruit, except a limited quantity of oranges, will for the time being be brought to Britain.

In a speech at Manchester, Lord Woolton said:

"This country has taken the offensive and, to make it successful, there must be a speed-up in the manufacture of arms. This offensive also will mean a drain on the country's shipping facilities....

"There is every reason to hope that before long we shall find ourselves settling old scores and to that end we have to mobilize the whole resources of the country.

"We must have speed, speed, speed and ships, ships, ships.

"We have to carry our forces overseas—and overseas is the proper place for Britain to be at war.

"Hence we are going to lose part of our food ships to take part in this offensive which is being planned."

22 Ships Lost In Week Of Nov. 24th

Boosts Average Loss By 30,000 Tons, 19 Are Britishers

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(CP)—Twenty-two merchants ships totalling 87,975 tons were sunk by enemy action in the week ending November 24, the Admiralty announced today. This total is 30,000 tons above the average weekly loss since the war began.

The losses were 19 British ships totalling 75,560 tons and three Allied vessels totalling 12,415 tons.

The Admiralty said the Germans claimed to have sunk 118,020 tons of merchant shipping during that week.

The total actually lost compared with a figure of 59,534 tons for the previous week and represented the most serious week since the seven-day period ending October 21, during which 198,030 tons were lost.

"It is a serious menace," said a naval spokesman of the continued drain on the Empire's shipping resources, "but as a nation we can take knocks."

Bribing The Judge

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Dec. 3 (AP).

DEER season opened in Pennsylvania yesterday and one hunter went before Judge Benjamin Jones to ask his wife's freedom from a misdemeanor sentence which he had prosecuted.

"You're invited to the venison supper—and Judge, if you'll let my wife out of jail I'll show you the best trout stream in Luzerne County next spring."

Said His Honor: "I can't refuse that."

Petain Out To Rule France

Plans Move To Versailles Despite Nazi Laval

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Chief of State Petain's plan to establish his government seat at historic Versailles was viewed by political observers today as another shrewd step by the Marshal to extend his authority over all France at a time when his prestige is at a high level.

From Versailles, where Petain is expected to use the Trianon Palace, he would be able to take German-occupied Northern France at least partly under his wing, and could coordinate with the rest of his government at Vichy the interests of all France.

Nazis Pound Bristol For 6 Hours

Third Raid In 10 Days; Dawn Swings Attackers To London

LONDON, Dec. 3 (CP)—Hitler's raiders hammered furiously at the west coast port of Bristol for six hours last night and then shifted their attention suddenly to London today after passing up the capital entirely from dusk to dawn.

Twice before noon the Germans struck at London, and one squadron of raiders dodged through a curtain of anti-aircraft fire to sow bombs which demolished a number of dwellings and caused some casualties. A third alarm, which was followed quickly by the all clear, sounded during the lunch hour.

The Nazi night raiders left a trail of destruction across ancient Bristol, a vital shipping centre. It was the third time in less than 10 days that the port had been attacked heavily. Twice early last week the Germans subjected Bristol to a bombardment which a belated eyewitness account said today laid an 18th century section of the city in ruins and destroyed many of its fine

Last Italians In South Seen Doomed As Collapse Widens

OCHRIDA, Yugoslavia (on the Albania Frontier), Dec. 3 (AP)—Gradual retirement of the Italian northern army toward Elbasani, in central Albania, continued today under constant harassing by Greek forces driving deep into Albania, border advices reported. Casualties were heavy on both sides.

ATHENS, Dec. 3—(AP)—The Greek left wing, reported to have smashed past Porto Edda, was said today to be making wide new gains all along the battlefront and threatening to engulf the last Italian fighting force in Southern Albania.

The high command reported Greek shock troops won new mountain heights north of Premet, in a thrust into central Albania and north of Pogradetz, in a drive down the road toward Elbasani near the Albanian capital, on the right wing, but a Government spokesman termed the left wing advance the "most important."

There, the spokesman said, "the enemy retreated to the heights around Delvino and has passed, in depth, Santi Quaranta."

That is the port the Italians renamed Porto Edda for Premier Mussolini's daughter.

The Greeks apparently had not broken Italian resistance in the section immediately around the port, but indicated Fascist troops there might be cut off. The high command declared the road linking the port with Argirocastro, 15 miles northeast, had been placed under Greek fire.

In the central and northern sectors, the high command reported more prisoners had been taken and started along the roads back into Greece, already said to have been plodded by more than 13,000 disarmed Italians. The greatest number of prisoners reported taken was 5,000 yesterday. Their surrender, the Greeks declared, broke Italian morale and resistance in the centre of the fighting front.

Orders 60 New Cargo Craft With All Possible Speed; Wants Any Others For Sale

Germans Claim 15 Ships Of Convoy Sunk With Merchant Cruiser Caledonia Only To Find The Latter Lost Back In June

LONDON, Dec. 3—(CP).—Shipping Minister Ronald Cross informed the House of Commons today that Britain had placed orders for construction of 60 cargo vessels in the United States and in addition would continue to purchase serviceable American ships.

Mr. Cross assured the House that "everything possible is being done to get ships with the greatest facility."

He said "old but serviceable United States vessels, including vessels belonging to the Maritime Commission, have been and will continue to be purchased for the British flag as opportunity offers."

The Ministry of Information announced that 323,157 tons of British, Allied and neutral shipping had been sunk during the four weeks ending November 24.

The Ministry compared this total with the 881,000 tons of British, Allied and neutral shipping which was sunk during April 1917, at the height of the unrestricted submarine campaign of the first Great War.

Being Bombed By Plane.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3—(AP).—Mackay radio said today it had received a message from the Valentia, Eire radio station, saying the steamship Salvonia was attacked by an airplane at 6.47 a.m., EDT, about 300 miles due west of the Irish coast.

(Lloyd's register of shipping does not list a vessel of that name).

Berlin's Convoy Story

BERLIN, Dec. 3—(CP).—D.N.B., Nazi news and propaganda agency, issued a statement today that a German U-boat yesterday sank the 17,046-ton British merchant cruiser Caledonia.

When correspondents later pointed out that the British Admiralty had announced the loss of the ship June 14 the agency asked that the announcement be changed to "an auxiliary cruiser of 17,000 tons."

(The Admiralty announcement of June 14, confirming a German claim, said the Caledonia, renamed the Scotstoun when put into war service, was sung by a German submarine with a loss of two officers and four seamen.

(Before the war, the liner, operated by the Anchor Donaldson Line, was in service between Canadian and United Kingdom ports.)

Besides the auxiliary cruiser, the Nazis claimed that 15 ships in a convoy it was protecting were sunk.

(As is customary, there was no comment from British authorities, but Nazi claims of wholesale sinkings in attacks on convoys seldom measure up when the facts become known.)

Canada Extends Tax Credits To Boost Export

OTTAWA, Dec. 3 — (CP).—Extension of special allowances for depreciation or tax credits to certain Canadian companies to encourage them to increase their exports, as announced by Finance Minister Ilsley yesterday, will be worked out by negotiations finance officials to-day said.

The object of the proposal is to encourage manufacturing companies and some gold mining companies working on a narrow profit to expand their operations so they can export more extensively, particularly to the United States and thus provide exchange with which Canada can pay for more war supplies purchased in the United States.

Excess profits taxes, Dominion and Provincial income taxes take as high as 89½ per cent. of the profits of firms in British Columbia, 84½ per cent. in Ontario and vary in other provinces in proportion to the provincial income tax.

Some companies, a Finance Department official said, find there is not enough profits left to warrant building plant additions and new plants, particularly when they might be useless after the war is over.

To meet such situations, in order that these companies may go ahead and increase their exports, negotiations will be opened with the purpose of permitting the companies to set aside a larger proportion of their profits for depreciation than would ordinarily be permitted. In this way the investments might be paid off in two or three years.

Not Widening Cabinet

LONDON, Nov. 3—(CP)—Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, informed the House of Commons today that Prime Minister Churchill "does not contemplate adding representatives of the Dominions to the War Cabinet at the present time."

Various suggestions for an Imperial War Cabinet have been made unofficially. Most of these have come from Australia.

A Christmas Truce

Vatican City, Dec. 3. (CP)

His Holiness Pope Pius urged powers today to observe a Christmas truce to keep "the clash of arms from drowning out the angel chorus of peace."

The pontiff called on the belligerents to observe a truce "spontaneously or by mutual accord" in order that "new bloodshed may not disturb or miserably extinguish heavenly joy of that hour."

The appeal was contained in a motu proprio, the name given to certain papal rescripts because of the phrase, motu proprio—"of his own accord"—used in the document.

Flames Light a City

Bristol Like Day From Hun Bomb Ruin

LONDON, Dec. 3 — (CP). — How an ancient part of Bristol, western English port which was bombed heavily again last night, was turned into a "ruin" and many of the city's university buildings swept by fire in a recent German raid was told to-day in a letter received here.

It was written by Dr. J. S. Spink, a London university lecturer who moved to Bristol early in the war with other teachers and students.

Dr. Spink is a member of the University and Raid Precautions Guard and an observer in the squad which watched from the Bristol University tower, commanding a good view of the city.

Spink said he was working in his room when an alert sounded shortly after 6 p.m. on the night of the raid, so he "went up to see." Here in part is the story in his own words:

"Two or three big flares floated down, lighting up the whole town. Fires were burning. Suddenly another (a church) started in the centre of the city.

"The old town in Bristol is very compact, with narrow, 18th century streets. Suddenly, all along the hills on the south side of town, hundreds of little points of light appeared—incendiaries.

"Then, right across the centre of Bristol, in a strip about a quarter of a mile wide, lots of lights appeared — hundreds of incendiaries bursting into flame on the roofs of houses. I must admit the spectacle was grandiose.

"Then suddenly they began to fall on us, scores of them whistling down around the tower. Many fell on the buildings, and we rushed downstairs to a flat part of the roof and put out two or three....

"We thought our own building was alight. But a phone bell rang, and a guard in the science block said they had two or three fires. We rushed down from the tower to help them. As we reached one of the doors a bomb came hissing down. We dodged back in and fell flat....

"On my return, I met a colleague

War Topples Class Barriers

Hun Bombs Hit Rich, Poor Alike, Set Them in Same Shelters

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

An East Coast Canadian Port, Dec. 3 (CP)—During the heat of battle, while she is fighting desperately for her very survival, Britain is undergoing the most sweeping social revolution in her history.

What reformers for generations have sought to achieve by agitation and other means the present war has accomplished almost overnight. It has happened because threatened Nazi invasion and terror from the skies have menaced high and humble, rich and poor alike. In fact of this common threat class barriers are crumbling.

Today all are affected to the same degree by the Conscription Act and other emergency legislation. Each person contributes financially toward the war effort to the limit of his means. All are subject to the same rationing regulations and the air-raid shelter has brought people into closer communion and created a mutual bond of friendship, interest and understanding.

Amid the devastation and suffering caused by ruthless, indiscriminate bombing and shelling, the British people of all classes are marching arm-in-arm, firmly believing that peace with victory awaits them at the end of the road.

Nowhere has this new-found relationship and splendid fortitude been so apparent as in bomb-battered London. Nazi bombs are no respecters of persons or property, and whole streets of dwellings, from the lowly tenements of the East-end to the stately mansions of Mayfair, have been reduced to rubble and charred timbers.

The people are facing the ordeal bravely and like one big family are lending succour where it is most urgently needed and sharing whatever they have with the less fortunate.

The motives of Hitler's aerial blitzkrieg have, of course, become potent long ago. By hammering

They Fly the Bombers Over

40 U.S., 20 British, Canuck Pilots Make Mass Deliveries

BALTIMORE, Dec. 3. — (AP) — Forty United States pilots are making regular mass deliveries of American bombers to Britain without molestation from the German Air Force, one of them disclosed today, and are taking the aircraft across the icy North Atlantic at high altitude in approximately 10 hours.

George R. Hutchinson, head of the "Flying Hutchinsons" family which in recent years made "good will" flights to 51 countries, asserted that regular deliveries had been made since early November and that none of the pilots had encountered German opposition.

Seven high-speed Lockheed Hudson bombers were delivered in the first flight last month, he said. His own ship made the fastest time for the trip—eight hours and 50 minutes from land to land and 10 hours from takeoff in North America to landing in Britain.

The planes take off from an airport in "British North America," Hutchinson said, each carrying a pilot, co-pilot and a radio operator. He said about 60 pilots and 30 radio operators, including Americans, Canadians and Britons, were participating.

On the first flight the seven bombers started away in formation, led by a British officer, but after 5½ hours bad weather and severe icing conditions forced them to separate Although scattered the rest of the way, the pilot said, all of the planes landed within an hour at a predesignated British airport.

Hutchinson, interviewed during a brief visit here with his family, said the crews werep aid monthly salaries and made about one flight a month. They return by boat, with a round-trip thus requiring about two weeks.

Special equipment for the flights includes oxygen tanks, extra fuel tanks and flotation gear in the event of a forced landing.

Optimistic Liechtenstein

Tiny State Thinks She Can Pass War Unhurt

VADUZ, Liechtenstein, Dec. 3—The tiny principality of Liechtenstein, wedged in between Austria and Switzerland on the Upper Rhine, is optimistic enough to think it can survive the war unscathed and untouched.

Liechtenstein comprises an area of 65 square miles, has a population of about 11,000. Vaduz, its capital, has 1,716 inhabitants.

Somehow Prince Franz Joseph, the ruler, and his Prime Minister, Dr. Joseph Hoop, are confident their Principality will not share the fate of Poland, Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, Rumania and Greece.

Their hopes rest on the following

Non-Essential Imports Ban To Save 100 Millions; Tariff On U.K. Goods Eased

25 Per Cent. Levy On Household Appliances Designed As Stroke To Ease Consumer Demand, Cut Profiteering

OTTAWA, Dec. 3—(CP).—The average Canadian prepared to tighten his belt a bit today as he looked over the emergency tax and tariff proposals just placed before the House of Commons. He saw that the use of ordinary consumer goods was to be whittled down, chiefly at the expense of imports, in a broad-ranged move by the Government to protect the exchange positions of both Canada and the United Kingdom. He began to realize that talk of the diversion of funds and labor to war purposes was more than conversation.

Canada's exchange position, he saw, is to be protected by prohibiting or limiting the importation of a wide variety of non-essentials and durable consumer goods from the United States.

From $70,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year may be saved in American funds by these restrictions but total Canadian purchases there, including war supplies, will reach an all-time high this year.

Britain's exchange position, particularly regarding her continued purchase of war materials in Canada, is to be aided by the relaxing of Canadian tariffs on 15 to 20 per cent. of Canada's imports from the United Kingdom.

At home, profiteering will be minimized and consumer demand held down—a major stroke against the threat of inflation—by the imposition of heavy excise taxes on domestically-manufactured durable consumer goods, chiefly household appliances.

These tariff and tax changes, proposed by Finance Minister Ilsley yesterday, were effective yesterday but do not effect Christmas stocks already held by merchants throughout the country. The excise taxes apply only to manufacturers' sales and manufacturers' prices.

Announcement of these fiscal proposals was preceded by a statement by Prime Minister Mackenzie King on the present war situation. There could be no doubt the Prime Minister said, that the situation for Britain and her allies was "much better today than it was, not only at the time of the signing of the armistice between France and Germany, but as it developed in the months which immediately followed the fall of France."

This was a war of years, with inevitable periods of success or reverse which should be viewed with a time perspective. It was increasing in its fury but Britain's strength was also increasing steadily and in the end the war would be won by national character, Mr. King said.

The throne speech debate, suspended briefly for Mr. Ilsley to introduce his finance resolutions, was resumed late in the day and is being continued today by Conservative Leader Hanson. Pensions Minister Mackenzie also may speak.

The debate is expected to wind up late tonight or tomorrow, after which consideration of the finance resolutions will begin.

The Finance Minister said the measures he was laying before the House for the conservation of exchange had more than a monetary significance.

"By denying ourselves a wide range of imports and by these reductions and removals of duties on British goods, we once more say to Britain and to the world that we are with her and that we have faith in her ultimate success," said Mr. Ilsley.

After reviewing the steps previously taken to conserve exchange for the buying of war supplies in the United States, the Minister said these had been outweighed by the away with his air force day and night against the nation's industrial centres, lines of communications, and wherever there is a settlement, he hoped to paralyze Britain's machinery of war production, create chaos, and to crush the civilian morale.

Within recent months I have had the opportunity of travelling quite extensively through those areas which have been subjected to the most ruthless attacks. In some parts much damage has been done, particularly to civilian property. Factories and other military objectives have been hit here and there, but in the vast workshop which is Britain at war there has been no serious weakening or disorganization of her ability to produce those vital resources she needs to meet her stepped-up war effort.

Repair Crews Do Marvels

Emergency repair crews, however, have performed prodigious deeds in keeping pace with destruction. Furthermore the average individual accepts such inconveniences without too much grumbling or philosophically admits it might have been far worse.

What amazes visitors to London is the small damage done to military objectives and other important targets in comparison with the large number of bombs dropped. To a motorist approaching from any point of the compass the city's skyline does not appear to have undergone any drastic change. It is only when one sets out on a tour of the great city that its jagged wounds become apparent.

Due to the efficiency of the R.A.F. daylight raids over the metropolis are becoming less frequent. As a consequence business and traffic proceeds with a bustle and congestion reminiscent of peacetime. Night life, however, has been drastically curtailed.

The average individual pays little attention to the warning siren or bark of the guns during the day. More often he makes off for a point of vantage or joins a group of skygazers watching the progress of a "dog fight" and following the strange vapor patterns from the exhausts of the machines. Cheers and shouts of joy rend the air whenever our fighters crack down a Jerry. That has become a familiar sight for the front-line Londoners.

THE JOB IS DONE

H. W. Cooper, truck driver for the Park Department of the city admitted when asked to-day that he chuckled when he saw the notice in the Examiner concerning the city rinks. The notice intimated the rinks had yet to be set up, but actually this work has all been completed even to putting the stoves in the huts ready for a fire. In other words Mr. Cooper carried on the work that he had done for years under the direction of the late Walter Stocker.

This Laxative Works Right Where Most Constipation Occurs!

When you're constipated, the trouble usually is in the big bowel—when waste has only a few inches more to go. Made with cascara, said to give "nearest to natural action" of any cathartic. Quick to relieve—they cleanse the big bowel in 10 to 12 hours. Each foil-wrapped tablet a dose. Twelve tablets, only 25c. HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Stores or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended as easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. —(Advt.)

King Says War One Of Years Not Of Months

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons to-day the position of Britain now is infinitely superior to the position at the fall of France or at any time since.

Mr. King said he had been been asked for a statement although he had little news. Some statements appearing in the press might indicate the war had taken a graver turn.

In a long struggle—he said this war was one of years—there would inevitably be periods of sunshine and shadow but it would be unwise to become unduly depressed or unduly elated over any single set of circumstances.

If British leaders spoke at times in a way which suggested pessimism it was just that they wished to give their people the true picture.

In all such statements appeared the "absolute refusal of the British people now or at any time to consider the prospect of defeat."

While many things caused concern many other were encouraging. It was the duty of the government to "view the war steadily and view it whole."

In doing that the government followed a policy of planning, in co-operation with the British government, for a victorious outcome of the struggle.

Had the Government been guided by "vociferous demands" at the start of war it would have recruited large numbers of men and rushed them overseas, possibly using conscription and weakening national unity.

The effect would have been to impose on a beleaguered island the burden of feeding large numbers who were not required.

This activity did not lend itself to display.

been unable to obtain billets for the night had their first sleep in 48 hours last night in trucks and cars parked at the roadside. The scene was like a gypsy encampment.

One of them said: "There are hundreds in Southampton like me. Country houses, hotels and even cottages have taken in refugees from Southampton until there is not even a sofa unoccupied. It is not that we cannot stand the bombing, but rather that there is no accommodation left for us in town."

Red-eyed from lack of sleep, Town Clerk R. R. H. Meggeson said there is "no question of any large-scale evacuation though we've had loud speaker cars going round the streets reminding the people that they can take advantage of the arrangements for evacuating mothers and young children."

Meantime the 200-foot clock tower of the civic centre stood like an accusing finger pointing at the sky. People who lived through the two nights of horror said the raiders lit the sky so bright with flares that it was possible to read a newspaper in the street. Incendiary and high explosive bombs followed. The Nazi airmen also machine-gunned firemen.

1. Personal relationships between Prince Franz Joseph and leading personalities of the Nazi regime are cordial.

2. A truce has been arranged between the two political parties of the principality, the Civic (Conservative) party and the Patriotic Union, the latter with Nazi leanings.

3. German anti-semitism has been met by legislation restricting Jewish influence in the principality.

In order further to bar trouble, the Government at the beginning of last Summer forbade all political meetings of any kind. As a concession to the Patriotic Union, several representatives of that party were given political berths.

Economically, the little country has been hard hit by the war. By treaty it is incorporated in the Swiss customs territory. Hence, just as Switzerland is in a bad way economically, so Leichtenstein is bound to be.

The cost of living has risen steadily—as much as 40 per cent, economists estimate. Food rationing has become necessary.

The accident occurred at 4 a.m., but reports reaching Zaragazo up to noon still were fragmentary.

The expresses are two of Spain's best trains on a line which connects Madrid with the French border by way of Cerbere.

A special relief train carrying army medical equipment was dispatched to the scene. Baron de Benasque, Governor of the Province, personally took charge of the relief force.

Velilla de Ebro is about 240 miles from Madrid and about 180 from Barcelona. Two express trains, both usually crowded to capacity, cross there daily.

More detailed reports trickling into Zaragoza indicated the train from Madrid had stopped to wait for the train from Barcelona to pass, but that the Barcelona express crashed into the Madrid train at high speed—presumably because a switch was not thrown.

The moving train overturned the stationary locomotive and then ground into the wooden coaches, ripping them apart.

Petain To Rule France

Reports reaching diplomatic circles from France hinted that Petain was overruling the advice of his vice-premier, pro-Nazi Pierre Laval, in arranging to transfer his official residence to the traditional capital of Royal France and shuttle back and forth to Vichy.

Laval, these reports indicated, advised the Marshal last week to stay in Vichy until Laval had discussed arrangements for such a move in Berlin.

Petain was said to have ordered Laval to do the arranging in Paris and cancel the trip to the German capital.

This, like Petain's opposition to the ousting of French residents from Lorraine, caused observers to wonder whether the old Marshal might not be following a shrewd plan to do the most for France, while capitalizing on a belief in some quarters that he is only a figurehead chief of state.

Such observers recall it was Petain who let Gen. Maxime Weygand drop out of the government. Some said, at that time, that Laval had "squeezed" Weygand out; that "old Petain just doesn't know the score."

65 Highlanders Guests Of Lions

Men of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, sixty-five in number, were special guests at the Ottawa Lions' Club weekly war services entertainment, at the Elgin Theatre in Ottawa on Sunday night.

The men of the Highland Regiment were under the leadership of Lieut. F. L. Fisher of Kingston. Every seat in the theatre was filled before 8:30 p.m., and many hundreds of people were turned away because of lack of accommodation.

A program had been arranged, and eight members of the regiment were quized informally in a contest conducted by the master of ceremonies, Robert Laughton. In introducing his men, Lieut. Fisher presented a short historical sketch of the Highland foundation of his regiment.

In a parody, set to the music of the popular melody, "You'd Be Surprised," Benito Mussolini was lampooned. The program was opened by the Lions' president, Al Briault, and the proceeds of the evening were turned over to the regimental funds of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengary Highlanders.

Many Cyclists Have No Lights

"Three or four bicycles have been hit by automobiles here in the last few days," said Chief Constable Sam Newhall this morning, "and in nearly every case there was no light on the wheel. With daylight saving in force it is dark when most factory workers are going to work and many of them are riding bicycles unprotected by lights. The danger of that practice has been shown by the increase in the number of automobile-bicycle accidents, most of which have occurred early in the morning."

"If the stories of these accidents appearing in the papers is not a sufficient warning," continued Chief Newhall, "we will have to se what court appearances will do to check this dangerous habit. I am going to issue orders to have all bicyclists who ride without lights during the hours of darkness summoned. It seems to be about the only effective way of dealing with a serious situation."

Church Organizations And Societies Providing Programs At Camp

Church organizations and dramatic societies in this city are doing a great job in providing entertainment for the trainees at the Exhibition Grounds camp.

During the past two weeks almost every night has seen a different program being staged in the big recreation hut conducted by the Salvation Army, and for the next two weeks several other worthwhile events are being arranged.

Every Sunday members of the different women's organizations in the city provide help in the canteen, and some of them bring sandwiches for the trainees. On Sunday last members of the I.O.D.E. brought sandwiches and served.

The Rev. Dr. Young, of St. Andrew's Church was chairman on Sunday evening when St. Andrew's choir put on a program of vocal work. Jack Smith, well-known entertainer and several other local artists assisted.

Last week the Cheerful Workers' Bible Class from St. James' Church staged a comedy-drama, "Home Ties" and it went over big. On the following evening the Temple Songsters from the Salvation Army gave the entertainment in the form of a variety program with the boys joining in the community singing.

On Wednesday Harry Lewis, cartoonist and ventriloquist was on the entertainment bill, along with the Searles string trio, and Mrs. C. Searles, vocalist, Patsy Connell, marimba, and Emmett Kearney, pianist. Marion Perry Laird had her class of clever dancers down and Miss Berniece Flynn played the accompanist for some of the dance numbers.

Mark Street Church Dramatic club staged a gala evening on Thursday with their top notch comedy, "Don't Darken My Door," and on Friday George Street United Church Dramatic club teamed up with the Aloha Serenaders to provide the entertainment. They had the play, "Elizabeth's Young Man," a one-act farce comedy and "Saving Dad," another comedy. The program was rounded out by solo and group numbers by members of the musical organization the Aloha Serenaders under the direction of Helen Ludbrook Galvin.

Last night the Westclox Dramatic Club presented their play to the trainees and they packed the big hall. Tonight is amateur night and the officials have been busy ferreting out talent in the camp.

The young soldiers are showing a great desire to be on hand for this high class entertainment, and the efforts of the various organizations is greatly appreciated, not only by Adjutant R. N. Bamsey who is in charge of the canteen, but by officers and trainees as well.

who said he thought the great hall was on fire. The roof of the great hall was of heavy oak timber. The roof was ablaze.

"Then the rush started. There were hoses to pull up and down stairs and get working. I turned a hose on the floor of the hall and played it on the room until smoke laid me out.

"We kept going and had five hoses at work fairly soon, but the flames sped along the timbers. Burning boards began to fall...

"King's College (London) had 7,500 books in that hall and the King's Offices under it.

"We carried on until the police cleared us out because of a time bomb. Four bombs had fallen at the base of the building, but none on it.

'Outside, scores of fires were raging. The anatomy block and geography department were done for. The art gallery and museum next door both were ablaze. The whole street was levelled to the ground.

"It was not till the next day that I saw what happened to the shopping and commercial centre of Bristol. It is quite true that nearly all damage was done to shops, houses, offices, theatres, and cinemas rather than docks and railways...

"The vice chancellor of Bristol and our principal decided to shut down the faculty of arts till next term. The rest are carrying on...

"I think Bristol made a rapid recovery and that quite literally the damage, though severe, was not vital so much consisting as it did in shops.

"Another raid on the same scale the following night might have been a finishing blow, but I suppose the Germans thought they would get better results per ton of bombs if they attacked another town.

"The casualty list was short. I saw it, but by light of torch. I would say there certainly were not 50 killed. Luckily it was Sunday night, and people all were in the suburbs."

The damage in last night's raid was more scattered in the previous attacks. Officials said, however, the food situation was "not serious."

Nurses saved 80 patients of a children's hospital hit by an aerial torpedo and clambered over the ruins to-day to salvage surgical instruments. The children were carried to a neighboring hospital.

"When the first bombs whistled down, the staff of 20 nurses on duty carried the children—four or five to a cot—to a lower corridor," said Nurse Mary Dingle.

"Then there was a deafening crash as a bomb—it must have been a very heavy one—fell through the roof of the operating room. At once we picked up as many children as we could and ran with them to the other hospital. Then we returned and got the others.

"The kiddies were quite cheerful and one tiny tot of four or five sang as we hurried him along."

An air raid warden, a taxi driver and another civilian ran through the falling bombs and saved a church by putting out fire bombs with hand pumps.

Marmora And Lake Councils Are Returned For Two Years

MARMORA, Dec. 3—(ENS)—Elections in Marmora village and in Marmora and Lake township on Monday failed to produce the slightest change. The reeves and councils of these municipalities for the past year will now serve for a further term—this time for two years.

Marmora and Lake Township balloted as to the advisability of this extended tenure of office and the vote in its favor was 375 to 98.

Despite the heavy roads, the agriculturists of the township evinced a little more interest in their election than the resident of the village. Of 632 on the voting lists of the village only 260 voted. On the other hand at Beaver Creek polling station No. 2 of the township, of a possible 150 voters 121 voted. George Brown, unsuccessful candidate in the township was unable to watch his own interests having to be rushed to Belleville General Hospital through illness. Driver Is Fined Leaving Accident

"Motorists will have to understand that when they have accidents the least they can do is to stop and render assistance," declared Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning after George Van Every had pleaded guilty to a charge of hit-and-run driving.

Van Every was fined $25 and $4 costs and Magistrate Langley suspended the accused's driving license for three months.

After Van Every had pleaded guilty to the offence Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., told the court that the accused's car had collided with a parked car and he had driven off without stopping. The police had some little difficulty in finding him afterward, the crown attorney said.

"This man has sold his car since the accident," said John A. Bradshaw, who appeared for Van Every. "He is prepared to pay the damages caused by the accident."

Stating that his client "had lost his head" for a while after the collision Mr. Bradshaw appealed for suspended sentence for the accused but Magistrate Langley said that he did not feel inclined to extend leniency in such cases.

Weather Front Relief In Sight

TORONTO, Dec. 3 — (CP). — Masses of cold air moving eastward from the Mackenzie River valley in the far northwest put Manitoba, Ontario and the western part of Quebec in the grip of a cold snap today with temperatures tumbling far below zero.

But there was immediate relief in sight as the cold began to lift early today from Manitoba, and it was expected that temperatures would moderate in the affected parts of Ontario and Quebec by nightfall.

The Maritimes, which enjoyed comparative warmth, were scheduled to get the wintry blasts tomorrow.

Canada's coldest spot at eight o'clock this morning was Moosonee, James Bay terminus of the Timiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, where the temperature was 22 below. It had dropped to that during the night.

Moving east from Winnipeg, where it was five below, sub-zero temperatures prevailed in Ontario at Sault Ste. Marie, Peterborough, Parry Sound, Toronto, Kingston and Ottawa, in a range from one below to 13 below. It was zero at Montreal and 20 below at Doucet, Que.

Autumn-like temperatures of 35 to 50 above prevailed along the pacific coast at Vancouver and Victoria and in Alberta.

The swift descent of freezing temperatures after last week's snowstorms in Ontario left the province's by-roads and highways ice-coated and dangerous.

Two Applications Are Made For Citizenship

Applications for Canadian citizenship by Peter G. Dinesen, an inspector at the Western Clock Company received the recommendation of Judge D. B. Coleman of Whitby at the opening of the general sessions of the peace and county criminal court this afternoon. Born in Denmark, Mr. Dinesen said he had been a resident here since 1925.

Asked by His Lordship why he had not previously sought naturalization, Mr. Dinesen said he had intended to return to Denmark, but he had put that idea out of his mind because "Hitler has got it now."

John A. Bradshaw, counsel for Mr. Dinesen, called H. L. Garner, general manager of the Peterborough Examiner, in support of the applicant.

Mr. Garner said: "I have found him to be an able man, well educated, and apparently a good citizen in every respect."

Judge Coleman said he did not need to hear any further evidence as he announced his decision to recommend Mr. Dinesen to the Minister of Justice.

After hearing a similar appeal by Donato Minnicola who was born in Italy but had lived here since he was six years old, Judge Coleman said he had adopted a policy of not admitting to citizenship any national of German or Italian birth during the period of the war.

"Are you willing to bear arms against Italy if this country required you?" Judge Coleman asked Mr. Minnicola.

"Yes, sir," was the answer.

He added that he did not think much of Mussolini and the fascist dictatorship.

Judge Coleman asked Crown Attorney McElderry whether he had anything to say about this application.

"I think Your Honor has taken a proper position at this time," Mr. McElderry said. "I do not think the application should be approved. There is nothing about this case that should be exceptional to your policy while the war continues."

Judge Coleman told Mr. Minnicola that he was not dismissing the application but was indefinitely postponing it."

Seek Enforcement Of Parking Bylaw

The police department is being asked by the council through the Commission, of which Mayor Hamilton is a member, to enforce the traffic bylaw in its features which place a time limit on the parking of cars in streets.

This motion by Aldermen Bradburn and Roy Monday night followed City Engineer Parsons' complaint of the difficulties experienced by the operators of the big graders over the week-end in being forced to swing around many scores of cars that were left standing out beyond the curb all night.

Mr. Parsons said that some cars are left out on the road all winter. "I think we are doing a pretty good job of clearing away snow, but it can be better if people will help us."

Magistrate Halts Trials Of Farmer

Because he was convinced that the accused was incapable of realizing the nature of the proceedings Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., stopped the trial of an aged Harvey township man who was charged in police court to-day with cruelty to animals.

The farmer is alleged to have allowed several of his pure-bred stock to starve to death, despite the fact that there was plenty of food available. Provincial Constable David Silvester and Humane Inspector Dr. Thos. Johnston visited the Harvey township farm and saw the condition of affairs there and the charge followed.

The taking of evidence had started to-day when Magistrate Langley decided to adjourn the case on account of the apparent failure of the accused to understand what was said to him.

Arrangements have been made to look after the animals on the farm

CENTRAL SCHOOL

The timely subject of Citizenship was chosen by T. J. Carley, K.C., when he addressed a meeting of the Central Home and School Association Monday night. Mrs. George Leeming presided for the meeting, which was held in the Kindergarten Room, and opened with the reading of the School Prayer and the Christmas carol, "It came Upon the Midnight Clear."

An explanation of the duties of the Victorian Order of Nurses, which may be established in Peterborough shortly, was given by Mrs. F. J. Lynch.

Musical numbers included a piano solo "Sparklets" played by Marjorie Pearse; a violin solo by Douglas Ferguson, "On the Blue Danube," accompanied by Miss Marguerite Rome, with "Till the lights of London Shine Again" as an encore. QUEEN MARY

The joyful singing of Christmas carols led by Mr. Jack Telford, with Mrs. H. V. Dobson at the piano, was a feature of the December meeting of the Queen Mary Home and School Association, held at the school Monday night.

With the aid of a number of school children, Miss Mary Harstone demonstrated in a lively and interesting manner the method of teaching music as used in the schools, and Mrs. L. Ingram from the chair explained that for a very small consideration this invaluable training was open to every child, and hoped for a time when all would avail themselves of the opportunity. Miss I. Madill, using the book itself in her demonstration, gave a short talk on Grade Number Two Reader, and described the process by which new matter was presented to the child, and new words gained for the vocabulary.

Mrs. F. J. Lynch of the Victorian Order of Nurses gave general information regarding the organization which she represents, and which after January first will replace the old system of public health nursing in this city. The co-operation of the women of the community was solicited for the work of this group of women who are, by post-graduate training, specialists in every branch of nursing.

A collection of paper by the children of the school was announced, and parents were asked to contribute when paper and magazines were available. The banner count gave Miss Madill's class the junior lead, and Miss M. A. Stenton's the senior. Mrs. T. J. Carley's "Current Events" was informative and of interest. After the National Anthem, Mrs. J. Fanning and her assistants served tea.

Staples, pupils of Grade One presented a song in pantomime. Pupils of Grade One and Two presented a folk dance, taught them by Miss Gertrude Cox. Small Gayle Loosli, wearing a dainty ballet costume, delighted the audience with her dancing.

Miss E. Eagleson's pupils sang two two-part songs very cleverly, "Away In A Manger" and "While Shepherds Watched their Flocks by Night," the latter with a descant. Grade Seven pupils presented a star drill, Hugh Graham and Bill Browne sang two solos, "O Little Town of Bethlehem" and "Silent Night." The pupils closed their excellent program by presenting the latter part of Dickens' "Christmas Carol."

The meeting opened with the singing of Carols and "O Canada", followed by the Lord's Prayer. The president, Mrs. C. C. Doughty, was in the chair, and reports were given by various committees. Mrs. W. H. Marshall's report on Red Cross activities showed that splendid progress had been made. Mr. E. Frost's room won attendance for mothers, with 20 parents present. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

BEING AN OLD MAID HAS MANY RECOMPENSATIONS

There Is No Personal Disgrace When Gir' in Her Twenties Has Failed or Refuses to Select a Husband

Dear Miss Dix—I am 23 years old. Am self-supporting and no expense to my family, so I do not see why my mother should be so crazy to have me marry. But she is. She twits me all the time with not having got a husband as her other daughters have. Calls me the old maid of the family even in talking to strangers. This mortifies me very much and it hurts me to think she is so anxious to get rid of me. I have talked it all over with her and told her how I feel about it, but it does no good. I don't understand why my mother should be so anxious for me to marry, as her own marriage was unhappy. But I think she would be glad to see me marry just anybody, whether I cared for him or not, instead of waiting, as I intend to do until Mr. Right comes along. But I don't know what to do. What is you advice?

JUST AN OLD MAID.

ANSWER — You mother's ideas about old maids are virtually prehistoric. They belong to the days when girls married at 15 and 16 because their parents were anxious to wish their support off on a husband and when it was considered a reflection on a woman to be an old maid because it showed that she was so unattractive there were no takers.

But the conditions of modern life have changed the whole point of view about women and marriage. Now we do not think that a girl should even consider marriage before she is 20, because we do not thing that until she is adult and her own tastes and character formed that she is capable of choosing a life of whom she will not tire.

Also, we think that she should have her play time and be satisfied with parties and dates and ready to settle down before she marries.

A Help at Home

There is no reason why a girl who makes her own bread and butter and silk stockings should be hurried into marriage as her dependent forebears were. She is an asset to her family instead of a liability. Like the Irishman's pig, the unmarried daughter is the gentleman who pays the rent in many a home and provides mother with the comforts she wouldn't have but for her.

As for there being any stigma attached to a woman not marrying that theory has gone with the wind. If a woman stays single, nobody attributes it to her not having had a chance to marry.

They think it is just because she never happened to meet any man who looked as good to her as her freedom did, and the old maid is looked upon often with envy than she is with pity.

Half the career women are old maids. And what the married women would do if they didn't have old maid sisters and aunts to help them out with buying the children's shoes and Winter clothes and paying for having Mary's teeth straightened and Johnny's adenoids out and sending Robin to college, goodness only knows.

Disregard Taunts

Nevertheless, in spite of all this, there are still mothers so behind the time that the are anxious to get their daughters married that they would rather they had bad husbands than none at all, and who seem to feel it a personal disgrace for their girls to be old maids.

The only thing you can do is to disregard your mother's taunts. Laugh them off if you can. If you can't, leave home. But don't let yourself be high-pressured into marriage before you are ready for it.

A very wise woman, who was also an old maid, once said that it was better to be laughed at because you were not married than not to be able to laugh because you were.

PARENTS SHOULD NOT BE SELFISH

Dear Dorothy Dix—What do you think of a woman who tells her son that she will end her life if he marries the girl he loves? Both he and his fiancee are in their late 20s. The man supports his parents and they live in his home. The father is an able-bodied man but doesn't like to work except at long intervals. The man feels that he cannot turn them out of house and home. The girl refuses to live with his parents. What is the answer?

A FRIEND OF BOTH.

ANSWER—I think the answer is perfectly simple. The man should refuse to let his selfish parents terorize him into sacrificing his life's happiness to them.

The mother's threat to commit suicide is just an act she put on to keep her son's pay envelope for her exclusive use and benefit. She won't do it. All he will have to do will be just to call her bluff and she will still be around just as chipped as you please. Also, the father sits down on the do-nothing stool because it is easier to work his son than it is to work at a job.

I think the girl is entirely right in refusing to go to live with two greedly, grasping old people who would make her life a torment if she did.

And she is also right in calling for a showdown from the man to whom she is engaged and to find out whether he considers his parents' wishes more important than her happiness. If he is going to consider them before her, she should know it and not waste any more time upon him.

Of course, the man should help his parents, but he should get them a small house or apartment in which to live and fix a definite allowance he would give them for their support. That would force father to go to work, which would be good for his health and his morals and his self-respect.

A child's duty does not demand that he should support in idleness a man who is able to support himself, even if that man is his own father.

DON'T RUSH INTO AN ENGAGEMENT

Dear Miss Dix—I am in love with a very nice young girl and she loves me. Should I give her an engagement ring before going away to my military training for a year, or wait until I return? Would it be holding her down in any way? Would it make her think she had to stay at home all the time? I don't want to do anything I would be sorry for afterward.

UNDECIDED.

ANSWER—I think you had better not give the girl the ring until you come back. A year isn't long and you would know more about what you want to do at the end of that time than you do now.

The Stars Say . . .

For Wednesday, December 4.

A day of curious, unforeseen and exciting circumstances is predicted by the involved lunar and mutual aspects. Under an urge to do abrupt, irregular and erratic things in trying to adjust the unusual state of affairs it is likely that the dangers and dilemmas will be exaggerated and prove more complicated. Impetuous, wayward and eccentric moves are particularly unfortunate as they are impelled by an excited and irresponsible state of mind.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of peculiar, extraordinary, perhaps, spectacular experiences and adventures. Strange revolutionary and abrupt visitations may prove disastrous and uprooting unless manged by a well-ordered, shrewd and capable mind—which had best be sought in superiors or elders. Be particularly cautious with signatures.

A child born on this day may have a rather peculiar temperament, with many contradictory traits. It may be endowed with unusual or novel talents as well as pronounced eccentricities of conduct. It will usually be sustained by its superiors, however.

A Serious Times Budget

The general idea in the budget changes announced by Finance Minister Ilsley can be divided several ways:

Making it easier for Britain to sell goods in the Canadian market by doing away with the tariff barrier.

Making it more difficult for the people of this country to spend their money on imported goods which are non-essential to their existence.

Making it more difficult for us to send so much of our currency into United States.

Such an undertaking is not as simple as it might seem. This country has a trade agreement with United States which is valuable to Canadian agriculture because it takes enough livestock off our market to avoid a surplus. For that reason we cannot cut here and there and everywhere on our imports from United States. If we did so it is not likely our trade agreement with United States would last long.

Customs duties on cotton, artificial silk, bituminous coal, jellies, jams and marmalades, furniture, gloves and mitts, made in Britain, come off in their entirety. There is room for argument as to how this will affect our industries, but in a time of war when British exports are regarded as being munitions of war the argument cannot prove anything conclusively. Britain must export, and it is our plain duty to see that she does.

It will take a little time for these changes to prove their affect on trade and on our method of living. We are not at all inclined to criticize them. Rather we look upon them as being the decision of a Government faced with the stern business of keeping up our end in a war which is a matter of life or death to every home in the Dominion.

Interned Man Draws a Salary

Winnipeg City Council will have to make a decision. One of its members, Ald. Jacob Penner, elected as a Communist, has been in an internment camp since shortly after Communists were outlawed in this country and he has been receiving his aldermanic salary as usual.

Captain Morris Jacob, a veteran of the previous war, owes the city of Winnipeg business tax to the extent of $20, and he has been warned that a distress warrant will be issued against him if he does not pay.

Captain Jacob in reply said: "Let them go ahead. I will pay the city no money as long as a portion of it may go to an interned alderman, where it might be used by him or his relatives for subversive purposes."

The Winnipeg report says that steps are already under way to bar Ald. Penner from office. Under the regulations at Ottawa he could not again be a candidate.

It does seem that Capt. Jacob has the right idea, but the municipal authorities in Winnipeg are seeking to find the right way to deal with the case. They have agreed to a resolution that an alderman who is absent for three consecutive meetings shall be expelled, but that would require an amendment to the city charter which means it would have to have the approval of the Manitoba Legislature.

They will probably find the right way to deal with the situation. It is unthinkable that a man considered proper material for an internment camp should continue to draw his salary as an alderman from a Canadian city.

Just Plain Bad Manners

When R. W. Gladstone M.P. of Wellington South, was speaking in the debates at Ottawa we find the following interjection:

> Mr. SPEAKER: I would point out to the House that the Hansard reporter is having difficulty hearing what the hon. gentleman is saying because of the conversation that is going on in the House, and I would ask hon. members to be good enough to keep order.

It is not necessary to say much about that because the member from Wellington seems to have received a fairly good sort of treatment. At least he was allowed to proceed and say what he had to say.

E. G. Hansell, M.P. for Macleod, Alberta, had a harder time, and he was discussing something which had a point; something which required a certain amount of reasoning because it was a fairly ticklish question. Just this: Have we in Canada religious freedom today when one religious body has been outlawed? A good many members might have concluded the going was too hard, but Mr. Hansell kept on going and made what Hon. Ernest Lapointe called a good speech.

Looking at the House of Commons Debates we find there were in all 38 interruptions, and many of them were such small fry that the wonder is sensible adults would be bothered making them. We give here an illustration:

> Mr. HANSELL: After they have put their ballots in the ballot boxes, the impression gained throughout the country is that they must say no more.
> Mr. BRADETTE: Page Alberta.
> Mr. JOHNSTON (Bow River): The Liberals in Alberta.
> Mr. BRADETTE: The Social Crediters in Alberta.
> Mr. BLACKMORE: They have not got the money.
> Mr. BRADETTE: The Liberals are not in power in Alberta.
> Mr. JOHNSTON (Bow River): But they certainly are in Canada.

It is poor custom, poor taste, poor everything. Mr. Hansell at the end of 40 minutes was informed his time was up. He could have had an extension but refused. We believe the rule of the House is that when a member has the floor it is necessary to secure his permission before launching a question, but what rule is there which permits 38 interruptions during a 40-minute speech?

Such Is Fame

At the Winter Fair in Guelph an Aberdeen-Angus steer owned by Thomas Henderson of Guelph became grand champion; that is, the best animal in the show. Weight was 870 pounds. When that award was made it is not at all difficult to understand what would take place. Owners and herdsmen would gather for final examination and perhaps a share of admiration. If there was any such thing as spoiling a steer by attention then that Aberdeen-Angus would have been spoiled.

But fame is such a fickle thing—even for a steer. Even for a grand champion. We learn he took a trip from Guelph to the Union Stock Yards in Toronto and there was sold for 75 cents per pound, or a total of $626.25. And when a firm buys them by the pound it means they intend to sell the same way — over the counter.

So it may be as well to be just an ordinary animal. The prospects of living a little longer and seeing a little more of what is going on in this troubled world are brighter. When a steer becomes a grand champion at 75 cents per pound, he's through.

Snow Reduced To Statistics

Board of Works made one swell job of getting the streets of Peterborough in shape after the snowstorm at the tail end of November. Perhaps those words about a "swell job" may strike one as out of place when dealing with snow. The streets were very much of a mess when work was started and going was hard, and about the only place to park was out near the middle of the street.

It looked like day and night work and that is what it was, and by Monday morning the all-clear sign could have been posted.

We have a great dumping ground for snow in Peterborough. We just take all we do not need and dump it in the river. The Otonabee is such a patient stream that way. When the thaw comes, no matter when, the river takes care of the whole thing and does it nicely. It does not overflow its banks and wreck the country. It merely takes along all our surplus snow, and seems to be content that the city is at least throwing something clean into it.

November had a total of 19.6 inches of snow, and that was the highest for 20 years. Of that total 9.8 inches came on Thursday night, Friday and Saturday and virtually none of it has disappeared through the usual method of thawing. People are more interested in such statistics today because there are so many cars on the go. A motorist who gets stuck, who gets friends to push while the wheels spin likes to know that he has been the victim of exactly so many inches of snow. Even the decimal points may interest him. And it is no trick at all for this paper to speak with authority on such matters as the official Weather Man for the community is right in this office.

Toronto papers tell that 4,000,000 tons of snow fell on that city on Tuesday and Saturday, and Peterborough people who have been in Toronto on recent days report the streets there are about as bad as could be. Toronto's snowfall for November was 12 inches, and it would be necessary to go back to 1873 to find the record of 19.6 inches for the month. Shucks—we had 19.6 inches of snow in November of 1940, so we must conclude that Toronto does not well understand what to do with its snow.

Then there is the statement of W. G. Robertson of the Ontario Motor League. He compiles statistics of another sort. The condition of Toronto streets in recent days has cost the average motorist $5 through damaged springs, cut tires, wheels thrown out of alignment and all such matters. Of the 150,000 cars in Toronto at least 100,000 were operating. (Our impression has always been that the entire 150,000 were either on the streets or parked at the sides). So the car damage has been $500,000, and that's a thumping big loss to take just a few weeks before Christmas. Snow is useful and we've always had it in this country, but the increasing number of car drivers has caused us to make a fuss about it and has stimulated the insistence that we have many men at once engaged in the business of getting rid of it.

Fighting Seven Miles Up

Two British Spitfires went after a German Messerschmitt over England, and the German craft was shot down at 37,000 feet. And that is about as close as one could come to seven miles in the air. A report from London telling of this adventure intimates that planes operating at seven miles up is not considered a record in this war. The height to which the Spitfire can go is a military secret.

At heights of 15,000 feet or over the pilots use oxygen apparatus, and at 37,000 feet it is reported they were using nothing in addition to the oxygen.

One might think there would be no escape for the pilot of the crippled machine at 37,000 feet, but in the London report it is recorded the German pilot bailed out and landed safely, after which he was taken prisoner.

German planes when they come in formation have fighters at about 15,000 feet; above that come the bombers and on top of the bombers are more fighters, the business of the fighters being to protest the bombers from being attacked, or to engage British planes so the bombers can proceed on their way. The extreme heights to which they go may at times be governed by the proximity of the Spitfires, for the Germans have found to their grief the Spitfire is a miserable fellow with which to contend.

NOTE AND COMMENT

As a rule it is easy enough to think of a number of reasons or excuses for doing the things you desire to do.

Greek troops found a road sign in Albania: "The Italian army knows no obstacles." One Greek soldier added the words "...when retreating."

It is anticipated that the United States government will be approached by Italy, and the matter about which the conversation will turn will be nothing else than peace.

Prize-winning hogs at Guelph Winter Fair were sold for 13¾ cents per pound. That would be live weight and with their boots on. It is not a record, but it looks mighty attractive to the average farmer who checks on today's prices.

Three thousand mechanics are being released from the British army to go to work repairing bombed buildings. And that is a good example of the intelligent use of talent. If there is something special to be done then those who know how to attend to it are assigned to the work.

If you have come to the conclusion that you do not amount to much then you may find comfort in knowing that in the recent national registration the cost of getting your name, address and age and specifications cost the government ten cents. So whether you are worth a dime or not, the government spent that much to look you up.

TOO MUCH CARE

(By A.R.K.)

¶ Grandfather gets good care they say, they guard him carefully each day, protect him from the cold; in drafts grandfather must not sit, at open doors they throw a fit, they say he's growing old.

¶ If he suggests he'll take a walk, they all begin to plan and talk, advice is showered on him; for he might take a fearful chill, and after that be stricken ill, he better stay within.

¶ If he insists, at times he'll dare, they gather things for him to wear, a quilt around his neck; they burden him so he can't move, 'twould be quite easy then to prove the stuff would fill a peck.

¶ They warn him when he goes to bed, to wear a cap upon his head, and bed socks on his feet; they fear a cold might strike his lung, they tell him that he's not so young, and needs a pile of heat.

¶ Some times they leave him there alone, nor does he then complain or groan, he's glad to see them go; perhaps he's not so very wise, grandfather feels like exercise, and so he shovels snow.

¶ Again they wander from the place, a smile lights up grandfather's face, he goes and splits some wood; such nights when he goes off to bed, the family's mind is filled with dread—but he sleeps extra good.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

MASSEY HALL in Toronto was packed last Tuesday night to hear the Toronto Symphony Orchestra play a program under the distinguished English conductor, Sir Thomas Beecham; this was, in its way, a remarkable compliment to Sir Thomas, for his concert coincided with the first serious snowstorm of the winter, and it was a struggle for the audience to get there at all. They arrived, however, a little late and a little damp and dishevelled, but brave in rabbit-skin coats, opera hats and other garments which our civilization regards as necessary adjuncts of musical appreciation. The audience was a distinguished one, and was given a festive and official air by the presence of the Lieutenant-Governor and his party, who sat in bent-steel chairs in a sort of exclusive pen in the front of the first balcony; the grandeur of their entrance was somewhat spoiled, however, by the fact that they made it late, and straggled in during, instead of just before, The King.

C & B

Sir Thomas Beecham is probably the foremost English musician today. As a conductor, he has a world-wide reputation, and many critics regard him as the superior of Toscanini as an interpreter of Mozart and Handel. Sir Thomas is a baronet, the son of Sir Joseph Beecham, the immensely wealthy originator of Beecham's Pills; the fortune which Sir Joseph made out of his patent medicine he spent as a munificent patron of the arts. Sir Thomas inherited the money and the artistic enthusiasm of his father, and is remarkable as a musician who is also an extremely wealthy man. Since 1905 he has been prominent as a conductor and as an impresario of opera; it was he who first brought the Russian Ballet to London in 1911. It is also interesting to know that Sir Thomas was created a Knight of the British Empire for his services to music long before he inherited his father's title, and is thus twice a knight, a curious circumstance.

C & B

THE PROGRAM last Tuesday was typical of the conductor; it included his favourites, Handel, Mozart and Delius. The playing was decidedly not typical of the Toronto Symphony, from whom we expect competent but uninspired work. Sir Thomas surprised them, and they surprised the audience. It was quite obvious that the players stood in wholesome awe of the conductor; not only is Sir Thomas a great conductor, he is also a noted wit, and a man of fiery temper. There are legends of his conduct at rehearsals which are whispered among orchestral players the world over. He does not swear or rage, as some conductors do; he merely smiles, and plays with his beard, and says things which cause erring violinists and faulty drummers to wake up in a cold sweat years afterwards. Whatever Sir Thomas did or said to the Toronto Symphony they played better than the present writer has ever heard them before.

C & B

Almost any orchestra can make an impressive noise; it takes a good orchestra to play quietly and with precision. The Toronto Symphony is a very good orchestra, but it is apt to play rather heavily, and sometimes a little carelessly. What a miracle then, to hear Sir Thomas exact a beautiful and sensitive performance from them of Mozart's "French" Symphony! They played equally well in the same composer's overture to "The Marriage of Figaro," one of the most exacting pieces, in the matter of precision, in the whole of the orchestral repertoire. The orchestra was put through its paces, also, in Sir Thomas' own suite from Handel's "The Faithful Shepherd," which has some extremely difficult alternations of very loud and very soft music. Mention must be made at this point of the exquisite flute solo which occurs in this composition, and which fell to the lot of H. H. Bradfield, he played it most beautifully. Last time Mr. Bradfield played a solo was at one of the Summer Symphony concerts, when he played Bach's Suite for Flute and Strings; on that occasion the conductor took the time so fast that the orchestra over-rode and drowned Mr. Bradfield, and made him look rather foolish, which was unjust.

C & B

THE packed audience gave Sir Thomas a wonderful reception; they applauded and cheered for a good five minutes after the conclusion of the last number, which was Brahm's Second Symphony. Perhaps they were captivated by the fact that Sir Thomas beat time with his foot, as well as with his baton; this is a habit for which most of us have been reproved, at some time or other, and it was gratifying to see a truly great conductor doing it.

C & B

It was pleasant to learn that Sir Thomas formed a high opinion of Canadian audiences and musicians while he was here. His recent visit to Australia was apparently most unfortunate in this respect; audiences arrived late, and when the great conductor rebuked them they became most abusive in return; an air of acrimonious controversy attended his whole visit. Sir Thomas' good opinion of Canada is just one more proof of what this column has said before—that this is a land with a very high musical standard. It is a pity, however, that Canadian music should be concentrated in a few large centres. Our orchestras and choirs must tour.

THOROUGH GOING

"But I'm only carrying out the government's instructions, dear. They say that everybody ought to have something interesting to do during air raids."

—Humorist.

• Effect Of War On British Living

By J. V. McAree in Globe and Mail

ALTHOUGH our own impression after casually glancing over the pages of English papers would be that more men in uniform than civilians were charged with crime, the truth is that crime has steadily decreased since the war began. During one week the famous Old Bailey had not a single case to deal with, the first time this has happened in all its venerable history. Soon after the war began no fewer than 500 000 car owners failed to renew their licenses because of the increased cost of petrol, and the regulation that the average family could drive only 180 miles each month, in contrast to the prewar average of 1,000 miles. The civilian consumption of petrol declined by 25 per cent, and for this reason one may see hundreds of gas stations along the roads closed for the duration. These regulations led to a boom in bicycles, whose sales increased threefold, even though prices were advanced 50 per cent. Another unexpected boom took place in safety deposit vaults. Strong-box manufacturers sold more in a month than during the preceding year, for the thoughts of people had turned to saving their valuable papers and other property which could be contained in a small compass.

DEMAND FOR DIAMONDS

THERE was also an astounding demand for diamonds, the sale of which had to be rationed. Cutlery manufacturers could not keep up with the demand for silverware chests. The explanation is that people were trying to put their money into articles which could hardly be destroyed and which might be expected to retain their value after the war. Marriages have increased 17 per cent, a strong contrast to the same decline in the gloomy months of uncertainty following Munich. Divorces have been cut in two, and the birth rate is what it was in the early months of the Great War, being somewhat above the average. Despite Government promises, and presumably efforts, the cost of living has advanced, and is now 33 per cent above the first half of 1939. Food is up 25 per cent. Granulated sugar has advanced 66 per cent, cheese 28 per cent, beef 22 per cent, tea 11 per cent, margarine 11 per cent, eggs 36 per cent, and bread 5 per cent. A single lemon costs 25 cents. Sausages are not rationed, and the restrictions on meat have greatly increased their sale, which stood at 40,000 000 pounds a week at the last reading.

COSTS MORE TO LIVE WORSE

THE PRICE of clothing has advanced 30 per cent, which does not include the purchase tax on luxuries of from 16⅔ to 33 1-3 which went into effect on Oct. 1. The rates on light, gas and fuel have increased on an average of 16 per cent, while transportation costs have increased variously from 10 to 50 per cent. Furniture prices have gone up 30 per cent, but demand has decreased by 33 per cent, since few people, seeing the destruction of furniture all about them, are willing to invest their money in so perishable a commodity unless absolutely forced to do so. The consumption of beer is down 10 per cent, and the cost up 33 per cent. Less beer is drunk mainly because the social conditions in which it used to be enjoyed no longer exist. Longer working hours is another cause. To meet the increased cost of living, wages have been advanced in many industries. For instance, the wages of some 6,600,000 coal miners, iron, steel, rubber, textile and transportation workers have been increased by $6,000,000 weekly.

AN UNEMPLOYED ARMY

ON the other hand more than 2,000,000 civilians are now in uniform and their former earnings have been reduced anywhere from $3 to $10 a week. Munition workers, especially since the evacuation of Dunkirk and the knowledge that the war had entered a new phase became general, have increased their former $12 a week to $24 and even $32 by overtime. Nevertheless, the war has absorbed only 500,000 of the English army of unemployed. The reason is that there has been a tremendous drop, in many cases a complete stoppage, of manufactures not considered essential for war purposes or for obtaining foreign exchange. There has been a notable increase in the number of small plots of land under cultivation. The average allotment costs $8 to operate, not counting labor, and returns about $30 worth of vegetables, enough to feed a family of five for 212 days of the year. There has been also a great increase in the number of people who bred poultry and rabbits for food. Farmers have added more than 2,000,000 acres of land for the production of grain. The railroads have profited greatly, but have done a great job.

• The Man Who Knows Too Much

By T. or Brown in the Manchester Guardian

I RECENTLY read in the New Statesman and Nation that the war has made us sociable; conversation, which once trickled shyly in British railway carriages, now flows in spate. Air-raid shelters prompt even the starchiest people to address each other without introduction or invitation.

Some may welcome this sudden lowering of stiff upper lips and loosening of the sluggish Island tongue. But for me the talkative and knowing neighbor holds a prominent place among the minor horrors of war. He is so free with what I do not in the least want—his information.

The trouble is that the fellow not only knows but insists on my knowing that he knows. He knows where the bomb fell last night, and whether it was an aerial torpedo, a land mine, or a mere midget. He knows what Hitler told Goering yesterday and what they will both be doing tomorrow. He knows, by looking at a scarcely visible speck in the sky, what type of airplane that is, whither bound, and on what business. He knows, by listening to a buzz or a droning sound in the night, whether that is a German bomber hither come for mischief or a British bomber on a practice flight. (His ability to distinguish them is the more remarkable since an airman of experience has told me that it cannot certainly be done.) He knows, of course, as mere matter for a parting shot, when, where, and how the war will end.

This, you may say, is not knowledge, but opinion. But it is passed to me as knowledge. At least the fellow has no doubts.

A Bit of Nonsense

Particular Man

As the inquisitive man sat on a seat in the park he watched a shabby individual coming along, picking up cigarette-ends.

Then the tramp sat down on the seat and began sorting his spoil. Presently he threw quite a long one away. This was too much for the curious looker-on.

"Excuse me," he said. "That looked a good one. Why did you throw it away?"

The tramp drew himself up proudly and replied:

"It ain't my brand."

Funny

Having a rather long and startling message to send home and just enough funds to pay for a 10-word telegram, the man wrote as follows:

"Bruises hurt erased a Ford erected

His Batman

The Major was inspecting a cavalry squadron somewhere in Yorkshire. Riding down the ranks, he stopped in front of one recruit, and said:

"Now, my lad, have that saddle and harness brighter in the morning." Turning to the sergeant-major, he said, "See to it, sergeant-major."

The next morning the saddle and harness were still dull, so the Major said, "I thought I told you to clean them for today."

The recruit answered, "No, Sir, you told the sergeant-major to see to it."

And He Slept In His Clothes

"No, a horse stepped on my hat."

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And I have given you a land for which ye did not labour, and cities which ye built not, and ye dwell in them; of the vineyards and oliveyards which ye planted not do ye eat. Now therefore fear the Lord, and serve him in sincerity and in truth: and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; and serve ye the Lord....

And the people answered and said, God forbid that we should forsake the Lord, to serve other gods; for the Lord our God, he it is that brought us up and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed. —Josh. xxiv.

SHEEP BIG BUSINESS

THE vast plains of Australia carry 110,000,000 sheep, yielding annually 1,010,000,000 pounds of wool worth approximately $200,000,000.

Although Australian flocks comprise less than one-sixth of the world's sheep, they produce more than one-quarter of the world's wool requirements, and maintain an industry with a capital value of $3,000,000,000. And this remarkable development, from a few sheep, brought out by the first colonists for meat, to an industry of world pre-eminence, has taken place in less than 150 years.—Victoria Colonist.

DANES NOT BEATEN

ALTHOUGH the Danish Government surrendered without a struggle, the Danish people, like the Norwegians and others now under the Nazi heel, are proving a thorn in the flesh of their conquerors. This was to be expected in Scandinavia. The Scandinavian peoples made the mistake of counting upon neutrality to save them and neglecting defences. They are paying the penalty, but peoples who have once lived the co-operative way of life can be counted on to struggle to maintain it. Hitler's minions can't make Nazis of them so long as they retain hope of ultimate release.—Western Farm Leader.

WILLKIE WARNED

RUMORS persist that Wendell Willkie is going to write a syndicated newspaper column. If he does he can kiss any future Presidential aspiration a fond farewell. As the announced leader of "the loyal opposition" he sells that political birthright for a pot of messages.

Over the door of every columnist's office should be a sign: "Abandon all political hopes, ye who enter here." A good columnist has to say what he thinks, while a man in politics always has to think what he says.—M. W. Bingay in Detroit Free Press.

Sunday Schools Plan Rally New Year's Day

The Peterborough Ministerial Association met in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday. Rev. C. C. Boyter, president, was in the chair, and Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt, secretary, directed the business. Also present were Revs. J. F. Everson, Dr. A. T. Barr, Adjt. Norman Buckley, Rev. F. W. Craik, Rev. Ralph D. Wright, and Dr. E. W. Young.

Dr. E. W. Young reported the findings of the Religious Education Committee as follows: The committee decided to give a course of instruction to the nurses of Nicholls Hospital beginning in the New Year. Rev. T. J. Floyd will be in charge. The course for the public schools will follow the syllabus of the Ontario Religious Education Council, and at the beginning of the New Year, a series of 19 weekly lessons in The Life of Christ will be begun. Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt was appointed to take the place of Canon J. D. Paterson in the Prince of Wales school in January, and to continue until a successor to Canon Paterson has been appointed.

Dr. A. T. Barr reported for the committee appointed to organize the New Year's Rally for Sunday School teachers and scholars. This rally will be held in the Capitol Theatre on Wednesday, January 1, at 10.30 a.m. The scholars will meet in their respective schoolrooms at 10 o'clock and march to one of two centres; Knox Church and Murray Street Church; they will march from these centres to the theatre headed by the Salvation Army Bands. A mass choir composed of the junior choirs of the city will be organized by Harry Northrop, and Miss Paton, Salvation Army, and will lead the service of praise. The uniformed organizations of the city will be organized by Adjutant Buckley, who was added to the committee. Further details were left to the committee in charge. Dr. Archer Wallace of Toronto will give the address.

It was reported that the annual Week of Prayer will be held in the city January 6 to 11. Rev. F. G. Vesey of the Toronto Bible College and former missionary in Korea will give the addresses. The arrangements were placed in the hands of the following ministers: Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, Dr. A. T. Barr, Rev. H. L. Roberts and Rev. T. J. Floyd; Mr. Sutcliffe to be convener.

It was decided that the association place a poster in the Salvation Army Hut in the Exhibition Grounds announcing the names of the churches in the city, their ministers, and hours of service. Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt, chaplain, said that in response to many questions from ministers and laymen as to what is being done by the churches for the men in the camp; he was glad to say that all denominations are co-operating to the full in the work carried on in Adjt. Bamsley's hut. An average of fourf nights a week entertainment is provided by the churches within the camp itself.

V.O.N. Outlined.

J. A. Bradshaw, local barrister, spoke to the association on the Victorian Order of Nurses, which will soon be established in the city. He gave a brief outline of the work which tsese nurses will do for the poor people of the city, and asked the co-operation of the ministers in giving information to their congregations regarding this benevolent enterprise. This co-operation was readily promised by the meeting.

Adjutant Buckley was the speaker, and said that he had been asked to speak on the origin and history of the Salvation Army.

The Army, he said, had, like Topsy, just growed up. William Booth, the founder was originally a minister of the Methodist Church in England. He wishes to strike out as a free lance evangelist but was sent by the conference to a settled church. In 1865 he resigned from the church and started his campaign of evangelism and gathered around him a group of workers of like mind to his own. In 1880, the Army spread out into Ireland, the United States, and in 1881 to Australia.

The early officers were mainly persons who had been converted under the General. In 1882 it took root in Scandinavia. Bramwell Booth had a serious illness and went to Sweden to recover. The daughter of his hostess got converted and the work began there from that time. In 1882 Booth Tucker, a well-paid civil servant, resigned his job and opened a campaign in India. The same year the Army began in Switzerland; in 1883 in South Africa, Ceylon and other places in the Far East.

In 1884 social work was begun, a wealthy woman invited girls from the streets who had been converted to come to her home. Mrs. Bramwell Booth at once started rescue work. In 1885 Bramwell Booth and W. T. Stead showed the authorities in England that girls could be bought for money. Stead went to prison, but a radical reform was begun through their action.

Opposition to the Army's methods first arose from two classes: street hooligans and the High Church party. In 1891 after a long struggle permission was given in England for open air meetings. Orangemen were the first protectors of the Army in the open air. William Booth's book, "Darkest England and The Way Out," caused a furore. It was proved that church members owned saloons and houses of ill fame.

Emigration work had a small beginning, but many thousands of people through the Army were settled in the United States, Canada and other new countries. In 1904 the Army dress was recognized by the late King Edward VII for official receptions.

The Army is at work today in 97 different countries, and has 104 separate periodicals, with 1,550,422 of a circulation. There are no paid advertisements in any of these papers, lest the advertisers should attempt to dictate policy. Over a million open air meetings are held every year. The message of the Army is that Jesus is able to save to the uttermost.

Dr. E. W. Young and Dr. A. T. Barr thanked the speaker, and it was suggested that a series of addresses should be given on the origins and histories of the various churches represented in the Association.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

"IT'S REALLY because of me that mother's renting these rooms," Dinah explained in her friendly way, as she led Lona into the kitchen of the wing of the Morriss home Lona was planning to rent. "You see, mother's had to go to work in the library downtown. Some of the investments father left us have gone wrong, and she must make a living. I'd do it gladly for her if I could, but—you see how it is with me." She shrugged, and looked down at the wheel chair in which she sat, and a shadow crossed her bright face.

"It worries mother to have me here alone all day," she went on. "She thinks I can't manage. I can, of course, but if it will make her feel any easier, I'll be glad to have you in these rooms . . . that is, if you want them."

"They're perfect," Lona told her. "Just what I've been hoping for. I'm sure my husband—Mr. Bennett—will like them, too. Could I move right in, do you suppose?"

Dinah laughed. "Of course. Everything's ready." She wheeled over to the shiny cupboards and, flinging open the doors, revealed neat rows of shiny dishes against the painted interior. "Can you cook?" she demanded, and Lona laughed.

"I kept house for my father for years, she said, a sudden impulse to confide in this new found friend almost overcoming her.

"Would you—do you have to go for your clothes right away?" Dinah asked, then, her tinkly voice a little wistful. "Could you—stay for lunch with me? I was just ready to get it when you came. I hate eating alone!" The eyes clouded.

"Why, I'd love to!" Lona heard herself assenting, and knew that she meant it. She, too, had disliked to think of going back down town and eating alone. She wasn't to meet Jim until three o'clock, and there were almost three long hours before that.

She already felt at home in the roomy old-fashioned house as she followed the trundling wheel chair with its bright-haired occupant back across the hall into the sun-lit living room.

"We could have lunch together every day like this," Dinah said, later, as they dawdled over tall glasses of iced tea across the white-clothed lunch table. "That is, if your husband—will he be home at noon?"

Lona shook her head. "It's going to be nice, having a friend," she said shyly. "I—somehow I haven't had many girl friends. Not since I was a youngster back home."

"You'll have friends here," Dinah told her. "This is a friendly town. Some time soon I'll have a party and you can meet everybody." Her eyes glowed.

"You mean you'll introduce me to—your friends?" Lona knew suddenly how much she wanted to belong to people again, how much she missed being part of a circle.

"Of course." Dinah laughed her bright, merry laugh. "We know everybody, mother and I. And they'll all want to meet you."

"It won't make any difference that we're just—your renters? You've only known me an hour or so, you know."

Dinah laughed again. "I feel as if I'd known you always," she said. "Besides, I can judge people pretty well. Being always quiet the way I have to be, has made me sharp. I've nothing to do but study people. A shut-in gets to know expressions and what's in people's minds just by looking at them. We're sensitive, you know. Always afraid we're being a bother to someone, or making someone uncomfortable by our helplessness." She broke off with an expressive shrug of her straight shoulders and her bright face darkened a little.

"You don't seem like an invalid to me," Lona said. "Tell me about yourself. If you don't mind."

"It's infantile paralysis. I was all right until I was fifteen. Then it—got me. I've been in this chair four years now."

"And will you always—won't you ever—"

"Will I ever walk? The doctors say perhaps I will. Some time, they moving farther and farther into the future. Mother thinks they're right and that I am getting stronger, but sometimes I wake up at night and wonder." She sighed.

"I think you're wonderfully brave, Dinah."

Reaching over, Lona clasped the thin white hand across the table. She wanted to say more, but something in the girl's face stopped her. There was a moment of awkward silence. Then Dinah smiled again, a smile that was a little twisted.

"I'm not brave!" she burst out. "I'm afraid! Terribly afraid! And I'm mad—mad clear through. But I daren't show it. Mother's got enough on her mind already without me getting morbid. She thinks I don't care, that I'm contented. I can't let her down!" She shrugged, and Lona saw a hurt look in the back of the blue eyes as the girl turned and began stacking up the lunch dishes.

"You must let me wash them!" Lona exclaimed, glad to get back to something commonplace again. "It must be dreadfully hard for you to manage."

But Dinah shook a stubborn head. "I won't be babied," she said staunchly. "I can wash dishes as well as anybody, and it's my job. I wash them every day. See! If I turn my chair like this, I can reach the sink. . . . If you'll just hand me that dish mop—"

"You simply must let me dry them. I wouldn't feel right," Lona began, but Dinah waved her away with a shake of her golden head.

"It's my job!" she said!" almost fiercely. "I wash all the dishes for mother, dinner and all. It's about the only thing I CAN do, don't you see? I stack them her on the table all bright and clean—I can't reach the cupboard—and then I look at them standing there all shining and I feel better."

The blue eyes darkened for an instant, and met Lona's in a plea for understanding. "Silly of me, isn't it?" she brought out.

"Silly!" Lona felt suddenly humble. "I think it's beautiful, Dinah," she said, softly. "Beautiful!"

She and Jim would have their first dinner in Brighton in the new rooms, Lona planned that afternoon, as she waited for Jim on the busy little square. She had been shopping and her arms were ridiculously full of bundles. Steak, they were to have. And French fried potatoes, and a salad of ripe, red tomatoes—she had noticed how absurbly fond Jim was of tomatoes. Then there would be a deep apple pie chosen from the window of a fancy little bakery. A truly gala meal.

Her eyes were dancing and she was glowing with eagerness when she caught sight of Jim's long legs threading through the crowd toward her just as the quaint town clock on the church steeple boomed out a cheerful three.

"Whew, girl!" he exclaimed at sight of her. "You must have bought out the town. What's up?"

"I've found us a house, Jim." She was bubbling over. "The sweetest little apartment, with the nicest people. It's way out on Main street, and we're going out there for dinner. I've got the groceries—"

"And how!" He was taking the packages in his own big arms. They seemed mountainous now, and Lona laughed.

"I did sort of splurge, I guess," she confessed. "But it's our first meal in our own place. There were so many little things I had to get." She was shy, suddenly. "Did you—have any luck, Jim?"

"Luck?"

"About — getting work?" It seemed strange and a little bold to be so intimately concerned about his private affairs.

"I'm starting tomorrow morning. It'll be a three-months job, too. Right up until the ice comes. We're all set, girl. Hope you'll like this town. We're going to be here for a while."

"I love it already!" She was suddenly happy and carefree. The walk up Main street in the summer afternoon, the bundles in her arms smelling pleasantly of food, gave her a delicious feeling of going home—home with her man by her side!

(To Be Continued)

Ald. McCannan Is Retiring

Although a special meeting of the council may be called by Mayor Hamilton before the year ends, Alderman H. J. McCannan addressed a little valedictory to his associates last night at the conclusion of the regular meeting for December.

"I want ot convey to you my appreciation of the kindly and friendly manner in which each of you has treated me during the three years in council," the retiring chairman of the property committee said.

"I have learned much during my service with you, and will carry away a deeper appreciation of the important part municipal government plays in the lives of our people. I realize it is the simplest and finest form of democracy, and it is to defend such institutions of British democracy as this council that the Empire and the thoughtful people of the world are fighting today.

"I have enjoyed my years in the council and the opportunity it has afforded me to be of service to my city. I shall always remember with pleasure the business-like way in which the affairs of the city are conducted by the council. We have had differences of opinion, but there has been no ill-feeling.

"I hope that Mayor Hamilton will consent to continue as Mayor. His long experience in the council is a great asset, and he has proved a most capable Mayor. He is kindly, considerate and his judgment is sound. I sincerely hope that he will serve longer, and that the citizens will guarantee good administration by giving him an acclamation."

Mayor Hamilton briefly referred to Alderman McCannan's decision to retire from active municipal life. He had taken this step on the advice of his physician who had told him that he would have to give up the city's work and take things a little easier.

"I would suggest that he quit the property committee and take the legal," Alderman Gordon jokingly said.

Mayor Hamilton said he wished Alderman McCannan was remaining in the council. "He had been a great acquisition, and I know that he has given a great deal of time to this work because I have seen him around these buildings a great deal. And his work has always been prompt and efficient."

General Council Vote Light In 100 Centres

TORONTO, Dec. 3—(CP)—New civic boards are ready in nearly 100 Ontario municipalities to take office next January 1—in the majority of cases for two years—but there is little change of personnel in most councils. On the whole a light vote was recorded.

Voters yesterday recorded their approval of past performance in most towns, cities and smaller municipal units to return to office those who had served during the last year. In many cases the 1941 councils will be manned by persons who have spent years at the head of the various civic administrations.

In nearly half of the municipalities which voted yesterday, no ballot was taken on the question of a two-year term and the officials elected automatically will sit in office for two years under Provincial Government legislation passed at the last session. Where votes were taken opinion was divided roughly three-to-one against two-year terms. In at least 33 municipalities the elected officials will hold their positions for 1941 only.

Elections were not necessary in a number of municipalities where acclamations had filled all positions in the recent nominations.

Big Edge in London

One of the largest majorities accorded a candidate in yesterday's voting was given Mayor-elect W. J. Heaman of London, who scored a total of 8,029 over the 4,647 accumulated by his two opponents.

Another large majority was seen in Windsor, where Arthur J. Reaume, 34-year-old ex-mayor Sandwich, piled up a substantial 3,000 lead over the nearest of his six opponents.

In both Windsor and London the elections filled mayor chairs left vacant earlier this year by men who had gone into active service and who now are serving overseas. Mayor-elect Reaume succeeds David A. Croll and Mayor-elect Heaman will take the place of Lt. Allan Johnston, M.P. Mr. Heaman had been acting mayor since Lt. Johnston left.

Another acting mayor was elected —in Brantford where Mayor R. J. Waterous had resigned to become Director of Material Resources in the Department of National War Services. Alderman J. P. Ryan had been acting mayor and was elected to fill the position officially for the next year.

Sprague Falls to Make It

In Ottawa, where Mayor Stanley Lewis was given an acclamation, the electors returned the four 1940 members of the Board of Control. Dave Sprague, Ottawa Rough Rider football star, put up a great fight for a place on the board, but his 12,190 votes were not enough to lift him from fifth place. He was 226 votes behind J. A. Forward, who placed fourth.

Hamilton electors turned in a similar performance. Mayor William Morrison was elected by acclamation, four members of the board of control were re-elected and every alderman who sought re-election was returned with the exception of Ald. Harry Hunter.

In the northern cities of North Bay and Sudbury the eelctoral feeling was not so favorable to existing office-holders. Three-cornered battles were waged in each city and both mayors went down to defeat. W. S. Beaton, a former alderman, defeated Mayor W. J. LaForest in Sudbury with Ald. E. A. Whissell trailing third. Charles R. Morrison was elected mayor of North Bay with W BG. ullock, a former mayor second, and Mayor Arthur Beattie third.

Other chief magistrates elected in cities were: Belleville, Glencoe Thompson; Chatham, W. C. Hubbell; Galt, W. S. McKay; Kingston, H. A. Stewart; and Woodstock, Charles Hayball. Acclamations had been given the existing office-holders in Kitchener, Niagara Falls, Sarnia, St. Thomas and Welland.

BANK HEADS CONFIDENT OF VICTORY, SEE NEW PROBLEMS AND NEW OPPORTUNITIES FACING CANADIANS

Huntly R. Drummond, President, Commends Government Action on Rowell-Sirois Report — Holds Wheat Crop Is Asset of Great Potential Value — Deprecates Spending on Peace-Time Projects

G. W. Spinney, General Manager, says Bank Determined to Play Full Part in Achievement of Victory — Presents Financial Statement Reflecting Increasing Part Bank Taking in Financing War Projects — Loans Average $38,000,000 Higher— Profits Slightly Down

Culminating a comprehensive review of the Canadian business scene with an enjoinder to his countrymen to "do everything that in us lies to keep our house in order", Huntly R. Drummond, in his presidential address to Bank of Montreal shareholders at their annual meeting yesterday, declared: "When victory comes, enormous new tasks, new problems and, greatest of all, new opportunities will confront us."

The president said that while Canada was at present on the crest of a wave from a business viewpoint, with employment higher than in any previous period and industrial output on a swiftly rising scale, it must not be forgotten that there will be an aftermath. He declared, therefore, that "it behooves us all, while contributing to the utmost in the prosecution of the war, to keep in mind the adjustments which will later become necessary."

"Economy in private and public expenditure," he said, "should be practised to the utmost and projects not relating to the war effort should be postponed to a time when they will not interfere with that effort and when the employment they afford will be needed. We must not throw prudence to the winds, but must do everything that in us lies to keep our house in order. We need prudence in governmental expenditure, prudence in business administration and prudence in our individual committments."

Bank's Statement

Mr. Drummond, in his opening remarks, commented briefly on the bank's financial statement which was laid before shareholders. "It is with satisfaction," he said. "I report that, notwithstanding the unusual times through which we are passing, your bank continues in its customary strong position. Our total assets, while showing a decrease from last year, continue at a high figure. Full provision has been made for all losses and we are in a strong position, as always, to meet any contingency."

War Factor Dominates Business Indices

In reviewing the business situation, the president observed that, while a year ago business was just beginning to feel the impact of war conditions, today the usual economic indices no longer gave the true picture of the ebb and flow of business because of the over-riding influence of the mobilization and the progressive utilization of every asset the country possessed for the most intensive prosecution of the war.

Agriculturally, Canada had done well during 1940 which, the president said, had been a year of good crops. "Sales of livestock and dairy products," he observed, "have been satisfactory and the aggregate of revenue to the farmer will be large. What, in the final accounting, may prove, perhaps, the largest crop of wheat in the history of the Dominion has been safely garnered. It is one of the very best we have ever had in weight and quality. At the moment we are, perhaps, thinking too much of the embarrassment of handling it, but I should like to point out that our great store of wheat is wealth in its best and most tangible form and in present circumstances an asset the potential value of which cannot be estimated.

"Mr. Winston Churchill has said that one of the first tasks to which Great Britain will address itself, when victory is achieved, will be the feeding of Europe's millions — all now on short rations. This is a promise known to the peoples of Europe and its importance will be progressively realized by them. Back of that promise is the tremendous crop of wheat which Canada holds in store."

Exports Up 30%

In the matter of trade abroad, Mr. Drummond said that Canada's exports for the twelve months to September last totalled $1,150,000,000—30 per cent. more than in the previous year. Imports had risen in the same period 46 per cent. to $1,005,000,000. Canada's gold production, amounting to approximately $200,000,000 during the past twelve months, was not included in these figures and should be added to the favourable balance of trade.

Government Finances

In referring to the finances of the country, Mr. Drummond urged economy in all "peace-time expenditures" so that Canada's war tasks might be the better prosecuted and added: "I am glad to note that the Federal Government has called a Dominion-Provincial conference for the purpose of considering the adoption, without undue delay, of the main principles and recommendations made in the Rowell-Sirois Report."

The speaker referred in glowing terms to the "marvellous manner" in which the British people had adapted themselves to the conditions of war, and commented particularly on their ability to maintain exports at such a high figure. Apropos of this, he said: "I would like to add my voice to that of business leaders all over the Dominion in urging our people to give at this time preference to British goods in their purchases of imported products; for every dollar's worth so purchased helps Britain in her war effort and helps Canada, too, in the matter of exchange."

United States Co-operation

Hailing the mutual defence agreement with the United States as the most important event for Canada, outside the war, since Confederation, Mr. Drummond said its greatest repercussions would occur after the war when Canada, more than ever, would be a vital link in the relations between Great Britain and the United States.

General Managers' Address

Presenting a financial statement that reflected the increasingly important part which this institution is playing in the financing of Canada's war effort, G. W. Spinney, on behalf of himself and his fellow general manager, Jackson Dodds, O.B.E., declared that as the bank entered upon its 124th year of operation, "we are determined to play our full part in this national effort and we look forward with confidence to the achievement of victory, which is now the primary and all-important consideration."

The statement which Mr. Spinney presented showed great strength and liquidity. Assets amounted to $961,300,000, compared with $1,025,000,000 a year ago. "The decrease," he said, "is represented in the main by a reduction in our investment portfolio, as a result principally of redemptions at maturity of Dominion and Provincial Government securities." Quick assets totalled $663,200,000, or 75 per cent of all liabilities to the public.

Net profits of $3,436,000 were down by $27,000 when compared with the previous year. "This result," said the general manager, "is not unsatisfactory in view of the fact that taxes paid to the Dominion and Provincial Governments during the year were $729,000 higher at $1,298,000, accounted for principally by the higher rate of Dominion taxation. The increased revenue to offset these additional charges and other heavier operating costs was obtained chiefly from commercial loans, which for the year averaged about 22 per cent higher."

Commercial Loans Average $38,000,000 Higher

Investments at $462,000,000 showed a reduction of $55,000,000, while loans and discounts in Canada increased during the year $16,200,000 to $217,600,000. Commenting on the increase in loans, Mr. Spinney said, "This increase as at October 31st does not properly indicate the maintained improvement in this department. During the past twelve months the monthly average of our commercial loans has been $38,000,000 higher than in the corresponding period of the previous financial year. This expansion in our loaning figures comes chiefly under the headings of loans to manufacturers, reflecting the higher levels of business activity, and agricultural loans arising out of the large carryover of wheat."

Industrial Production Higher Than Ever

Observing that business conditions were, of course, dominated by the demand for war supplies, the general manager remarked that the volume of industrial production in Canada was already higher than ever before and that activity was widely spread throughout the country.

"The output of supplies," he said, "is due to expand much further and it is clear that we are rapidly approaching a position in which by contrast with the past ten years, our principal problem will be the adequacy of the means of production."

In the matter of loans to business, Mr. Spinney said: "The rise of industrial activity has stimulated new demands for credit which we have welcomed. In this case also, however, the war requires that a special consideration should be observed. While we are always prepared to finance sound transactions, and additionally at the present time to accommodate special needs arising from the war, the financing of abnormal inventories carried for purely speculative purposes in the expectation of rising prices would be equally against the interests of the banks, their customers and the public generally."

TRAINING CAMP ENTERS TEAM IN TRENT VALLEY HOCKEY LEAGUE

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The suggestion that Canadian football authorities should deal with the question of speeding up the playoffs so that championships would not have to be decided under such conditions as prevailed Saturday has been made by a Peterborough fan who is an old player himself. "They should either do away with the league playoffs or else start their schedules several weeks earlier," remarked this enthusiast yesterday, adding that if the weather was too hot in the day time at the beginning of the season the senior football clubs should consider the possibility of playing at nights under floodlights. There is much truth in his contention. It is ridiculous to have the Canadian championship decided under the conditions encountered in Toronto on Saturday or as likely to be met in Ottawa this week-end.

* * * * * *

There is little possibility, of course, of the Big Four and the O.R.F.U. scrapping the group playoff system which looms large as a gate receipt proposition. But certainly something could be done about starting schedules earlier. And the local fan who suggests that night football toward the end of August may solve the problem has come to bat with a proposal that is entirely feasible and that might be worked into something worthwhile. Such vast strides have been made in lighting playing fields that it would be possible to play football under the lights under ideal conditions. If night football were introduced as a means of speeding up the schedules it would be possible to start a month earlier than usual and thus ensure the finals being played in decent weather. The end of November offers too great a gamble in that regard.

Al Marshal, Canadian 200-yard breast stroke swimming champion is training hard, under the coaching of Gord Minty, for the big test he meets Saturday night in Hamilton when he will endeavor to add the Ontario championship to the Quebec and Dominion titles he already holds. The Peterborough swimmer is in fine shape, except for the arm he injured in a football game and he hopes to be able to overcome that handicap Saturday night. Al came within two seconds of his own record in the meet here Saturday night and by next Saturday he expects to be travelling as fast as when he grabbed the Canadian title. He will have some stiff opposition in the British Empire pool at Hamilton especially from Ted St. Aubin the Hamilton swimmer. St. Aubin defeated Al in the semi-finals at Montreal but Marshall came back in the final to win a decisive victory. Now the Hamilton breast-stroke artist is out for revenge.

Hockey Coming Into Its Own

With the arrival of cold weather hockey here is beginning to display a certain liveliness. Tonight there will be an important meeting of the executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club at the Chamber of Commerce at 8 o'clock and every member of the executive is expected to be on hand and the players are invited to sit in. The main object of the gathering will be to consider the groups that have been drawn up, decide what the Peterborough teams want in the way of a schedule and then appoint delegates to go to the schedule meetings and endeavor to wangle what is decided upon as the Petes' wishes in the matter. That is not an easy task, although it always helps to have something definite to fight for at these group meetings. Incidentally the announcement of a five-club Senior B group seems to have tickled executive, players and fans. The setup is regarded as a lot better than any one had anticipated.

Peterborough will see some new teams in action here this winter as a result of the announcement [illegible] the army training camp at Exhibition Park that it is p[illegible] to enter a military hockey team in the Trent Valley League [illegible]s season. There are a number of hockey players on the camp staff, enough it is said to enable a good team to be iced. In addition any hockey players among the trainees in camp will be eligible to perform for the military team. The present lot will complete their training just before Christmas and none of them will be available but there will be another quota in camp after the New Year and with any luck, enough hockey players should blow in to supply useful reinforcements for the army team. In any event a team in the Trent Valley League will provide a lot of entertainment for members of the training staff and should help to build up the esprit-de-corps of the camp.

From over the border comes the information that some one has invented an automatic umpire for calling balls and strikes in baseball, a machine which indicates by means of electric rays whether or not the pitcher has fired over the plate. We have an idea that no one will welcome an attempt to introduce a robot umpire. In the first place such a gadget would rob both batter and pitcher of a useful alibi. The hitter could not very well growl about the umps being blind when he goes down on strikes nor could the twirler use the same argument when he gets behind the batter. As for the fans one of their pet privileges would be taken away if they had no plate umpire to put on the pan and roast a deep brown. That is one of the features of baseball for a lot of folk and they are not likely to accept any mechanical substitute for the flesh and blood target they have been in the habit of ganning for all these years.

A word is due from Coach Tracey Shaw of the Oshawa G-Men as to what he is feeding those birds on just now to cause them to take off like a Spitfire. In recent games the former Brantford lad, Ebby Edmison, who went on a wild scoring spree was given credit for most of Oshawa's string of victories but the clever little centre ice player was out of action last night because of an infected heel. That did not prevent his teammates from going out and walloping the league-leading Hamilton team 5 to 2. It was the first defeat in nine starts for the losers and the Oshawa victory was a clean-cut affair, the G-Men taking an early lead and holding it without any difficulty. First thing they know those pesky Motorists will be up at the top of the heap. They don't seem to know when to stop.

Looks like Toronto fight fans and many from outside of Toronto were poorly rewarded for braving weather and traffic conditions last night to see the Lou Salica-Small Montana bantamweight championship bout. Champion Salica shot a vicious right into the side of the challenger within the first ten seconds and the fight was virtually over then, although Montana was bounced off the canvas four times in the first round, four more in the second and had been down twice in the third when the fiasco was stopped and Salica given a technical knockout. The story of the fight seems to indicate that Montana was suffering from a side injury before he went in there and that the champ simply levelled away at the weak spot. No wonder he said afterward "This is no racket for a gentleman."

Mountain Climbing Skiers Get 1,500-Foot Lift at Bethany

HEAVY WEEK-END SNOW SENDS ULTRA MODERN SKI TOW INTO ACTION

There's no work and plenty of fun for skiers who trek to the high hills at the Bethany trails of the Peterborough Ski Club this winter. Heavy snow has sent the ultra-modern ski tow into action. It stretches approximately 1,500 feet and gives the winter sports enthusiasts a ride uphill at 10 miles an hour as shown (CENTRE). The club's trim log chalet can be seen in the picture. A fair skier finds the downhill run is liable to end abruptly (LEFT). And the chalet is also a grandstand as shown (RIGHT), where even the troops in training watch the main downhill run. A big rush of visitors from Toronto is expected next week-end when the roads may be clear and a ski train may run from the city.

Complete Line Of Sports Being Planned

Sports will apparently occupy a prominent place in the activities at the Exhibition Camp, according to information obtained from Major H. M. Jones, adjutant.

Work of building an outdoor skating rink is under way near the drill hall at the east end of the camp, and the rink will have a board wall 3½ feet high surrounding it. The county grader was used to level the ground, and it is expected the rink will be in use before the week is out.

On Friday last a deputation from the Camp attended the re-organization meeting of the Trent Valley Hockey League at Campbellford and entered a team from the camp in the league. The team will be made up from members of th permanent staff and any trainee who is fast nough to catch a place. In this way it is expected the team may be kept intact all through the winter.

In the Salvation Army hut there is ample facilities for quiet pastimes —checkers, ping-pong, chess, darts, card games, etc.

A badminton and squash court is being set up in one of the huts and this will be available to the trainees also.

Seek Boxing Talent.

Officers are making a canvass of the camp to determine what boxing talent is available, and it is expected by Friday night that a well-balanced boxing program can be arranged. There are two boxers in camp now who rate well above the average. One is Farthing, a member of the provost staff, and the other chap is named Beckett, and is reported to have boxed professional at one time.

On Wednesday evening, three trainees, two of them wrestlers and the other a referee, will stage a wrestling burlesque after the style of the professional grunt and groaners. This act has been arranged by Norm Burrage who in civilian life is maanger of the Hume Arena at Belleville.

Sprague In Hospital

Ottawa, Dec. 3 (CP)

DAVE SPRAGUE, who scored Ottawa Rough Riders' lone touchdown Saturday when Riders defeated Balmy Beach 8-2 in the first game of the Eastern Canada football championship series, was in hospital today with an infected left leg.

Sprague suffered the injury last October 19 in a game with Toronto Argonauts. Club physicians said they hoped Sprague would be in shape to play next Saturday against Balmy Beach in the second and last game of the series.

Bowling News

Big singles were on tap when the C.G.E., Westclox, and De Laval men bowled at Duffus' last night. Ken Gibson, J. Wade and C. Milheron featuring the C.G.E. roll with 343, 341 and 322 games while K. New Electric Eye To Decide For Ball Umps

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP) — It was bound to come, folks, and there could be only one source—the sputtering little idea-factory who gave us the pneumatic home plate duster and the Jack-in-the-box microphone to pipe player-umpire arguments to the fans.

This time it's the automatic umpire which Ray Dumont, kingpin of the United States semi-pro Baseball Congress, is going to introduce at the tournament finals at Wichita, Kas., next August.

It's a "magic eye" affair which, although not doing away with the umpire entirely, will make his work so much easier that the job will lose much of its hazard.

"The idea is this," Dumont explains. "An electric ray, the exact width of the plate, will make its appearance at the side of the batter. If the ray is not broken by the pitch, it means the ball did not go over the plate or touch any corner. All the umpire has to say is 'Ball.'

"If the ball goes over the plate, or any corner, the ray will be broken and a signal on the scoreboard will tell the fans and the umpire that the ball was a strike.

Cuts Work in Half

"All that the umpire will have to do is to judge the height of the pitch. We could get a device to judge that also, regulating the rays in comparison with the height of the batter. We don't wan't to do that, though, as we still want the umpires. Who would the fans take it out on, and what alibis would a team have, if there were no ball-and-strike umpires?"

The idea is intriguing, and with photo-finishes in horse racing, and football, to take the guess out of the games, there probably is no reason why baseball shouldn't do something to eliminate the element of human error.

However, it may take a lot of spice out of the game, and probably will eliminate the necessity for the sprouting mike, except for routine announcements, as the players can't talk back to a light beam.

Afternoon Games

Detroit, Dec. 3 (AP).

DETROIT Red Wings, currently in second place in the National Hockey League, will play the first afternoon game in the club's history against Montreal Canadiens here on Sunday, Dec. 15, Manager Jack Adams announced today.

Adams said he had obtained permission from League President Frank Calder to stage the game at 4 p.m. E.D.T., rather than at the usual time of 9:30 p.m., so that fans outside the Detroit area can attend

If the contest draws well, other afternoon games will be arranged, Adams said.

SMALL MONTANA HITS THE CANVAS TEN TIMES IN THREE ROUNDS

Salica's Tattoo On Montana's Ribs, Wins In 3

TORONTO, Dec. 3 — (CP). — Somebody told Hymie Caplin that Small Montana had something the matter with his ribs, and that is largely the story of Lou Salica's successful world bantamweight title defence here last night.

Because Caplin, Salica's manager, told his fighter to go out and hammer away at Montana's body. The first punch Salica landed on Montana's ribs made the former flyweight world champion flinch. The second one knocked him down and he went down nine more times before the bout was stopped after 90 seconds in the third round.

It was a murderous sight, to watch Salica ropping Montana systematically in the ribs, knocking him down every time he landed a solid punch. One in the second round Salica abandoned his body attack, and then for the only time in the fight Montana looked like the powerful little piece of fighting machinery that dominated the flyweight division a few years ago.

But then Salica went back to his hammering body attack, and the end was inevitable.

Montana acted all through the fight as if his ribs were bothering him. Salica confirmed this. "I tried to be fair, but supposin' it was me had bad ribs," he said. "I wouldn't get much sympathy. Hymie (Caplin) told me to bust him in the ribs right off. I did. It worked so good I kept at it. This is not a racket for a gentleman."

College Games Drawing More

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 — (AP). — With increases in the Mid-West, East and Far-West more than offsetting losses in other sections of the United States, college football attendance for 1940 rose 2¼ per cent. over last year.

An Associated Press survey today of 64 representative colleges showed a total attendance of 7,597,342 for 330 games this year. In 1939, 69 schools, playing 317 games, reported an attendance of 7,414,966. The game average, however, this year was slightly under 1939; the figures being 23,391 for 1939 and 22,788 for 1940.

Pirates Obtain 2nd Baseman Stuart Martin

ATLANTA, Dec. 3.—(AP). — The Pittsburg Pirates began strengthening their club to-day by purchasing Second Baseman Stuart Martin from the St. Louis Cardials in a deal which gave the National League a jump on the American League in winter transactions.

Manager Frankie Frisch indicated a move to make his Pirates pennant contenders next season by labeling the 27-year-old Martin as one of the nation's best utility players and adding:

"You can't win a pennant without a good utility man."

Martin, who beat Frisch out of the latter's infield job with the Cards, joined the former "Fordham flash" again in a straight cash deal. The price was not announced Martin performed under Frisch three years before Frankie left St. Louis as manager after the 1938 campaign.

Dutton's Amerks Out To Trim Bruins At Home

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (CP)—That old warrior, Mervyn (Red) Dutton, would be pleased immensely if his New York Americans, walloped soundly the other night by Boston Bruins rebounded from the Defeat to trounce the Bruins tonight in their National Hockey League clash at Boston.

In his hockey-playing days Dutton wouldn't have let a little thing like the 10-3 defeat the Bruins pinned on the Americans bother him for long. It would have only made him fight harder the next time out, for Dutton had, and still has, quite a reputation as a man who just wouldn't quit.

That's why he would undoubtedly like to see his charges trim the Bruins in their own lair. Such a feat, admittedly difficult as the Bruins are apparently rolling now after a slow start, would lift Americans from sixth place into a fourth-place tie with their opponents. It would mean leaping over the idle New York Rangers, and that's something else that would bring joy to the Dutton heart.

The Boston-Americans game is the only one scheduled for tonight, while on Thursday the Rangers take on the Canadiens at Montreal and Detroit Red Wings invade Chicago for a game with the Black Hawks.

The Sports Round-Up

By EDDIE BRIETZ, AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 3—(AP).—La Marble, the tennis queen, has just finished eight weeks of football prognosticating with an average of 80 per cent.—a mark most of the newspaper experts would be delighted to sport....Latest product of the Rumor Foundry—That the Reds are after Eddie Miller of the Bees—can be nailed right on the head.

Mr. Russell Hansen of Tucson, Ariz., rises to remark that at least two of the Bowl football teams — Fordham and Nebraska—are "bowled over teams"...We merely pass it along.

The Colonels down in Kentucky say there's nothing but Whirlaway in next year's Derby, but the Chicago money will be riding on Our Boots.

Today's Guest Star:

Jimmy Wood, Brooklyn Eagle: "This Louis-Burman business at least has some merit...Burman is tough and game...He's not a great heavyweight, but he won't faint on the stool before the opening round."

Ban On This:

You guys who think Boston Bees are a bargain basement proposition have plenty more thinks coming... President Charles Adams has put $635,000 in the property and it isn't likely he'll sacrifice for any 300 Grand—not with chattels like Eddie Miller, Carvell Rowell, Chet Ross, et al, on the roster.

Next year's National League baseball opener in Cincinnati already is a sell-out.

Godoy Defeats Tony Musto; Packs For Home

CLEVELAND, Dec. 3 (AP)—Arturo Godoy, satisfied he has staked a claim for a third match with champion Joe Louis, packed his bags today and announced he was sailing Friday for South America—and would return only if Louis agreed to meet him again.

Godoy's manager, Al Weill, said he believed the Chilean's convincing 10-round decision over rugged Tony Musto of Chicago last night placed him in line for another title shot. Godoy battered and pounded Musto and floored him twice in the fifth round—once for no count and again for a count of three.

Godoy said his immediate reason for going to his home in Iquique, Chile, was the serious illness of his mother.

Musto, weighing 190 pounds, was hanging on for the final three rounds, but managed to weather a flurry of Godoy punches. Arturo weighed 200.

Firpo Training New Pampas Kid

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 2—(CP)—Luis Angel Firpo, who once fought a two round "lightning war" with Jack Dempsey, has started life anew here as the mentor of a new pretender from the Argentine to the heavyweight crown of boxing.

The entry is Abel Cestax, 21 years old, 232 pounds. Firpo says Cestax is nimble despite his closely-packed bulk. Cestax merely standing by as Firpo talks, gives an impression of tremendous brute force.

Firpo, himself had the crown almost in his grasp 17 years ago in New York when he knocked Dempsey into a tailspin. The stunned champion landed outside the ring.

Jack came back, however, and ended the tempestuous battle with a knockout in the second round.

Firpo was then billed as the "Wild Bull of the Pampas." It is hard to imagine this in the shy presence of Firpo today. He has a paunch, a double chin and a dim look in his eye.

But the old 1923 spirit is present when he speaks of his "find," a giant farm-boy from the fringe of La Pampa Territory, southwest of Buenos Aires.

"His punch," said Firpo, "is 80 per cent. more powerful than mine at my best. He is built like Dempsey, only with more muscle and with a longer reach. And he has a chin so small for a big man that you cannot hit it."

Reminiscing with friendly regret of the late "Tex" Rickard, the old "Wild Bull" says:

"I remember he used to say, 'If I find a man with the build of Dempsey, your punch and a small chin, I'll have an unbeatable champion.' I wish he could have seen this boy."

Some Pin Tips From Varipapa

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (CP)—No two bowling alleys are alike and bowlers should study them in order to obtain maximum results, writes Andy Variopapa, well known authority on alley bowling.

In rolling on a strange alley the bowler should send the first ball from the exact spot or strip that he has been accustomed to. Then he should watch the ball until it hits the pins.

If the ball goes too much to the left, he should change the angle on the next throw, moving to the left. If the Ball does not come up to the No. 1-3 pocket, he should move over to the right to increase the angle.

Here are a few "don'ts" Andy hands out for bowlers:

Don't use too much speed.

Don't grip the ball too tightly.

Don't throw away a spare because you thought you were entitled to a strike.

Don't get discouraged; you can learn.

Don't deliver the ball with the right foot in front.

Don't start your delivery with a jump; walk fast, three, four or five steps.

U.S. Recruits

Ottawa, Dec. 2.

SEVEN per cent of the students in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan are United States' citizens, it was learned authoritatively last night. No figures for total United States enlistments are available.

In addition to the students who will graduate as pilots, observers and air gunners, many Americans have enlisted as mechanics. These are not included in the 7 per cent. For some time the air force refused to accept United States recruits who had no previous air training. This rule has now been relaxed and an increasing number of United States youths are joining the service.

Officials have declined to give the total number of experienced American pilots who have joined up as instructors, or for other service duties.

Oshawa Wallops Hamilton 5-2; Falls Lose 8-5

TORONTO, Dec. 3 — (CP). — Hamilton's entry in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" group is smarting today under the sting of its first defeat in the current season. The defeat was administered by Oshawa G-Men, the close second in league standing, and it was a real one of 5-2 proportions.

The Hamilton team met its first reverse last night at Oshawa. At St. Catharines the St. Catharines Saints came through with a six-goal spurt in the final period of a game with Niagara Falls to win 8-5 and rise to a third-place tie with Toronto Marlboros in the standing.

The Oshawa boys took an early lead when Ritchie netted a goal soon after the game opened and from there on Hamilton didn't seem to have a chance. The score was 2-1 at the end of the first, 4-1 at the end of the second, and each tallied one in the third. Ritchie, Carr-Harris, Thompson, Reid and Cooper accounted for the winning points. Lamoureux and Fritz did the scoring for Hamilton.

An excited crowd of home-towners saw St. Catharines come from behind a 4-2 second period score to collect their victory spoils with a withering closing surge.

Captain Red Reynolds put on a fine display of leadership and accounted for two of the winning goals. Hastie and Backor accounted for two more each for St. Catharines, while the others were tossed in by R. Heximer and Mundrick.

Scorers for Niagara Falls were: Stuart (two), McQuade, McPhail and O. Heximer.

Institute Brings Christmas Cheer Presents

HAVELOCK, Dec. 3—(ENS)—The Women's Institute held their December meeting in the council chamber on Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with President Mrs. Clare Price in the chair.

A letter from Miss Leatherdale, member of the Federated Women's Institute, asked a donation to Red Cross fund to be used toward furnishing a ward in a Canadian hospital in England A donation of $5 will be sent. Bill of $12, delegates' expenses to convention in Toronto and $8.83, librarian salary, were ordered to be paid.

Mrs. H. Horde was appointed on the relief committee to take the place of Mrs. John Armstrong, who will be away for six months. The relief committee, Mrs. McMullen and Mrs. Horde assisted by the president, Mrs. Price and Miss Wright, will meet at the latter's home to pack the Christmas cheer boxes. Mrs. Jones as librarian with Mrs. Anderson as assistant, were re-appointed for another year. Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Chiles will audit the librarian's books.

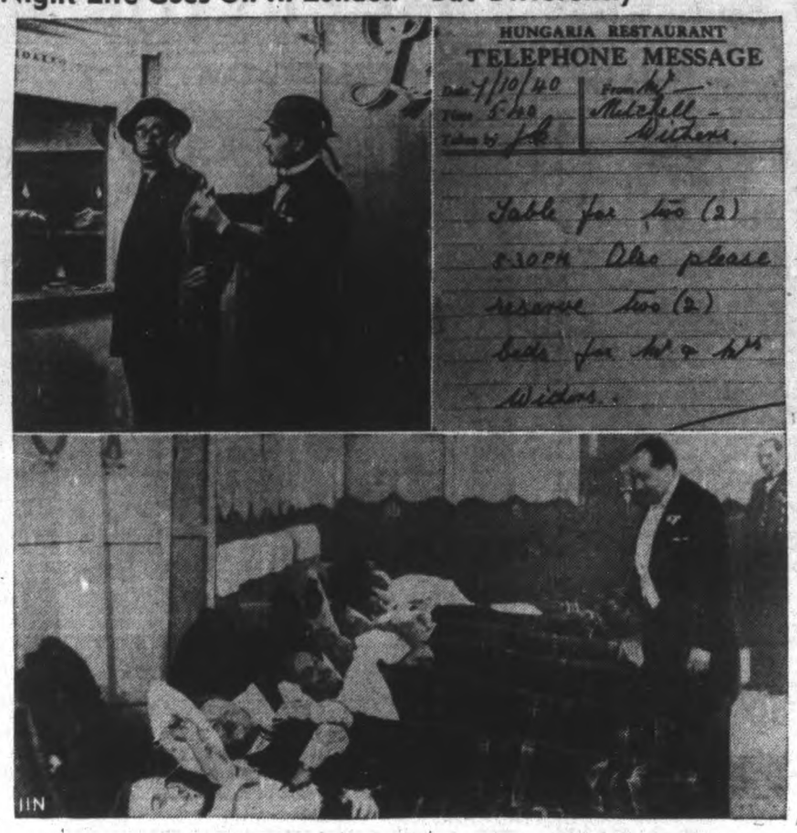
The junior institute has disbanded and have handed over to the senior branch $6.91, a balance left over from last year's work. This was gratefully acknowledged, and an invitation was extended to all junior members to join with the senior members for the remainder of the Institute year. Some $6.70 was handed over to the treasurer, receipts from summary day in Havelock.

Mrs. Jones, librarian, announced that 29 new books had been added to the library. Donation of $5 was voted for Christmas cheer boxes. Program convener for this meeting was Miss E. Wright. Mrs. McLauchlin as guest speaker gave a mesage on "Christmas," giving a short history on Christmas and what it means. Miss Madge Curtis then gave a demonstration, "Wrapping of Chritmas Gifts."

Mrs. Woodbeck, delegate to the convention held in Toronto in November, gave a very splendid report, of her three days spent there, attending all meetings. Mrs. Robert McCutcheon was the pianist for the program. There were 21 members in attendance and five visitors, and as the roll was called each member responded by placing a gift for a boy or girl; or jars of jam, etc., under a very pretty lighted Christmas tree, these gifts will be put in the Christmas cheer boxes sent out by the Institute each year.

The meeting closed with the national Anthem, after which refreshments were served, and a social half-hour spent. Lunch convener was Mrs. Arthur McMullen.

Night Life Goes On In London—But Differently



Night life in London these days goes on despite incessant aerial bombing by the Nazis. Of course, there are some new angles to it. For example, all wear tin derbies and generally the customer won't check it. Then, it is customary for patrons to reserve a bed in the bomb-proof basement, which is protected against all but direct hits. Basements are stocked with provisions, fitted with gas and water-proof doors. Waiters, who also sleep on the premises, are trained in fire fighting.

old university buildings.

The ministries of air and home security announced a number of fires had been started in Bristol by the Nazi bombers.

Some persons were killed and wounded, but the number of casualties was not believed large, a communique said.

Other Scattered Blows

Bombs also were dropped at scattered points in East Anglia, South Wales and elsewhere. Damage and casualties in these raids were slight, however.

In one southwest town, a children's hospital was damaged by fire and high explosive bombs, but none of the patients were injured. A second southwest town was bombed for the seventh consecutive night, but heavy anti-aircraft fire drove off the attackers. Night raiders also were reported over Liverpool.

After giving London a wide berth throughout the night, the Germans returned to the attack on the capital by daylight today. Streets were crowded with office-bound workers when air raid sirens suddenly sounded just before 8:30 a.m. (3:30 a.m. EDT), and the alert barely had died away when a squadron of Nazi planes dived out of the morning mist. First reports said nine bombs were dropped, causing slight damage and no casualties.

Non-Essential

continuous pressure of wartime import demands and immediate steps had to be taken now to curtail the use of hard currency exchange in the purchase of non-essential imports. At the same time, he emphasized that the steps being taken were only for the duration of the war.

Since drastic restrictions were required, tariffs were inappropiate and quotas involved too great administrative machinery, he said, so prohibition had been decided on.

These were:

Prepared cereal foods; florist stock and cut flowers; processed and canned fruits and vegetables (but not currants, raisins, dates, apricots, nor grapefruit juice); preserved fish; certain classes of fiction magazines and comics; consumers paper items; perfumes, etc.; china and glass; silverware; electrical household appliances, stoves, etc.; bathroom fittings; automobiles; sporting goods and fishing tackle; cameras; musical instruments; luggage; all finished clothing or wearing apparel; silk fabrics; ornaments; jewellery and precious stones; toys and dolls; and various miscellaneous articles.

Five Major Groups

Another list of commodities from non-sterling countries would be permitted entry into Canada under licence "temporarily but on a decreased scale." This list comprised five major groups: unmanufactured tobocco; automobiles and motor vehicles other than passenger automobiles; hardwoods and veneers and plywood; raw silk and partially manufactured natural silk; and all petroleum products.

The minister explained that these commodities would be admitted for a time in the hope that Canadian industry would adapt itself to the use of other materials involving less drain on foreign exchange.

It was hoped, for instance, that more domestic tobacco would be in use in Canadian tobacco products; that the furniture industry would use domestic woods in place of imported hardwoods; that gasoline imports could be eliminated by the refining of all Canadian-consumed gasoline in Canada; that the silk industry could swing over from natural silk to artificial fibre.

In not including American fresh fruits and vegetables in the prohibited list, Mr. Ilsley explained, the government was moved by two major considerations—the importance in the national diet of having cheap, abundant supplies of fresh vegetables and, secondly, the possibility of creating difficulties in the marketing of Canadian farm produce in the United States by restricting agricultural imports from that country.

Boom All Around

Admission to Canada of more British goods would not only enable Britain to buy essential war supplies here but would also free Canadian labor and machines for war work and make additional supplies available to Canadian consumers, the minister continued as he announced amendments to the tariff on British goods. Because British producers' costs were greatly increased by war, he felt Canadian producers could stand this competition. Most Canadian industries affected were enjoying a "very greatly increased demand" on account of the war anyway.

He proposed to remove the duty entirely from British cotton items, all artificial silk items, bituminous coal; jam and marmalade; furniture; gloves and mitts; and some miscellaneous items. Duties would be reduced at the same times on pharmaceutical preparations, soap, earthenware, table cultery, bicycles, electric motors, rugs, oilcloth, linoleum.

Where imports were restricted, it was not desirable that domestic production of mechanical types of consumers' goods should be expanded to meet the demand created by that restriction, he said further, nor that price and profits should be increased by simply restricting their production. The skilled labor and much of the materials used in such goods would be needed for war industries.

Accordingly, the government proposed new or increased excise taxes on such goods but these taxes were not heavy enough to curtail production beyond the degree made necessary by the labor and material requirements of the munitions and supply department.

The Excise Tax of the first $700 of the price of passenger automobiles would be increased from 10 to 20 per cent, with the rates on the value above $700 remaining as imposed last June. The 10 per cent rate on cameras, phonographs, radios and radio tubes would be increased to 25 per cent on the manufacturers' price. A 25 per cent Excise Tax would also be imposed on electric and gas stoves, refrigerators, water heaters, light fixtures, slot and vending machines, washing machines, vacuum cleaners, toasters, electric grills, irons, curlers, electric razors.

The Government would seek power to suspend the import restrictions wherever a domestic manufacturer was found to be exploiting the situation by charging unjustifiably enhanced prices.

The Finance Minister said every effort would be put forward on the positive side to increase Canada's supply of foreign exchange by boosting gold production to the limit, expanding the tourist industry by every possible means and continuing to seek new export markets. To facilitate exports where they might not otherwise take place, the government would assist exporters in special cases by special tax allowances for depreciation or depletion of capital assets, or by tax credits where the first two were impossible.

Juliana Staying

London, Dec. 3 (CP Cable)

AN authoritative Netherlands source said today there is no likelihood of Princess Juliana and her daughters coming to Britain for Christmas on a visit to Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Bernhard.

He said there has been no confirmation of a report published in the London Star that the trio might leave Canada to rejoin the remainder of the Royal family.

A gossip column in the Star said "There is a likelihood that Juliana and her daughters may be in England by Christmas, if only on a visit." He recalled that Juliana was married Jan. 7, 1937, and that elder daughter was born January 31, 1938.

In South Sea Tragedy

Death by starvation ended the adventurous South Seas cruise of this Oakland, Calif., couple, Mr. and Mrs. Delton Condley. Their bodies were found in wreckage of the 28-foot yacht Wing On on a Fiji Island reef. Also aboard was Fern Thompson, of San Pedro, Calif., too weak from malnutrition to be questioned. Her husband is believed to have been buried at sea. The Wing On left San Francisco last August. The Condleys left their then seven-months-old baby, Patsy, INSET, in San Francisco with Condley's sister.

Millbrook Fire Quickly Doused

MILLBROOK, Dec. 3— (ENS).—The local Fire Brigade responded promptly to an alarm rung in about five o'clock on Sunday afternoon, and with the chemical appliance put out a bad chimney fire at the United Church parsonage.

The family indoors were unaware of the blaze, until a neighbor telephoned to say flames were coming out of the east chimney, and sparks being liberally scattered over the roof. However, the efforts of the firemen soon extinguished the blaze, and practically no damage was done.

Cuts Leg in Fall.

Mrs. A. Stewart Hall met with an unfortunate accident at her own home, Bank Street, on Saturday morning, when she fell on an icy step outside the house, cutting a nasty gash in her leg, which necessitated removal to Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, for examination and treatment.

Afternoon Tea.

A pleasant event of Saturday afternoon was the tea held at the parsonage, for which Mrs. A. L Sisco and her daughters, Misses Barbara of Peterborough and Dorothy, were hostesses, the event being under the auspices of the Golden Links Mission Circle.

The president of the Circle, Mrs E. J. Powell, assisted with the general details of the occasion, and Mary Dawson acted as cashier. The hostess table was laid in the library, centred with bronze and gold 'mums on the lace cloth, white candles in silver holders, and with service entirely of silver. Mrs. J. McKnight, honorary president of the Mission Circle, and Mrs. W. Edmund Ball poured tea, the assistants being Misses Mary Burnham, Betty Lunn and Barbara Sisco.

In spite of the very stormy weather, many came in for a hot cup of tea and the enjoyment of the social hour, between nine and ten dollars being realized from the undertaking.

Silk Stockings Day Wanes Fast

OTTAWA, Dec. 3 (CP) — Silk stockings will be one of the sacrifices Canadian women will make to the national war effort before long, Finance Minister Ilsley indicated yesterday. Artificial silks of various sorts will take the place of the genuine article.

Imports of natural silk are to be cut down as rapidly as Canadian factories can change over to the use of artificial fibre under the schedule of tax changes Mr. Ilsley announced in the Commons. Natural silk will continue to be admitted only temporarily, and in decreasing amounts, from non-sterling countries. This will hit Japan particularly.

At the same time the tariff on British artificial silks, ranging from 5 to 25 per cent, was removed. The British artificial silk industry at present is endeavoring to capture world artificial silk markets held by Italy before Britain began her blockade of the Continent.

Canada already has a substantial artificial silk industry and almost unlimited supply of the essential raw materials, pulp and power. In addition, a plant is being erected at Kingston, Ont., for manufacture of nylon which can be used as a substitute for silk in making parachutes, in addition to being used in women's lingerie and stockings.

In commenting on this phase of the tax changes, Major Douglas Hallam, secretary of the Primary Textile Institute and secretary of various associations dealing with wool, cotton, silk and rayon, said:

"In this war it is fortunate that Canada has an efficient textile industry in a position to do a very fine job for the three services and the country.

"While it is too early to foresee the effects of this budget, the textile industry will willingly make any necessary sacrifices to hasten the successful conclusion of the war."

HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Gus Gunsolus, husky Peterborough youth who is now a trainee at Exhibition Camp, narrowly escaped serious injury earlier this month. He tried to yank the bayonet off his rifle and it slipped up inflicting a small cut on his face near the eye. Today there is no trace of the cut. This was before the men had been given instructions in the knack of removing the bayonets.

WATCH THE SIGNS

Lt. Col. E. O. Keeler, M.C., officer commanding the Exhibition Grounds camp has requested the Department of Highways to place signs on No. 7 highway at both ends of Exhibition Park indicating the proximity of the military camp. Motorists must slow down in this area on Lansdowne street, because of the added danger of accidents from military trucks entering and leaving the grounds.

HOME-LIKE FLAVOR

Painters are busy this week decorating the interior of the officer's mess at Exhibition Camp. The walls are being painted, floors refinished and drapes are being placed on the windows. The officers having been using the mess since the camp opened and the interior had a rather rough appearance. The change will make it into a comfortable homey place.

No. 4, Peterborough, and Mr. Edward Prete, Peterborough. Both of these guessed 1100 beans.

All of the 178 officers and men on the permanent staff at the Exhibition Grounds will receive four inoculations and one vaccination. They have received three inoculations for typhoid and the other is an anti-tetanus injection. All have been vaccinated. This does not apply to the trainees.

NAMING AVENUES

Camp roads at C.M.T.C. No. 32, Exhibition Grounds are so smooth camp officers feel they should be given names. Now the men have named the streets running east and west First, Second, Third and Fourth Avenues, and in a jocular vein, they tacked the name "Needle Boulevard" on the avenue where the hospital is located.

BAD ROADS

Major Wallbridge, second-in-command at the Exhibition Camp who spent several months in England with the Hastings Prince Edward unit, C.A.S.F. was scheduled to give a talk at Madoc over the week-end. Road conditions prevented him keeping the appointment. His subject was protection against gas attacks.

JAILED FOR BEGGING

Charles Rutherford, old and ill, who had just been released from jail appeared in police court this morning and pleaded guilty to a charge of begging. Magistrate Langley sentenced him to ten days' imprisonment. "I will speak to the doctor about your case," he promised. Rutherford who originally came to Canada many years ago as a Barnardo Home boy worked as a farm laborer in this district for a long period and is now homeless.

THREE DRUNK CHARGES

Three men charged with being drunk pleaded guilty to the charge in police court this morning and were fined $10 and $3 costs. One of them, a transient from Nova Scotia, had no money and took ten days in jail. Two other men charged with causing a disturbance in North Monaghan escaped with a fine of $5 and costs.

RETURN TO ONTARIO

Three members of the 3rd Field Park Company, R.C.E. have returned to Ontario from Debert, N.S., for a course of instruction at Kingston. The three men are Pte. Doug. Mowry, Cpl. Jack O'Rourke, and Cpl. Art Hunter. All is well in Debert, the men report, and camp life is progressing according to schedule. The weather, thought at times quite cold, is not by any means unbearable.

FOR WAR VICTIMS.

Three contributions by the city council last night were destined for the local fund in aid of British War Victims, through the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Peterborough War Service Council. One was a cheque for $11.35 from Hydraulic Metals Limited, Toronto, for tin cans they had collected at the incinerator; another was the $80 from the deal Alderman McCannan made with T. Hughes for the old dustless sweeper. The third amount was the balance of the aldermanic fund in which the members pooled their salaries, which was transferred from the Toronto Telegram to the local fund for the assistance of British War Victims. These cheques were made payable to Miss Mabel Patterson of the I.O.D.E.

Budget Is Likely To Stimulate Present Buying

Merchants agreed that the budget brought down Monday by the Minister of Finance, the Hon. T. L. Ilsley would stimulate business during the month of December, rather than curtail it, because existing retail stocks would in their opinion not be affected.

That means that although there is a 25 per cent increase on all electrical appliances, cameras, etc., it is a manufacturer's tax and becomes effective locally only on replacement of existing stock. For instance if a dealer can sell an electric stove from stock in his store it goes at the current price, but if he is so unlucky as to have to order it for the customer, then the extra 25 per cent must be paid.

Many housewives in the city disagree with the government on what constitutes an essential. They contend that an electric iron and an electric toaster are as much an essential today as a stove, but the government has listed electrical appliances more or less in the luxury class and slapped a 25 per cent tax on these articles.

It so happens that most of the local stores have a fairly large stock at the present time because of the Christmas season and therefore considerable extra buying should result as people will try to get the articles affected at the existing price.

Denis Fitzgerald, manager of Zellers was asked if he could offer any comments on the affect of the budget on the silk stocking trade. He said it would take some time before store managers receive data from their head offices or from government sources outlining in clear detail the actual effects of the new taxes.

Like all other merchants he explained that existing stocks would take care of the December buying. Since the war began the bulk of the toys came from the United States but now importation of toys is banned. This while it sounds ominous coming at Christmas time actually will work no hardship on Canadian children because stores have had their Christmas stock for some time. Next year however it will be another story.

In brief as far as stockings and toys are concerned the buying public need not start worrying until existing stocks have been exhausted.

Toasters, irons, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, gas stoves, electric stoves and a host of other electric appliances are all subject to a 25 per cent excise tax, which in the language of the man on the street means an increase in price of 25 per cent. Electrical stores sell a tremendous amount of these articles at Christmas time, and will probably sell even more this month. This morning it could not be determined whether flashlights would be affected. Radios and radio tubes have the 25 per cent tax.

Don Loucks, of the electrical firm of Grant and Loucks said they had received no official notice of any price changes and know only what they had seen in the newspapers. "I cannot see how it will affect existing stocks, except to stimulate sales, but I believe all new stock will have the tax added on," he remarked.

Fred L. Roy said the bulk of the cheaper cameras are made in Canada, and all the expensive cameras including movie cameras are imported. "I don't think the tax will affect sales in the lower price bracket to any extent, but movie cameras and press cameras will certainly show a substantial increase in price when existing stocks run out." No mention is made of films.

At the Ontario Liquor Control Board store it was learned that Canada imports all of her more expensive whiskies from Great Britain, and the price is not affected. A new tax on imported wines is negligible as far as local consumption is concerned. The store has received no notification of any price changes, and from a careful perusal of the news from Ottawa it would appear that prices will remain the same.

Not To Be Candidate

Alderman Herbert J. McCannan, one of the most popular and hard-working members of the Peterborough city council who has announced that he will not seek re-election on his doctor's advice. Ald. McCannan for three years has been chairman of the property committee and with his business connections in this city he has been a most capable and energetic alderman.

Survey Reveals Majority Supporting Idea

A survey conducted quietly during the past month in the city among all classes of people indicates conclusively that the vast majority of local citizens favor a community chest system of collecting for war services and community charitable purposes.

This survey was made by a number of interested citizens who were convinced of the merit of such a plan. They found that all heads of local industries endorsed a plan whereby there would be one general appeal to meet the financial demands of all organizations for war purposes and the usual community needs which still exist in war-time, sometimes to a greater extent than in peace time.

One Annual Drive.

This would mean in brief that instead of the Red Cross, the Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., the K. of C., Salvation Army and the many others, including the Institute for the Blind, making their own individual appeals during 1941 there would be just one campaign. Each man or woman in the city would advise his or her employer to deduct a certain amount from the pay envelope every week for the entire year. The sum need not be high, but it should embrace everyone. Then there would be no further demands, and those not in industry could pledge whatever they could afford or donate it in a lump sum and that would clean them up for the year.

The great advantages of the plan are fairly obvious. It means peace of mind to everyone, as once underway the person can forget about it. There will not be somebody around every month wanting two dollars or ten dollars for their own particular organization.

In industry in particular the plan should work to advantage. Employees won't lost time canvassing their departments for funds or trying to put the bee on some fellow who is known to be parsimonious. By contributing to the community chest the person can thus give money to the worthwhile causes and advise any independent canvasser to take up his problem with the Community Chest Committee.

Oshawa adopted the plan last year and their experience was most satisfying. D. G. H. Melton, manager of the Bonner-Worth plant has the community chest plan working in the plant, and the employees not only contributed more it were eager to co-operate in a plan that saved them embarrassment and time.

The paramount feature of the survey was that many people deplored the fact that in the past there had been a duplication of effort with high costs mounting, a waste of materials, and especially the needless extravagances of valuable time by key men in industry and in business during the individual appeals. The brunt of the work always fell on the same people, too.

Thoughtful citizens, according to the survey do not want a repetition of this waste, particularly at a time when the country is at war, and every effort should be aimed at winning the war as efficiently and speedily as possible.

As a result of the opinions gathered it is considered that immediate action should be taken to launch the campaign for a community chest, particularly in view of the fact that individual organizations have intimated they are planning to launch individual campaigns soon.

Likely Name Committee.

Mayor Hamilton is convinced that Peterborough is ripe for a Community Chest, and it is probable he will appoint a steering committee for this purpose, composed of W. A. Richardson, R. L. Dobbin, Robert Abbott, Gordon S. Matthews, Fred Overend, W.C. Hughes, D. G. H. Melton, James Dutton, Jack Sullivan, C. A. Salmonsen, and Martin Roche.

In this group of men every organization in Peterborough which previously has made individual campaigns is represented and their experience and business ability will ensure the proper leadership and management to this most important social work.

This committee could take steps to organize for greater productive results for the city's contribution in helping win the war.

City Clerk E. A. Outram advised the Examiner of the results of the survey to-day, and said the heads of industries showed great enthusiasm for the suggested plan.

New Governor Of Manitoba Replies To City

The city council last night received a letter from the Hon. R. F. McWilliams, Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, a former mayor and barrister of Peterborough, a letter expressing his appreciation of the council's congratulations upon his appointment to the high office in the midwestern province.

"I little thought when I left Peterborough that I should ever have the honor of representing His Majesty the King in my adopted province," Hon. Mr. McWilliams wrote.

"The news of the death of my old friend, S. R. Armstrong, has just reached me. I learned to know him and to esteem him highly during my years in the city council, and I shall be much obliged if you will convey my sympathy to any of the members of his family who are still in Peterborough."

Minister's Reply

To the council's appeal for the early construction of the Apsley-Paudash Lake section of No. 28 highway to Bancroft, Hon. T. B. McQuesten replied that he regretted "our failure to undertake and finish this small link. I realize its importance, but there are many other jobs, and it is impossible to recommend one without also considering other work. The whole of it would cost more than we are at present able to undertake.

As you know, capital expenditure can only be made with the consent of the Dominion Government. I am not complaining of this, but I wish you to realize the impossibility as things are at present of undertaking it.

It may be as time goes on we can obtain approval for a small program as we all recognize the importance of the tourist traffic."

Freight Hurls Truck 50 Feet

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 3 (ENS)—A through freight won a race with a delivery truck this morning at the Balaclava street crossing and the truck took a terrific pounding while the two men in the vehicle miraculously escaped being killed.

The truck owned by J. H. McArthur, local butcher and driven by his son Bill McArthur with Sidney Buckles, another employee as a passenger, had almost crossed the tracks when the fast travelling locomotive struck it. The impact sent the vehicle hurtling fifty yards with the rear end completely demolished. The two men seated in front were bruised but otherwise uninjured. Peter Monaghan, a section man was busy cleaning snow from the tracks near the crossing and he narrowly escaped being struck by the truck after the train had hit it. The truck missed him by inches.

It is believed that the driver of the truck failed to see the train approaching or else was unable to stop because of the snow on the road surface.

MOST CONSIDERATE.

Considerate motorists, realizing that investigating traffic mishaps in sub-zero weather is a cold job, have started bringing their accidents right to the police station. This morning a tow truck owned by Miller and Dossett was towing a frozen-up car owned by Earl Fowler south on Water Street. As the intersection of Simcoe Street was reached, the bumper of the car to which the tow chain was snubbed was ripped off and the towed car was whiplashed against a Hydro pole at the City Hall corner, with considerable damage to headlight and fenders.—C.

North Monaghan Ratepayers Elect Officers

H. B. Rye was named president of the North Monaghan Ratepayers' Association for the fourth consecutive term last night at Confederation School when last year's slate of officers was returned. Herbert Bourne is vice-president and Mrs. Ernest Ainslie is secretary-treasurer.

The meeting was called for two purposes, to elect officers and to hear J. Mulholland of the Ontario Hydro, Toronto, discuss township electric rates. More than fifty of the ratepayers turned out and it was a splendid meeting in every way, with all the members showing a keen interest in the proceedings.

City Does Not Set Rates.

Mr. Mulholland explained the plan under which the urban and rural electric systems work and satisfied the members that the City of Peterborough had nothing to do with setting the rates, but merely acts as the Hydro's agent reading the meters and collecting the money.

He expressed every sympathy for the ratepayers of North Monaghan and explained that the rural section was reaching a position where they might get some further consideration because of the general increase in electric consumption throughout the area. This area comprises North Monaghan, with part of Smith, Douro and Otonabee.

Because of the war with the big demands being made for power by industry, he felt there was little chance for reduction in the rates, but he said in normal times the question might well be laid before the Hydro again.

When Hydro in the rural areas was first started the service charge was around three dollars a month. The Government asked for a reduction and when they were advised by the Hydro that the rate could not be reduced and still show a profit, the Government ordered the rate reduced and provided a subsidy to take care of any losses. This was a factor in keeping the general rate down, otherwise the rates in the general rural area would be higher.

The ratepayers will forward a resolution to the council asking that the question of rates be laid before the Ontario Hydro for further consideration.

Hospital Bylaw Is Given Third Reading

Final approval of a bylaw authorizing the borrowing of $10,000 by selling debentures for an addition to Nicholls Hospital was given in its third reading at the meeting of the city council last night.

The former bylaw licensing pin games was rescinded by a substitute bylaw which leaves the supervision of any of these supervising games to the police department.

Still another bylaw fixed the tax rate for the collection of garbage next year at 7/10 of a mill, the same rate as last year. This is the only part of the 1941 tax levy that can be determined by the present council.

Another reminder of the approaching end of municipal year was sounded in a customary bylaw appointing the polling places, deputy returning officers and poll clerks for the elections on New Year's Day. The entire list of seventy-eight names of electoral officers was read by City Clerk Outram, who reported that only a few changes were required.

The council's special grant of $750 to the Board of Health for expenses involved in the establishment of a local chapter of the Victorian Order of Nurses was sanctioned by another bylaw.

Caretaker Appointed

The relief office at the corner of Simcoe and Queen streets was included in the designation of municipal buildings of which John Londerville was appointed caretaker at a salary of $1,250. This amendment to the bylaw which names Mr. Londerville as successor to the late George Grange was moved by Alderman Gordon, and seconded by Alderman Wilson.

This bylaw affirms that Mr. Londerville shall have charge of all janitor services of the municipal buildings. It was said that Relief Officer Metheral looked after the caretaking of his office, but Alderman Wilson said Mr. Londerville would have time to take over that additional duty by reason of the saving of time and labor resulting from the purchase of an automatic stoker for the city hall building.

Six Federal Members Give Dinner To Officers Of Highlanders

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—(Special to The Examiner)—Kilts flaring, officers of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders marched into the House of Commons one evening last week. They were dining with six members of parliament who represent the districts from which the unit was mobilized for active service.

It was an historic occasion in the life of the regiment, and that of the House of Commons too. For probably never before in the House had the officers of an active service unit met in full force to dine with their representatives at parliament.

It was a high tribute that the six members paid to the Glengarrians this week, a tribute to an active service force that already has won for itself signal honors. The six members were G. K. Fraser of Peterborough, A. C. Casselman, member for Dundas and chief Conservative whip; George T. Fulford of Brockville, representing the riding of Leeds and Grenville; Lionel Chevrier of Stormont riding; Dr. Will MacDiarmid of Glengarry riding; and Hon. Angus MacDonald of Kingston, Minister of National Defence for Naval Affairs. Hon. Mr. MacDonald was called away at the last minute to attend an urgent meeting.

Successful Dinner

At the request of the hosts, Lt.-Col. R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, M.C., officer commanding the Glengarrians, acted as chairman over the highly successful dinner, held in the Members' Reading Room, overlooking the main entrance to the House. Through the dinner the sound of pipes came from adjoining halls, and at its conclusion two Highland pipers, Pipe Major Lawrence McGillivray and Sergeant Neil Campbell strode into the room to pipe the regiment's marching song, "Bonnie Dundee," around the table in old traditional fashion.

In dining the officers of the regiment, the six members were paying tribute to the entire regiment, the hosts declared in the course of short speeches that followed the dinner. It was impossible, they pointed out, to entertain the entire regiment, but their tribute went to one and all.

Glengarrians are being entertained in royal fashion in Ottawa. Scarcely an evening passes but some individual or organization entertains a large section of the regiment. One evening this week, for example, 200 men were invited to attend one of the city's largest theatres, guests of the management. On the same evening more than a hundred others were invited to a diner party at one of the churches. Thursday evening a large number attended another dinner party and dance at another church. This, in addition to the splendid entertainment offered in the camp itself, has resulted in a most contented regiment.

Cyclist Suffers Fractured Leg

Riding his bicycle east on Lansdowne Street shortly before 7 o'clock this morning, on his way to work at the Brinton Carpet factory, John Smith, 50, of Ford Avenue, North Monaghan, sustained a fracture of the left leg near the ankle when his wheel was struck by an automobile.

The car was driven by Howard Anderson, R.R. 5, Peterborough, who was proceeding to work at the C.G.E. plant. Anderson was also driving east and told police that there was no light on the bicycle and that he did not see the rider until it was too late to avoid hitting him, although he swerved in an effort to miss the wheel.

The accident happened a short distance west of the Ovaltine plant.

Mounties Seize Sniper's Rifle

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 3 (ENS)—An incident out of the ordinary took place in this quiet Trent town this morning when two Royal Canadian Mounted Police accompanied by Chief Constable George Hardie, seized a rifle from a local merchant.

The rifle is a .303 sniper's Lee-Enfield and it is owned by Arthur Beardmore, jeweller and veteran of World War 1. Beardmore had registered the rifle during registration period at the local police station, and had no knowledge that anything was amiss until the police arrived. He says he obtained the rifle from a man in Belleville in 1915. Beardmore was seriously wounded while fighting in the last war. No charge has been laid by the police.

"I am asking that this case should be tried as an indictable offence," said Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., when a charge of dangerous driving against Fred Gall, Keene, was read in police court this morning.

Gall who was defended by T. J. Carley, K.C., was remanded until December 10 as the crown was not ready to proceed this morning. The accused did not plead or elect in the meantime.

City Urges Free Transportation For C.A.S.F. At Christmas

Free transportation for members of the Canadian Active Service Force to their homes for the Yuletide was urged in a resolution by Aldermen Dutton and Roy at Monday night's council meeting.

It embodied a declaration of protest against the recent announcement of the Minister of Transport that men of the C.A.S.F. would not be carried free on railway trips home and back to their units during periods of leave.

"We urge prompt reconsideration of this matter in order at least that members of the C.A.S.F. will be granted free transportation at Christmas and New Year's to visit their families."

Alderman Gordon remarked that it had never been done before. Alderman Dutton told of his own experiences in giving rides to young soldiers who were waiting on the roadside. One of them was an airman going from Windsor to Montreal.

Alderman Gordon said that airmen were getting $2,400 a year, and Alderman Dutton's reply was that he did not care whether they were getting $24,000, "they should not be there depending on motorists to give them a lift This man told me that if he was late getting back the whole unit would be penalized.

"He was pulling your leg," Alderman Gordon said.

The resolution is to be sent to the Prime Minister, the Minister of Transport, and Gordon K. Fraser, M.P.

"THE CURTAIN RISES" TO BE PRESENTED HERE

B. M. Kaye's Inimitable Comedy, in COLLEGIATE, DECEMBER 9TH

THE NURSES' ALUMNAE OF THE NICHOLLS HOSPITAL will hold a "THEATRE NIGHT" in the Collegiate Auditorium, December 9th, when they will present the Mayfair Players in B. M. Kaye's famous Comedy, "THE CURTAIN RISES." A rare evening's entertainment is anticipated, rare because professional performances of this calibre are very scarce. Comedy plays are the vogue theatrically this season, and many critics and reviewers are most enthusiastic in their praise of the performances of this most interesting comedy as presented by the Mayfair Players.

The Nurses' Alumnae of the Nicholls Hospital are well known in Peterborough, and their appeal for "Free Nursing" Funds through the medium of a "Theatre Night" should meet with a ready response.

IN MEMORIAM

KROGH.—In loving memory of my dear husband, Lief E. Krogh, who passed away December 3, 1935.

God knew that he was suffering,
That the hills were hard to climb,
So He closed his weary eyelids
And whispered, "Peace be thine."
Away in the beautiful hills of God,
By the valley of rest so fair,
Some time, some day, we know not when,
We will meet our loved one there.

McCULLOCH.—In loving memory of mother, Mrs. Hugh McCulloch, who passed away five years ago today, December 3, 1935.

As I gaze on your picture that hangs on the wall,
Your smiles and your welcome I often recall;
I miss you and mourn you in silence unseen,
And dwell on the memories of days that have been.
Dear is the grave where mother is laid,
Sweet is the memory that never will fade;
Flowers may wither, leaves fade and die,
If some do forget you, never will I.

Shorthand an Advantage for Any Office Worker

Teach Yourself at Home

"What a lot is expected of office workers these days," the business girl is likely to say.

Yes, for modern business you are supposed to be well-trained—to know shorthand, other skills.

But shorthand, the skill you are asked about most frequently, is one you can learn at home in your spare time. And in these days when you may be asked to play many roles in an office, shorthand is an advantage no matter what your specialty.

The Pitman shorthand system isn't difficult. Those mysterious "squiggles" are symbols for different sounds in the language. On hearing a word you just put down a symbol for each sound in it.

Though there are thousands of words, or combinations of sounds, the sounds themselves are few. Learn a number each day, practise taking dictation from a friend, and you'll progress rapidly.

You have speed aids, too, to help you make good when your chance comes. For such a commonly used phrase as "as much as", you write an abbreviated symbol, a short stroke with a loop at each end.

Learn the Pitman system from our 32-page booklet. Explains symbols in easy, step-by-step lessons. Has abbreviated symbols, exercises to help you acquire office speed, efficiency, and gives an excellent grounding for a business college course.

Send 15 in coins or stamps for your copy of SELF-INSTRUCTION IN SHORTHAND to Peterborough Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

CONSIDER THE POSITION

WHENEVER you contemplate a business double of the opponents' contract, it is well always to consider what use he can make of the information you thus convey to him about your cards. Every day we see otherwise able performers toss away points by disregard of this common sense rule. Not that the extra points from a doubled contract are so important. Of far more moment is the fact that the double enables the declarer to read your holding and play you for certain missing cards, thus enabling him to make a contract which you could have beaten by merely remaining silent.

Even before he saw the dummy, South had his mind made up to play East for every missing card of importance. After West led the heart Q and the dummy went down, he also decided to count on East for four trumps headed by the J. That meant the end of any chance East might have had of beating the contract. Without his double, South might have played for a division of the trumps.

South won the opening trick with the heart A in dummy, finessed the diamond Q, took in the A, then led the diamond 4, ruffed by the spade 5 and overruffed by the 8. East made South trump the heart K, then the diamond 5 was ruffed by the spade K. The spade 10 was finessed, and the trump A and Q settled East's holding. The diamond 9 was now set up as a good trick, and three high clubs completed the job.

As it turned out, East's heedless double cost his side plenty of points.

If South bids his diamonds first on this deal and then bids his spades twice, which suit should North prefer, and why?

Launch Destroyer

SYDNEY, Dec. 3—(AP).—Lady Gowrie, wife of the Governor General, today launched the H.M.A.S. Arunta, 1,870-ton tribal destroyer, first of its kind to be built in Australia and the largest naval vessel launched here since the seaplane carrier Albatros in 1928.

Two more tribal destroyers will be built, all armed with eight 4.7-inch guns, eight smaller guns and four 21-inch torpedo tubes. The ships will cost £1,000,000 ($3,550,000) each. The Arunta is named after an Australian aboriginal tribe noted for its virility, courage and intelligence.

Wales is advising its householders to lay in supplies of coal.

Galway Assault Costs $27.05; In Lindsay Court

LINDSAY, Dec. 3 — (ENS). — At Monday's session of the Police Court R. Packard, 116, of Stanhope Township, appeared before Magistrate Gee on a criminal negligence charge laid by Provincial Constable McPherson of Minden. The accused was remanded until December 12, bail being fixed at $1,000. This case arose out of the shooting fatality in Stanhope Township on November 13, when Packard, while out deer hunting, fatally wounded Alfred Wiggins in mistake for a deer.

Albert Wright, of Galway Township, charged Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Suddaby, of Burnt River, with assault, the alleged offence taking place on November 23. The complainant, it appears, entered the Suddaby store on the above date and returned some article which he claimed was not satisfactory. An argument followed between Mrs. Suddaby and the complainant. Mr. Suddaby resented certain remarks made to his wife by complainant, and struck him twice. The charge against Mrs. Suddaby was dismissed by Magistrate Gee, but Mr. Suddaby was given suspended sentence on payment of court costs, which amounted to $27.05.

Victoria Snowbound.

Lindsay and district was completely snowbound following Saturday night's storm. While the main highways were open to traffic on Monday, the side roads around Victoria County are filled. In Northern Victoria motoring on the main roads to the county boundary is fair, but beyond that the roads are well nigh impassable. In Lindsay on Monday morning the Council placed over 26 men with a similar number of trucks at work in the business section cleaning the streets of snow.

Two traffic accidents occurred in this district during the week-end, and the unfavorable weather conditions were responsible for both of them. On Saturday night on Highway No. 46, east of Coboconk, a car driven by Roy Marshall of Dunsford was badly damaged. Marshall, blinded by the storm, crashed into the blade of the Highways Department snow plough when he was trying to avoid the machine. The left side of the Marshall car was completely smashed. On Sunday evening a car driven by Harold Russell of Coboconk, while going north over the first bridge in the village, crashed into the rear end of a car owned by Lloyd Fountain of the same village. The car was parked at the time, but Russell did not see it owing to the fog. His car was damaged to the extent of $100.00.

Rev. R. W. Paton Dies Suddenly

CORNWALL, Dec. 3.—Taken suddenly ill just after commencing his morning address in Knox United Church here Sunday, Rev. R. W. Paton, M.A., B.D., Th.D., died about an hour later, failing to respond to treatment given by Dr. H. J. Mack and Dr. A. L. Crewson.

The congregation was dismissed and the evening's service cancelled. Dr. Paton's death was attributed to a sudden heart attack.

Dr. Paton was born near Flesherton, forty-seven years ago, a son of William Paton. He graduated from Emmanuel College, University of Toronto in 1928. Before coming here in August last, he filled pastorates at Arden, Roseneath, Bethany, and Sydenham, coming here in an exchange of pastors, with Rev. Dr. James Faulds. He preached his first sermon here Aug. 4.

He leaves his wife, the former Miss Edna Beer, of Bethany, a graduate of Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, and a son, Allan Muir Paton, born in Kingston, May 18 last. He also leaves a sister, Miss Mary Paton, Toronto.

Alberta Youth Oats King Of Continent

EDMONTON, Dec. 3—(CP)—Paul Francis Pawlowski of Vilna, Alta., who was crowned Oats King at the Chicago hay and grain show Sunday, is still in his 'teens and one of a family of seven children whose mother is dead.

The family, which lives four miles northeast of Vilna, has no telephone but a call to the town doctor brought the information from his wife, Mrs. W. W. Eadie, that Paul Francis is a member of a "very enterprising, new Canadian family."

The doctor's telephone was the only one in the small Alberta town, 100 miles northeast of Edmonton, which could be called from Edmonton on Sunday night. Small rural exchanges are open only for a short time on Sundays.

Mrs. Eadie said Paul Francis is 16 or 17 years old. She said members of the family are outstanding at agricultural work and both Paul Francis and his sister won the grand aggregate for boys and girls at the junior district agricultural fair this fall.

Mrs. Pawlowski died some time ago and the children are living on the farm with their father. The oldest girl, Barbara, about 20 years of age, looks after the family.

Mrs. Eadie said it was "wonderful" that Paul Francis won the oats crown, and added she would make arrangements to let the family know about the victory.

It was the third consecutive year an Alberta youth had won the oats crown. Bill Skladan of Andrew, Alta., who captured the championship last year, is 22 years old. W. Justyn Rigby, the 1938 winner from Wembley in the Peace River area, also is about 22 years old.

Justyn's brother, Francis Lloyd Rigby, now 21 years old, took the world wheat crown at Chicago last year and in 1938.

Pawlowski is the fifth consecutive Canadian to win the International's oats crown. Preceding him were Skladan last year; W. Justyn Rigby, Wembley, Alta., with Victory variety in 1938; Alex. M. Stewart, Ailsa Craig, Ont., Alaska variety in 1937; and the famous Herman Trelle, also of Wembley, with the Victory variety in 1936.

Trelle also made the Reward variety of wheat famous, and although not exhibiting this year, was the International's only five-time wheat king.

Other Dominion grain winners included:

White corn, region 2—William R. Beattie, Staples, Ont., first.

Flint corn—Harry A. Dawson, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., third.

Soy beans, regions 1 and 2, yellow or greenish yellow—G. Gordon Finlay, Northwood, Ont., second, and Albert Wollwood, Merlin, Ont., third.

Early oats, region 1—A. E. Gilbert, Paris, Ont., second.

Junior corn, region 1—Alex. Trahan, Chatham, Ont., third.

Red clover—H. K. Nesbitt, Britannia Bay, Ont., first, and John Hass, Renfrew, Ont., second.

Timothy—MacMillan Brothers of Dalkeith, Ont., third.

White bent corn, region 1—Alva Weaver, Turnerville, Ont., first; James M. Smith, Merlin, Ont., second; R. C. Henry, Turnerville, Ont., third.

Autopsy On Mummy

New York, Dec. 3 (CP)

AN AUTOPSY on a man almost 4,000 years old has been completed.

He was Wah, an Egyptian nobleman of the 11th dynasty who was wrapped up in 2010 B.C.

The autopsy, performed by Dr. Harry L. Shapiro, associate curator of anthropology of the American Museum of Natural History, disclosed Wah was five feet two inches tall and about 30 years old when he died.

"The brain, heart, stomach and other organs were intact, indicating that greater pains and more time was taken in preparing mummies in the days of Wah than in later times," said Dr. Shapiro.

Wah's only compensation for being disturbed was a new outfit. They took away his cloth wrap-around and gave him a new cellophane jacket.

Obituary

GEORGE THOMPSON.

EAST EMILY, Dec. 3.—(ENS).—The death occurred on Sunday evening, Nov. 24, of Mr. George Thompson, at his home on the Third Line of Emily township in his 79th year.

He was born in Gwillinbury and moved to Newmarket when a young man and was married to Miss Elizabeth Ough, who predeceased him 16 years ago.

He was a machinist and a carpenter and built some 12 houses in Newmarket. In 1916 he purchased a farm on the shore of Lake Couchiching and there was the founder of Floral Park, where he built 90 cottages. In recent years he had a number of his ideas patented in the United States and Canada on improvements on threshing machines. For the past eight years he had lived on the Third Line. He was a true Christian and in religion was formerly Methodist and later United church member.

He leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing wife, who was Letitia McMillen, and four sons and three daugthers, Fred of Newmarket, Lorne of Toronto, Clarence of Kitchener and Garnet of Cobourg; Mrs. E. Lawrence of Weston, Mrs. J. N. Wright of Detroit and Mrs. E. Mustard of Dundas; also three sisters and one brother, Mrs. Faux of Alberta, Mrs. Moore of Toronto and Mrs. Little of Mt. Albert, and Frank of Mt. Albert.

The funeral was held on Wednesday from the home of his son Frank in Newmarket. There was a very large funeral and the floral tributes were many and beautiful, showing the high esteem in which he had been held by his many friends. Rev. Mr. Johnson and Rev. Mr. Patterson of Omemee, conducted the service. Interment was made in Newmarket cemetery.

The bearers were old acquaintances, George Thompson, William Rutledge, Alex Rutledge, William Maines, Charles McCauley and Elmer Henry.

'Witness' Given 2 Months, Jail

MILLBROOK, Dec. 3—(ENS). — Daniel Brown, of Cobden, Ontario, arrested at Millbrook two weeks ago by Constable E. C. Richards, was fined $20.00, and costs, or two months in gaol, when he pleaded guilty under the Defence of Canada Regulations, to being a member of the Jehovah's Witness' sect, at his trial before Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell at Cobourg on Thursday He took the two months.

Cobden had been twice remanded in custody before his final hearing this week, his arrest having followed complaints of citizens here, and after Constable Richards had discovered him secreting literature inside his windbreaker when approached by the officer. A search of his car revealed other pamphlets, hidden under the rug, and also mimeographed sheets, books, and a number of Judge Rutherford records. At the time of his arrest, Brown had avowed he did not know where the literature came from, and declared it had been left in his car.

A witness, Mrs. John Guthrie of Millbrook, afflicted with blindness, testified, after identifying the prisoner by his voice, that he had called at her home bringing some records which she had played over once on the phonograph; they proved to be Rutherford recordings Mrs. Guthrie also identified a Braille system book 'Creation" left at her home some time ago by a woman.

A sharp rebuke by the Magistrate followed the contention advanced by W. Morelle, of Toronto, not a lawyer, but engaged to defend Jehovah's Witnesses, that the group is a religious one, and not a political organization, therefore not to be classed as such.

Magistrate Campbell picked up a leaflet entitled "Neutrality," and declared it had nothing religious in its contents, since "a Scripture quotation here and there which has no bearing on what it contains, does not bring it into that category. I do not understand how a young fellow like this, apparently intelligent, has got himself mixed up with things like this. In my opinion he should have his head read."

The Magistrate also scored Brown for claiming to be a Christian, and yet denying to Constable Richards with deliberate falsehood, that he had any of the literature in question with him. "You lied. How do you reconcile your claim to be a Christian with this action?" To which the prisoner replied that he was not on oath at the time, and did not consider it wrong to tell something untrue if no one was going to be injured thereby. Which led the Magistrate to comment with marked disfavor on anyone having such a viewpoint, and yet advancing a claim to Christian character.

Rescue Nearing Crippled Spanish Craft

(By the Canadian Press.)

Rescue neared a Spanish freighter in trouble off Nova Scotia today while varying endings were written to the stories of other ships caught in an Atlantic storm last week.

A Canadian salvage tug was due to make contact during the day with the 5,239-ton Motomar, which sent out a call for help yesterday from a point 400 miles south of an east coast Canadian port. Her engines were disabled, but she was not reported in immediate danger.

The tug was at sea on another mission when the appeal came, and she turned to the rescue of the Spaniard. It was not known where the Motomar would be towed.

Somewhere in the same general vicinity the Greek freighter Eugena Cambanis was belived afloat after having been disabled in last week's storm and abandoned by her crew. All the crew were taken aboard the British freighter Urla Nov. 29 after boiler failure had left the ship at the mercy of the sea. Their destination was not disclosed.

Another ship — the Canadian freighter Lisieux—had been battered ito a sinking condition and abandoned by most of her crew of 29. Ten men—four of them Canadians —had been left aboard the foundering vessel when one of the lifeboats was swept away.

Under tow to an east coast port to-day was a Norwegian freighter, picked up by a Canadian tug yesterday, six days after she had reported her propeller and rudder out of commission. Though she lacked means of control and propulsion, she rode through the storm safely and without damage, according to wireless messages reaching shore.

Sky Scanners Of The Desert

These soldiers of an Indian division serving with the British command in the Middle East brush up on their anti-aircraft training at a base depot in the western desert. They answered Britain's call for aid from her subjects in the far-flung corners of the earth although India herself is trying to obtain independence from Britain. These sturdy desert warriors undoubtedly have played a important role in stalling the Italian drive into Egypt.

DESCRIBES GREAT BENEFITS FROM USING SYNTONA TONIC

Was Full of Aches and Pains After Continued Suffering With Stomach Gas and Acidity; Cramps, Nausea, Dizzy Spells and Headaches. Nerves Were Bad and Sleep Broken.

MRS. JEAN BUCHANAN.

When the stomach is out of order and food fails to digest, but ferments, causing bloat, heartburn, and cramps; when the back and joints ache and the kidneys do not function properly; when the bowels are constipated and you have headaches, dizzy spells and tired feelings, take a treatment of Syntona and you, too, may find your suffering can be ended without the aid of harsh drugs or depressors. Here, for example, is the experience of Mrs. Jean Buchanan, Wright' Bldg., Wellington Street, London, according to her recent report:

"For years I suffered with acid indigestion, nausea, cramps and constipation. I was subject to spells of dizziness and sick headaches. Then I began to have pains in my arms and a dull ache across my back. At night, I would lie awake by the hour and then in the mornings I felt nervous and worn out. I had used so many medicines without any real benefits that I had become totally discouraged and I thought nothing would help me any more.

"But I kept reading in the paper about how Syntona was helping so many people, and I knew some of these people, so I finally decided to take a full treatment of Syntona myself. Well, that was just a few weeks ago, and to-day, I feel so different that I think everybody should know about this medicine. I eat and sleep well now. My nerves are relaxed and my food seems to digest well. I am free of headaches and dizzy spells and I get relief from those pains in my back and arms. It is just great to feel so well again and I don't know what more a person could expect of any medicine."

Come to Elliott's Drug Store, Peterborough, and learn the plain, truthful facts about Syntona. You, too, may receive these priceless benefits.—(Advt.)

HITLER, PEEVED AT ITALIAN REVERSES, HINTED READY TO GRAB TRIESTE AND PIN FAITH ON WELL-BRIBED LAVAL TO SWING FRANCE AND NAVY INTO HUN CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 — (CP).—Private reports from Europe received by some well - informed diplomatic sources in Washington indicate a rapidly deteriorating situation in Italy and a widening rift in the Berlin-Rome Axis, Reuter's News Agency said today in a dispatch from its correspondent in the United States capital.

"Probably sensational changes" in Western Europe and the Mediterranean are in prospect in the near future, according to these sources, Reuter's said. Germany now considers Italy's usefulness as a partner almost irreparably impaired and it was considered possible Germany would seize the important Italian port of Trieste on the Adriatic, taken from Austria after the first Great War.

Dissatisfaction among the people of Italy is evident but has not yet crystallized because opposition to the Fascist regime still is leaderless, these sources said.

Friction between Mussolini and Rudolfo Graziani, his commander-in-chief of operations, has been reported, according to word received in Washington. It was said Graziani three times has refused orders to attack on the Egyptian front until reinforcements in men and material reach him and these apparently

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4—(AP).—Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones said today that the British Government is "a good risk" and that ordinarily he favored loans to "good risks when they need it for a proper purpose."

He declined, at a press conference, to amplify these two remarks further. He specifically refused to say that he favored loans to the British for war purposes now or in the future.

He was asked whether the Johnson Act prohibiting loans to first Great War debt defaulters—including Great Britain—should be repealed.

"Not now," he repeated.

Saying he did not know how much money the British have left for purchases in the United States, Jones declared that "they say they do" need financial aid.

Jones was one of nine high government officials who met at the Treasury yesterday. They were reported authoritatively to have surveyed the British purchasing and financial situation. All he would say about the meeting was that "we discussed generally the production of war supplies."

He declined to answer a question whether war production was discussed in the light of British ability to pay for United States materials.

The "good risk" statement of Jones followed some bantering remarks in which he had declined to comment specifically on a reported proposal of Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board to lend Britain $2,500,000,000 against the Empire's production of gold for the next five years.

Imminence of an important new development in the aid-for-Britain program was indicated by the mere fact that yesterday's meeting at the Treasury was held.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4—(AP).—Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau announced to-day that Sir Frederick Phillips, Under-Secretary of the British Treasury, was scheduled to arrive in the United States to-day "to place the latest available information (on British finances) before the United States Treasury."

Morgenthau's statement consisted of only one sentence. It followed by only a few minutes a statement by Secretary of Commerce Jones, speaking as Federal Loan Administrator, who said that the British Government "is a good risk" for loans.

It was learned that the mission of Sir Frederick was one of the chief causes of a meeting yesterday of nine important Government officials, when aid to Britain was discussed.

First surmises were that the meeting was concerned with the question of supplying Britain with enough tonnage to replace some of her recent heavy shipping losses.

One informed official said, however, that if merchant shipping was discussed, "it wasn't the big thing."

Tending to support this assertion was the Maritime Commission's action yesterday in approving the sale of four more cargo vessels to Britain. Since the war, 130 such American ships have been sold to Britain, and the Commission announced that it still had 63 laid-up ships on which Britain could bid.

One of this group's previous meetings was followed shortly by the destroyers-for-bases swap; another by the announcement that Britain would be permitted to increase her aircraft orders here by 12,000 planes, and the third by the release of giant, long-range bombers.

Whatever else was discussed, it apparently had a close link with the whole question of British financial resources and her ability to buy war materials in this country.

Many Buried As Convent Is Shattered

Low-Flying Bomber Attacks Bus; R.A.F. Visits Rhine

LONDON, Dec. 4—(CP). — Bad weather was credited today with blunting the striking power of the German Air Force during the night, giving Britain a rest after a series of comparatively light early-evening attacks aimed chiefly at London and the industrial Midlands.

So unfavorable were conditions that the Nazi raiders headed for home soon after 10 p.m. (5 p.m. EDT).

Operations of the Royal Air Force likewise were curtailed, but authoritative sources said a small squadron of its night raiders bombed railway communications in the Rhineland, where Cologne has been a favorite objective.

The government said today the German attacks on Britain last night nowhere were on a large scale, and that first reports indicated the number of casualties would "not prove large."

Several persons were buried, however, when a bomb struck a London convent used as an air raid shelter.

Incendiary bombs also struck a crowded London movie theatre, showering the audience with sparks and plaster, but the auditorium was cleared quickly and the flames were extinguished.

Although the Germans began their night attacks on London earlier than usual, the assaults were sporadic, and a communique said no large fires had been caused and no important objectives hit.

Several fires, soon brought under control, were started in the Midlands, the communique said, and bombs also were dropped at scattered points in South England.

In one suburban area in South England, a low-flying Nazi bomber machine-gunned a bus, but the driver already had led the passengers to safety in a nearby field.

Five persons were killed and a

A United Effort Is Desired

Editorial

Facilities are being provided which will make it easier for those who feel they should contribute to the British War Victims' Fund. Mr. F. G. Mann has offered to do the clerical work, and office space will be furnished for him in the Examiner building. He will handle all the details.

Mr. D. B. Falkner of the Bank of Commerce will be treasurer of the fund. In this way there will be no charge whatever for collection of funds or for their handling and transmitting direct to London.

The Examiner desires to make it plain at the outset that it is not what can or should be called an Examiner Fund. It is an all Peterborough effort. There are various organizations and groups of individuals in Peterborough, and they have been making their contributions through several channels.

The plan as outlined has been brought into existence for the sole purpose of making it easier to contribute, and also bringing into existence something in the nature of a readily-available clearing house in the city. Centralizing the effort should be a decided advantage to the growth of this more-than-worthy fund.

There is that ever-present feeling among our citizens that they want to do something about it. This fund is for British PEOPLE who are suffering and it is not for the British GOVERNMENT.

It is peculiarly fitting that emphasis should be placed on it as we draw near to the Christmas season. There is no limit on the need; there is no good purpose served by even telling again what the need is, because we have it brought before us every day in the cables telling of the homes bombed out and the makeshift existence which follows.

Funds can be left at the Examiner Office any time, and you can be assured that your dollar will still be a dollar when it arrives in London. All the necessary service is being provided freely and gladly.

Price Control Conspiracy Nips 29 Firms

World-Wide Scheme On War Material Bared In New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 4—(AP). — A world-wide chain of conspiracies to control and monopolize the price of nitrogen, nitrate of soda and other nitrates used in the production of munitions was charged by a Federal grand jury today against 29 corporations, including the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours and Company.

A series of six Sherman Anti-Trust Act indictments handed up to Judge William Bondy named, in addition to the corporations, 66, individuals—officers, directors and employees of the corporations.

The nitrates which the defendants allegedly conspired to control are used in agriculture, the operation of steel mills, gas plants, waterworks and other industries connected with national defence in addition to production of munitions.

Named with the Du Pont Company, among others, were the Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation, of New York; Chilean Nitrate Sales

Vichy, Dec. 4 (AP)

CIVILIANS who wore armbands and assisted police in maintaining order at Marseille yesterday during a reception for Marshal Philippe Petain were members of a Vigilante Legion being formed in France, it was reported here today.

Legion committees, known as "protection groups," were said to have been organized in various towns of the unoccupied zone of France. The occasion at Marseille was their first public appearance.

Greek Guns Rake Enemy Flight From Porto Eddo

ATHENS, Dec. 4 — (AP). — Greek forces were reported to-day to be pressing hard against the Italian defences of Porto Edda and Argirocastro, Albania, where resistance was said to be collapsing with capture of both cities expected at any moment.

Earlier a Greek spokesman declared that Fascist troops were falling back fast in the region of Porto Edda, the Italians' southernmost port of entry into Albania, and that Greek advance units were within 1¼ miles of the city.

Raids Holding French War Factories Idle

Terrific RAF Damage Done Berlin Other Rail Centres

LONDON, Dec. 4—(CP).—The Air Ministry said today it understood that British raids on communications in the Ruhr Valley had cut off half of Germany's mined coal supply, forcing French factories which the Germans want to use for the making of war materials to lie idle for lack of fuel.

The Ruhr region is highly important for its mines and vast industrial establishments. The ministry, in speaking of the results of the continuous night attacks of the Royal Air Force, merely said, "it has been reported," but quoted no authority for the reports.

In the wake of this statement, the ministry declared the R.A.F. last night started explosions and fires in Mannehim and Ludwigshaven, on the Upper Rhine.

Other targets included a blast furnace plant at Essen and the port of Dunkirk," the ministry said.

In daylight operations yesterday airdromes in Northern France were bombed.

The Two Weak Spots

The ministry's news service credited the R.A.F. with "severely" damaging some of Berlin's great railway terminal stations, and described railways and oil plants as two of the weakest units in the German military and industrial organization.

Berlin, it continued, "is not being attacked merely because it is the capital of Germany, but because it is, among other things, a very important railway centre."

German oil plants are "very suitable" targets for British bombers, the news service said.

It stated that hits had been made on Leuna, where one of Germany's largest synthetic plants is situated, and that oil reserves in many areas has been destroyed.

Freight traffic in Berlin has been held up for days, the news service said.

Freedom Sought For Wagner's Grand-daughter

LONDON, Dec. 4.—(CP Cable)—Beverley Baxter, Toronto-born Conservative, told the House of Commons yesterday of his efforts to obtain the release from internment of Fredalind Wagner, 21-year-old grand-daughter of the composer, Richard Wagner.

He said the girl, previously an admirer of Hitler, took a violent dislike to him before the outbreak of war and left Germany for Switzerland. When hostilities began Mr. Baxter, with the aid of the foreign office, arranged after lengthy negotiations for her to come to Britain.

Subsequent, despite her antipathy to Hitler, she was arrested during the round-up of aliens and interned. Since then, Mr. Baxter continued, Arturo Toscanini, the conductor, has offered her a musical post in Buenos Aires. Mr. Baxter tried to arrange for her release, but thus far without result.

Osbert Peake, under-secretary for home affairs, replied that Fraulein Wagner was not a refugee from Nazi oppression, but an ordinary pure-blooded German, and her case was exceptional. He said that if arrangements could be made he would be glad to have the opportunity of releasing her for emigration.

Claim 3 Warships Hit

ROME, Dec. 4 (AP)—The Italian high command claimed today that three British warships had been torpedoed—two cruisers by Italian torpedo-launching planes in Suda Bay, Crete, and a destroyer by a submarine in the Atlantic.

VC Bags Hun, Fools 2nd In Flaming Leap

LONDON, Dec. 4—(CP).—Flt. Lt. Nicholson, first fighter pilot to win a Victoria Cross in the present war, last night described how he shot down a Messerschmitt fighter after his own machine had been riddled with bullets and how he later descended safely by parachute with another enemy plane in the vicinity.

Speaking on a British Broadcasting Corporation feature program, the Royal Air Force flier said he was flying on patrol duty 18,000 feet over Southampton when four cannon-shells from a Messerschmitt 110 struck the machine.

"The first shells tore through the hood over my cockpit," he said. "It sent splinters into my left eye and nearly severed my eyelid.

"The second shell struck my spare petrol tank, setting it afire, and the third crashed into my cockpit. The fourth shell struck my foot and made quite a mess of it...But I didn't know anything about that until later.

"Suddenly a Messerschmitt came in the range of my gun sights. I pressed the gun button...We both went down in a dive, and I remember shouting out at him: 'I'll teach you some manners, you Hun.'

"I knew I was getting him. His left wing tipped lower than his right...But I remember looking at my left hand...It seemed to be on fire and I could see the skin peeling off...

"I gave him all I had and he went down. I gave him another parting burst and he disappeared.

"Then I decided I'd better bail out. When I did another Messerschmitt appeared. I pretended to be dead, letting my body hang limply, waiting for the bullets to pour into me—but they never came."

Better To Wait

London, Dec. 4 (CP)

HUGH DALTON, Minister of Economic Warfare, today termed "nonsense" suggestions advanced in some quarters that the Royal Air Force should bomb Rumanian oil wells.

He said oil at the Balkan source is in a crude state and therefore not highly inflammable.

It is better to wait, he said, until Germany has expended effort in transporting it to the Reich and money and labor in refining it, and then to bomb the combustible product.

R.A.F. Fighters Pack Cannon

After Bigger 'Bag' As Machine Guns Fail On Huns' Armor

LONDON, Dec. 4 (CP Cable) — Royal Air Force fighter planes equipped with cannon are now engaged in the sky battles over Britain and experts are confident that the cannon will make the swift-flying fighters far more effective in beating back German raiders.

The process of fitting the heavier armament has been under way for some time but the information could not be disclosed until today.

In the early stages of the battle of Britain, Hurricanes and Spitfires, armed with eight machine-guns, took a deadly toll of attacking Nazi planes seeking vainly to control the skies as a prelude to an invasion attempt.

Then Germany strengthened the armor of her planes, making them less vulnerable to machine-gun fire and thereby reducing losses amongst the raiders and their escorts.

To counter, the R.A.F. decided to fit cannon on its fighters, providing longer range of effective fire and greater destructive power.

For security reasons it cannot be stated how many cannon the British fighters are carrying but experts are convinced they will prove a more potent weapon than the Browning machine guns.

Reports here suggest the United States Bell Airacobra fighter may be made available to Britain. Firing trials of this machine have been held over Lake Ontario. It is fitted with a 37-millimetre long-barrel type of cannon.

Rumania Expropriates Oil

2nd Decree Seizes Barges, Ships, Jewish Owned

BUCHAREST, Dec. 4—(AP). — Premier Ion Antonescu of Rumania decreed today the expropriation of all oil pipelines, pumping stations, reservoirs and all real estate on which they are situated.

(The decree was regarded as not altering the situation greatly, since German troops have occupied the oil fields to ensure their operation in Germany's interests. Eventual control of the oil industry will be governed by the outcome of the war. Practically all British subjects engaged in the industry have withdrawn from the country, but the British Minister and his staff remain in Bucharest to protect British interests.)

Oscar Survivors Celebrate

Handful Of Ford Pacifists Review Ill Fated Peace Trip Of '15

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 — (AP). — Under a troubled winter sky 25 years ago to-day, the Oscar II. nosed down New York harbor and started one of the strangest Odysseys in United States history.

The Oscar II, was the "peace ship chartered by Henry Ford, and its oddly-assorted passengers were bound for Europe to "get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas."

To-day, a handful of its survivors —including such writers as Elmer Davis, Berton Braley, and Irving Caesar—gathered at a luncheon of the Overseas Press Club of America to commemorate the expedition.

The unusual manifestation of pacifism begun that bleak day was fated to come to an inglorious end. The goal was a conference of peace advocates to influence belligerent governments to end the war——but the war was to run its destructive and horrible course for three long years more.

In a telegam read at the luncheon in honor of the survivors of the sailing, Ford said in part:

"I'm glad that you are observing the 25th anniversary of the sailing of what has been called the peace ship. I do not hesitate to say that I learned a great deal on that voyage which has helped me to understand other things that have occurred during these 25 years.

"And it seems to me that with the oceans full of warships, we can afford to remember that there was once a Peace ship. At least we who sailed in 1915 did not decrease the life or love that was in the world. It is a pleasure after so many years to greet my fellow voyagers on the Oscar II."

Henry Ford's aversion to war was widely known, and on the night of November 23, 1915, after a conference with President Wilson, the automobile manufacturers chartered the Oscar II to carry an expedition to Europe.

He had said: "I will spend every

LONDON, Dec. 4 (CP) — The government may have to apply its powers of labor compulsion "in tackling the most vitally important and urgent task of the reconstruction of our industrial centres," Sir John Anderson, Lord President of the Council, told the House of Commons today.

ATHENS, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Greek troops were reported closing in rapidly around Porto Edda today while other forces drive steadily through snow-pelted mountains at the opposite end of the Albanian battlefront toward Elbasani and the Albanian capital.

A Greek spokesman declared the Italians were falling back fast in the section around Porto Edda, the Italians' southermost port in Albania, and said Greek advance units were within 1¼ miles of the town.

The Greeks were said to have driven past the port in a flanking move yesterday, placing under fire the road from Porto Edda inland to the fascist base at Agirocastro.

The spokesman also credited the Greeks with new gains in their efforts to encircle Agirocastro—about 20 miles northeast of Porto Edda—and said heights northeast of Libohovo, six miles southeast of Agirocastro, had been seized from the cannot be sent.

As a result of this situation, plus Italian reverses in Greece and the refusal of the Italian fleet to meet the British fleet, Hitler now is believed to be seeking to build a new axis—Berlin and Vichy. The reported visit to Berlin of Vice-Premier Laval—a visit Germany has denied—is believed to be connected with this project, Reuter's said.

Laval is believed willing to give his support to the project if the rewards to France are sufficiently inviting. Diplomatic sources say reports from Europe indicate Hitler finds Mussolini "unreliable and troublesome," and that he would therefore find the remains of the French fleet, plus French Mediterranean bases, more useful against Britain than any contribution Mussolini has yet made or is likely to make. He therefore has allowed Laval to understand that a handsome price would be paid by Germany for such assistance.

To this there are at present three obstacles—anti-German feeling in unoccupied France; Marshal Petain and Gen. Maxime Weygand, Reuter's continued. However, Laval was understood to feel that with the press under his control and handsome rewards in the offing (presumably at the expense of both Britain and Italy), he could overcome French public feeling.

Two More Snags.

"But Petain remains unwilling and Weygand is difficult to persuade because he is understood to feel that a semi-independent French colonial empire in Africa would be a strong bargaining factor in any future peace conference," Reuters added. "He is less sure now than he was in June that Germany will preside at such a conference.

"An incidental development expected in the Mediterranean, according to the same diplomatic sources, is German seizure of Trieste. Washington circles are linking urgent efforts to get Admiral Leahy on his way to Vichy (as United States' ambassador) with these developments while Laval is reported anxious to get Petain to Versailles, out of reach of diplomats and Frenchmen who might persuade him not to accede to Hitler's plan."

(Reports from Vichy have indicated that Petain shortly will move to Versailles with at least part of the Vichy government, which would place the seat of the government in German-held territory. Discussions with the Germans to move the government to Paris so far have not succeeded. Versailles is about 20 miles from Paris.

The indictments charge that the alleged conspiracies existed through restrictive and secret contracts with producers and marketers of various nitrates throughout the United States and in other countries, including Canada, Great Britain, Switzerland, Germany, Norway, Sweden, Poland, Belgium, Japan and Chile.

In addition to those indicted, the true bills name about 30 foreign corporations as co-conspirators.

One of the indictments name Rudolph Ilgner as allegedly obstructing justice during the grand jury investigation which led to the indictments.

Ilgner, not otherwise identified, is charged specifically with having ordered the destruction of the books and records of Chemnyoo, Inc., to prevent them from falling into the hands of the grand jury.

The indictments hold that the alleged conspiracies covered periods as far back as 1920 and up to and including September 1, 1939.

Replying to criticism of the government's war effort, Sir John said, "We may reasonably expect to see rapid progress" in the training of labor—a problem which the government is attacking with "vigor, foresight and success."

Sir John said that "technical naval advisers are leaving nothing undone to find an early and effective solution of the grave problem" caused by shipping losses. He expressed confidence it would be solved.

Ian Hannah, Conservative, advocated a direct appeal to the United States "to help patrol trade routes of the Atlantic with her own navy."

"I do not see how this nation can bear the tremendous burdens of carrying on a great war which after all, if we see it rightly, is just as much to the benefit of America as for our own empire," he declared.

to zero at Winnipeg. Western Ontario and the eastern part of the central province had near-blizzards but the temperature was up to 18 above at London and 19 at Toronto.

Toronto and many sections of Ontario were struggling with fresh snowfalls that added to highway difficulties with several roads already blocked by previous falls. The Georgian Bay area experienced another storm that threatened to block country roads completely. Main highways around Brantford were still open but the going was hard. Three highways around Stratford were blocked.

A blizzard struck the Kingston area early in the day and big drifts of snow were whipped over side roads while traffic on main highways was slowed considerably. The snowfall in this district was heavier than for 20 years past at this time of year.

All previous cold records for this early in the season were shattered at Ottawa where the mercury fell to 27 below zero during the night. The temperature at the capital rose to zero during the morning, with continued snow.

Fifteen inches of snow have already fallen in Frontenac County in Eastern Ontario while twenty inches have fallen in Peterborough—the heaviest since 1920.

Detailed reports Wednesday showed the passenger and freight steamer Caribou frozen in Little Current but efforts will be made to release her for her final trip of the season to Owen Sound.

Chatham had a near blizzard although temperatures were higher than Tuesday. The snowfall slowed down deliveries of sugar beets to the refineries at Chatham and Wallaceburg and a considerable acreage is still unharvested. A large acreage of corn in Kent is still uncut.

The fresh snowfall also assumed blizzard proportions in the Hamilton district. At Hamilton and Toronto city streets were in a perilous condition and highways were equally dangerous.

Cold weather records of 20 years' standing were shattered at Brockville when the thermometer reached a low of 11 below zero. Snowfall in the Brockville area was heavier than at this period in any of the past 13 years, with a fall of 36 inches.

One old timer at Chatham claimed there hasn't been as much snow there since 1878. New snow fell on top of a 15-inch storm last weekend.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—(AP).— The first cold wave of the month moved seaward to-day, with a parting slap at the Eastern States.

Arctic blasts pushed the mercury to record lows for the date in New York State to-day and to sub-zero marks at many New England points.

Rising temperatures brought relief to the Middle West after a frigid spell that saw records fall in many parts of the mid-and. Twenty and thirty below readings were reported in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The cold wave ended Long Island's most productive cauliflower season, ruining the last few thousand crates of a record 1,500,000 crop.

Midland Given Million Job On Two Vessels

MIDLAND, Dec. 4.—Announcement yesterday that contracts for the construction of two naval vessels at an estimated cost of $500,000 each at the Midland Shipyards, Limited, ends a controversy that has been raging here since the outbreak of war. The shipyards, idle since 1927, will be opened with employment of 500 men as soon as steel for construction of the ships can be obtained.

George McLean, M.P. for East Simcoe, conveyed news of the contracts to this Georgian Bay town, which has been dependent since its founding on Great Lakes shipping and until thirteen years ago on shipbuilding activities. His message was sent to Herman Thompson, chairman of the industrial section of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, which has devoted practically all its efforts since the war broke out to have the great yards reopened.

"I am delighted to tell you that Midland is to share in the general effort in a big way," Mr. McLean wired. He congratulated Mr. Thompson and the chamber on their persistent and finally successful representations.

(Later information from Ottawa said that the shipyards had been given the "go-ahead" signal and the contracts will be formally signed within a few days. The announcement followed only a week after David B. Carswell was appointed Controller of Ship Construction and Director-General of Naval Construction).

Petition Sent To Ottawa.

When the Midland yards swing into action every shipbuilding company in Canada will be engaged in war construction. It is considered likely that new shipyards also will be established in the near future.

The yards were acquired by Canada Steamship Lines in 1926 from the local James Playfair interests and were closed in 1927, the C.S.L. being more interested in operation than construction of shipping. For thirteen years the yard, stretching for 800 yards along the waterfront, has been silent, and relief rolls grew correspondingly in the lean years.

A year ago it was hoped wartime construction would bring about opening of the yards and there were

3 Women Drivers Saved

Three women ambulance drivers were taken unhurt from the wreckage of the bombed convent shelter in London by rescue workers who tunnelled through debris.

Several persons were known to have been killed in the shelter, but several Sisters of Mercy who were praying in the convent chapel when the bombs fell were unhurt. A moving picture theatre near the convent was turned into a first aid post.

Seven bombs fell in a row in this district, smashing an apartment house.

Three heavy bombs caused considerable damage in another sector of London, where a number of homes and stores were wrecked. Four bodies were recovered from ruined buildings there during the morning.

One low flying raider, believed to have been an Italian plane, dropped three bombs on a beach near a southeast coast town during the night, smashing shops, a hotel and house windows.

It was disclosed authoritatively that the German raid on the Midlands last night was "mainly in the Birmingham area."

Last night's raid was the first heavy assault directed against that city in more than a week. Planes in the raid, which was of comparatively short duration, dropped fire bombs, high explosives and delayed action bombs.

Nineteen persons were trapped when a high explosive bomb hit two adjoining basement shelters. They were rescued through an emergency exit.

A mobile crane was used to lift the debris of the bombed London convent and rescue parties, helped by Army Pioneer Corps, continued this afternoon to search for victims. Some were brought out alive.

Refugee women — French and Polish—housed at the top of the convent escaped injury.

Thirteen-year-old Renee Fletcher told this story of escape and tragedy at the convent shelter:—

She and her parents had been using the refuge each night. Last night she ran out during the alarm to buy fried fish from a nearby restaurant for the family supper.

While she was gone the bomb struck. She got back in time to see her father dug out of the wreckage gravely injured. They still were digging for Renee's mother.

Private M.P's To Get Part In War

National Expenditure Committee To Give Score Work

OTTAWA, Dec. 4—(CP). —Private members of Parliament are to have a bigger part in direction of Canada's war effort—as they have been urging with increasing vigor in recent weeks.

A Committee of Parliament on National Expenditure is to be created through which a score or so of members of all parties will assist the Government directly in supervising and controlling the vast war expenditures being made. A similar body has been functioning in the British House of Commons for a year.

Members not engaged on the new committee of the Canadian House are being advised to take a more direct part in the leadership of war activities in their own constituencies, co-operating closely with the Government.

This program evolved yesterday in the House as the throne speech debate, nearly four weeks old, was

Lapointe, Family Get Red Threats

OTTAWA, Dec. 4 — (CP). — The Justice Minister, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, said last night in a House of Commons speech that he had received anonymous letters "threatening my life and threatening members of my family."

The fact that such threats had been made was first disclosed a little less than a year ago.

Mr. Lapointe mentioned them when he replied to an address J. S. Roy, member for Gaspe, who sits with the Conservative Opposition.

The Justice Minister said "the only people in Quebec at the present time who are opposed to the war work of the Government are the Communists."

"The Communists are secretly distributing circulars and they are calling me names....

"They have sent me anonymous letters threatening my life and threatening members of my family. But these people are cowards. When a man wants to do that sort of thing he does not write a letter. He acts.

"Even if they do their dirty work, I will not mind. I am here to do my duty and I shall do my duty."

Lieut. A.R.J. Ash Is Re-elected

Lieut. Arthur J. R. Ash of No. 1 Company, C.M.T.C. 32 at the Exhibition Grounds was advised today that he had been re-elected to the Ottawa City Council

He was first elected to civic office five years ago at the age of 28, and he was the youngest member on the Council. Today he is still the youngest member and this success means a seat on the council for the next two years. He formerly operated a hotel in the capital but recently has given up the business for the duration.

The amusing part of the picture is that Lieut. Ash just went down to Ottawa, on nomination day, saw that he was nominated and duly qualified, then returned to his duties at Exhibition Camp. The Wellington ward electors showed their appreciation of his services and their confidence in his ability by coming through with a handsome majority, so now Lieut. Ash must act as a member of council by remote control.

He is one of the most popular commissioned officers on the permanent staff at the local camp and today he was receiving the plaudits and congratulations of his colleagues for his re-election.

To Boost Peterborough

Peterborough will be featured on the air to-night during one of the ace programs of radio. Citizens will hear the many features of their city described to the world over Station CFRB between 10 and 11 o'clock during the sparkling Fred Allen "Star Theatre of the Air" broadcast. During intermissions between the laugh-rippling buffoonery of Fred Allen and Portland Hoffa, the reasons for Peterborough's success as a city of homes and industries will be told.

This local program, of inestimable value as publicity, is made possible through the generosity of McColl-Frontenac Oil Company, and will not cost the city a cent.

cent I have in the world if necessary to bring about an end of the war."

He did spend $400,000.

Aboard the "Peace ship" were about 160 passengers, including peace advocates, students, and newspapermen covering the expedition and on their way to cover Europe's war. Ford was among them.

The epochal voyage started calmly enough. Irving Caesar, a secretary to the exhibition and now a song publisher and writer, kept a daily diary and innumerable records of the voyage which indicate this calm was short-lived.

Caesar's diary shows the expedition was split into groups and cliques; that manifestors were hurled back and forth and resolutions adopted.

According to Caesar's account, Ford took cognizance of the situation with a long letter which said in part ". . . It has appeared that there are some persons among us whose ideas, though in general sympathy with peace, were nevertheless not clearly defined as to all beliefs essential to an expedition of this kind."

Hungarian Behind It

Credit for the expedition was given chiefly to a Hungarian woman, Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, a widely-known pacifist of the time.

After a two-week voyage, including a three-day delay by the British at Kirkwall, the expedition arrived at Christiana (Oslo), Norway. It was long before many members realized the hopelessness of their mission.

Ford left the party and returned home, arriving here the day before Christmas. He continued, however, to give the group his support and cabled encouragement from time to time.

Others of the party wandered from capital to capital.

A few returned to Christiana and set up "Ford's Neutral Permanent Peace Conference." But after a few weeks, only a handful remained, and even the die-hards, disillusioned, finally straggled home.

The expedition included leaders in many fields of endeavor. William Jennings Bryan was aboard the Oscar II, as were Miss Jane Addams of Hull House fame, and Judge Ben B. Lindsey.

Among the newspaper correspondents were the recently resigned United States Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt; S. S. McClure, then editor of the New York Mail; Elmer Davis of the New York Times; Berton Braley, of Collier's; A. E. Hartzell, of the Sun; Maxwell H. Swan, of the Herald Tribune, and others.

The expedition was one of Ford's failures. When the United States eventually entered the war, he put his resources at the disposal of the government.

"I want peace, but I will fight like the devil to get it," he said at the time. "I hate war so much I am willing to enter this one to make it the last."

That was in 1917.

THE RIGHT MAN

Early in the life of the Exhibition Grounds, military camp trainees complained that the food, while of good quality was improperly cooked. Col. Keeler discovered that one of the officers, Lieut. W. A. Bowerman, was a qualified chef, and by the way was a qualified teacher as well. Bowerman was named messing officer some time ago, and enquiries made quietly among the trainees indicate the food is tops.

Greek Guns

Other Greek forces, at the opposite end of the Albanian battlefront, were driving steadily through snow-blanketed mountains toward Elbasani and the Albanian capital, Tirana.

In the area of Argirocastro, Greek artillery was said to have neutralized Italian resistance by placing under fire the road running north-east from Porto Edda inland.

North of the Ostrovitza Mountains in the central sector new positions were said to have been occupied by the Greeks in their counter-invasion of Albania. An Athens spokesman said they set up field pieces and shelled Italian emplacements.

Bombers Do Great Work.

Heavy and medium bombers of the Greeks were reported exceptionally active yesterday, facilitating ground operations.

They were said to have bombed heavily Italian columns and other Fascist targets in the Berati and Valona areas, despite strong anti-aircraft fire and fighter opposition.

Other bomber formations attack Fascist camps near Elbasani and in the valley of the Shkumbi River, which runs past Elbasani to the sea. Hits were described as of "great importance," and all Greek aircraft returned safely.

"Reports received confirm that, in addition to two Italian aircraft destroyed by our bomber and fighter formations Dec. 2, two other enemy aircraft also were shot down. In the Premeti area our fighters intercepted two reconnaissance aircraft and they were destroyed."

The companies under the decrees will be re-imbursed over 25 years, being paid by bonds bearing three per cent interest.

An official announced that daily oil production in Rumania had dropped since Summer from 1,700 to 1,400 tank cars a day. The official reason given for this was the inability to transport the full production, but informed quarters said disorders in Rumania were mainly responsible.

5 Sabotage Acts On New Plane Is Dies Charge

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—(AP)—Chairman Martin Dies, appealing for a continuation of his House of Representatives Committee on un-American Activities, said last night that at least "five separate acts of sabotage" had been committed on "a most important experimental plant" at an undisclosed factory.

Declining to name the plane, plant or time of the incident, Dies said in a broadcast address that the five acts were discovered before the plane left the ground, but that there was a subsequent "crack up" of the ship.

"It is highly probable that a sixth act of sabotage which went undiscovered was the cause of the plane's destruction," Dies said. "The plant's inspector warned against the plane's leaving the ground, and when his warning went unheeded he demanded a transfer out of the experimental department."

Citing this example to illustrate "the extreme urgency" of expelling fifth columnists from defence industries, Dies remarked that a recent committee investigation disclosed that a "clique of German Nazis" was employed in strategic positions in the plant where the plane crashed.

Text of Statement.

Dies' statement on the alleged sabotage:

"An extraneous piece of metal was placed in the machine in such a position that it would jam the controls during flight.

"Later a metal bar was spliced in the controls themselves, which, if it had not been discovered, would have almost certainly resulted in the destruction of the plane when it was taken up.

"Still later it was found that bolts had been removed from the plane's brakes.

"A fourth act of sabotage consisted of tampering with the gas gauges in such a way that the tanks would appear to have ample fuel, even though nearly empty.

"Finally, other bolts necessary to the stopping of the plane when it reached the ground after flight were found to have been removed."

Dies said he related this incident to show "that we dare not tolerate the presence of totalitarian sympathizers in our defence industries" and that they should be removed before they become "overt saboteurs".

The committee's life ends Jan. 3 and the Texan said that termination of the investigation "would bring to me a deep sense of personal relief," but he also asserted that "sabotage of this investigation at this critical time would mean an important victory for the fifth column in America."

"This committee is feared and despised by the agents of friends of totalitarianism more than any other Government agency," Dies said.

"Knowing the importance of continuing the investigation, it is our solemn duty to spare no efforts to keep it alive. But you and your representatives in Congress have an equal duty, and yours must be the final decision. We can but point the way; the rest is in your hands."

At the outset, the chairman said he wanted to report on the committee's investigation and said this accomplishment would be credited to it:

"We have educated and awakened the American people to a far better understanding of the sinister character and wide extent of subversive activities."

Magazine, Comic Lists Hard Hit By New Ban

OTTAWA, Dec. 4—(CP). — The magazine and comic readers of Canada received a jolt from Finance Minister Ilsley yesterday when he presented his list of prohibited imports designed to conserve foreign exchange for essential war purchasing. It will mean that a lot of blood and thunder will be removed from the news stands. National Revenue officers stated last night that there are 95 comic magazines—nothing but comics—coming into Canada and not one will be allowed in after today.

Mr. Ilsley placed the following reading material on the list of imports prohibited except when originating within the Empire:

"Periodical publications, unbound or paper bound, consisting largely of fiction or printed matter of a similar character, including detective, sex, western and alleged true or confession stories, and publications, bound or paper bound, commonly known as comics, but not including bona fide supplements used with newspapers."

It is left to the Revenue Minister to decide whether or not any publication is to be included in the foregoing description and his word shall be final and conclusive. Bulk of such publications read in Canada come from the United States.

Just what effect the prohibition will have on Canadian subscriptions to such reading matter has not been decided yet, according to a Finance Department source.

It was considered that most of the barred periodicals would be of the newsstand types when the prohibition was drawn up, this source said. He added that offhand he thought the subscription time remaining would just be lost, but added: "Possibly, as the measure is an exchange-saving one, the prohibition could more justly be made to apply at the expiration of the present subscription."

Officials of the Revenue Department said the import ban would not affect any of the "better class, serious magazines" published in the United States, and that it was aimed primarily at certain of the so-called "pulp" magazines made up almost entirely of fiction of the more dramatic type and with few serious articles.

Have Good Cause For Meditation

With Greek troops, aided by Britain, continuing to hand stinging defeats to the vastly numerically superior Italian forces, these three important figures in the Axis lineup have good reason to be plunged deep in meditation. This picture was taken at a conference recently at Florence. Von Ribbentrop, Germany's Foreign Minister, RIGHT, appears to be doing the talking as Il Duce and his son-in-law, Count Ciano, do the listening. Germany is reliably reported to be strongly irked at Il Duce's string of failures in Greece, the Mediterranean and Africa.

French Struggle To Keep Hold On Indo China

HANOI, French Indo-China, Dec. 4.—(AP)—The French are determined to remain master of Indo-China.

The lengthening shadow of Japanese expansion and the hostility of neighboring China and Thailand (Siam) do not alter this. Neither does Indo-China's submission to the remote control of Vichy, which has strained its once friendly relations with Britain in the Far East.

Many Frenchmen feared that the end of their 60-year domination of this East Asian colony was only a question of days when the Japanese blustered, negotiated and fought their way into Tonkin last September.

From the windows of his palace here, Governor-General Jean Decoux almost any day can see single formations of Japanese warplanes more formidable than the whole colonial air force at his command.

Garrisoned at Haiphong, coastal gateway to northern Indo-China, in Hanoi at the seat of French administration and at other military and communications centres are more Japanese soldiers than the total white French effectives, regulars and mobilized civilians, available for the defence of all Indo-China.

Thankful To U.S.

The French well know that this power might be turned on them at any hour and for its restraint they thank Washington more than Tokyo.

Off the record, French officials also pin part of their optimism to Chinese resistance against Japan.

The French have been forced to provide Indo-Chinese military bases and facilities for Japan's declared purpose of crushing China's Chiang Kai-Shek government.

But they believe that after the unhappy attempts to subjugate and control areas in China occupied by her army, Japan will want to leave to the experienced French colonial administration the formidable task of governing an area greater than continental France and with 26,000,000 people of half a dozen races and languages.

Bancroft News

Winter in the northern section of Hastings County has made an early debut and in fact the amount of snow at this early date seems to measure up with last winter's average already. The side roads for automobile traffic are practically paralyzed with only the highway artery clear for traffic. Sunday evening the temperature commenced to drop and early in the evening registered five below zero.

Charge Germans Hold Reins In Martinique

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Dec. 4 (CP Cable)—The population of Martinique is for Gen. Charles de Gaulle's free French forces but the Nazis are the inspiration at the bottom of the official regime in the French colony, according to Joseph Stauble, Trinidad, who said he was deported from Martinique because "he knew too much."

Stauble, who in seven years in the French colony built up a wine and ship chandler's business, said his 1,000,000-franc business and property were threatened with confiscation.

Ordered to leave the colony within 15 days, he was forced to sell his business for 300,000 francs, with the banks refusing to pay him more than 1,000 francs a month. He was forced to leave the island without his money, he said.

Stauble claimed he knew a French port on Martinique where $125,000,000 in gold from Poland was hidden after being taken to the island from Halifax by the French cruiser Emile Bertin.

DISPLAYS CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS

Arranging for Christmas is possibly the most interesting shopping we do throughout the entire year. Christmas is not a time at which we buy—six of this—three of that, but rather buy for the individual, realizing as we do that this friend, at some time or other, has in some way shown or expressed a preference for, say—"Perfume"—another friend we know adores a lovely "Compact"—still another has the Kodak hobby, and so on all along the line. We, in turn, are determined insofar as possible to satisfy individual likes, and that is just exactly what makes Christmas Shopping so very interesting, but also so very exacting if we are to give the most appreciative gifts to those dear enough to be included in that Inner Circle. As a matter of fact, our desire to give gifts to suit each Personality is the reason you should go to your Tamblyn Drug Store, for there you will surely find abundance of—Variety—Quality—Distinction—the latest in design and generally the Acceptable remembrance—so before doing your Christmas Buying be sure to visit us, as we have on display a very comprehensive assortment of suitable gifts, all moderately priced, but only a selection of which we are able to include in this Christmas List of

No Kind Words For Him

When a man resigns from a position of importance it is usual to say something about him having made a contribution to the welfare of the country, or else to dust off that old phrase about "always acting in the best interests of the community."

Joseph Kennedy resigned as United States Ambassador to Britain, and the kind words are slow in making their appearance. It has always been considered the most important post in Washington's diplomatic service, and it is more important today than ever.

The New York Herald Tribune took occasion to say: "A vast number of Americans are going to breathe more easily." It is stated there were many occasions when no person seemed aware of what Mr. Kennedy was doing, and there were times when the paper was certain Mr. Kennedy did not know himself.

The Herald Tribune says plainly that the one supreme issue in United States today is "between those who believe that war may be a lesser evil for American democracy than a supine surrender of our last democratic allies to Hitlerian world empire and those who believe that war of any sort would be so destructive that in the last analysis they would give up the fort and make peace rather than risk it."

Summing up, we quote this:

"Mr. Kennedy, already suspected of belonging to the second party, deftly evades the issue; tries to clothe his uncertain position with the advantages of both sides, then inexcusably associates the President with an attitude which is only that of Mr. Kennedy."

The importance of having a far-seeing, a fearless man in London as representative of United States, is so vital that it excites interest in our country far beyond that which is usually attached to the foreign affairs of the United States government.

We are not suggesting that Washington should send another Churchill to London, because there is but one Churchill, but it is nothing short of a matter of survival or defeat for Britain that United States should send a representative there who sees in the present situation the extreme need of supplying all possible aid to the British forces.

With such a man in London Washington could be kept constantly and unmistakably aware of the needs of the situation. He would put even an additional new zest and high hope in the hearts of the people of Britain, and he could see for himself and then so inform his government that the security of United States rests upon the outcome of what is taking place in Europe.

Joseph Kennedy's resignation is not regretted. There is a well-founded feeling that had United States assistance depended upon his urgings or his estimates it would have fallen far short of what has already been forwarded. The Empire can well trust, pray, hope and yearn that the new ambassador from Washington to London will be one fitted by courage and vision to measure up to the needs of the exacting situation.

Italy Has a New Plane

From Rome comes a report of a new war plane, and it is heralded as a revolution in air fighting. It has no motor and it has no propeller. It is shot through the air by gas.

There used to be a song about "He flies through the air with the greatest of ease," and perhaps that is where the idea was hatched.

This new plane moved "only by internal reaction," and right there we found that the limitations which handicap human knowledge came into immediate and effective action. We have not the faintest idea what that means or how it operates. Nor could we find the individual who could throw light on that dark passage. There was nothing about it in the Parliamentary Guide, in the Municipal Act; not a word in the Canadian Almanac nor yet in the Ditches and Watercourses Act. Nothing was mentioned in the latest budget from Ottawa dealing with internal reaction. So there you are.

Our own belief, unfortified by technical assurance, is that Italy would be well advised to try this new thing because her air force, her infantry, navy and gunners all seem to be lacking internal reaction or action of any other variety.

We learn that it will be necessary to have a pilot on this machine, but he would not have to bother to see whether the engine was running or the propeller was spinning around. The thing is lifted by compressed gas. He'd need only a shove off and away he'd go some place or other.

But what he'd do when he desired to turn around and run for home is something else which puzzles us, and really that is rather an important consideration in the life of an Italian soldier in the air or on the land.

No German Toys Here

An Examiner representative was inquiring in a local store about toys. There appeared to be as many as ever on display; toys which moved when wound; trains which ran right on schedule; dolls which were really pretty litttle persons; in fact a good showing of all such things.

Toys used to come from Germany, and Japan shipped a lot of material here. So where do merchants secure the supply now? A good deal of it came from Britain, and most of it was made in Canada, although some was imported from United States.

There is was learned the largest doll factory in the British Empire is located in Toronto and the dealer was satisfied the Canadian doll was quite the equal of anything which had been previously imported.

Learned too that the toy business might be rather profitable if all could be sold, and if there was no breakage. Toys for the Christmas trade are bought in June, and the business has to be handled in a little better than three weeks. Space has to be provided, and one has to figure that the space is valuable because other goods usually sold there have to be shifted and in this way lose their store display sales value.

Then it is almost impossible to keep children (and some adults too) from doing too much and too violent winding of toys and that brings about breakage at times. Nor is there any guarantee that all the stock can be sold, and nothing to indicate that what is left over can be carried along to ultimately show a profit. Even so the Christmas toys are here in great variety, and there is not a made-in-Germany article in the whole assortment.

Lessons From Koritza

The Greeks desire to change the name of Koritza to Korytsa. Not that it makes much difference to us, but we wish they would leave the name alone. We know now where to look for it on the map and we have become accustomed to spelling it.

Before the invasion of Greece by the Italians we doubt if there would be half a dozen people in any community who would know there was such a place as Koritza in Albania, and there might well be sufficient people who would be hard pressed to put their finger on a map and show where Albania itself was located.

In recent weeks we have learned something. We know now that Koritza is the place where the Italians were, but where now the Greeks are.

Koritza normally has a population about the same as Peterborough, around 25,000. Two-thirds of the population are Greeks, and the rest are Albanians. Schools there for children have long been financed by Greeks through endowments, and at one time the city was in Greek territory.

Koritza is noted for something else because it has shown to the world several things, (1) that the Italian army is weak, and (2) that the Italians as empire builders are failures.

The weakness of the Italians and the strength of the Greeks need no special mention here, but the other point is worth considering. When Italy seized Albania and drove out King Zog she made no friends with the inhabitants. They were treated as conquered people. The result is that we read today of various ambush expeditions which have been launched against the Italians by the Albanians themselves. They are not fighting with the Greek army, but are off on their own in a territory they know well, and they have been able to inflict heavy losses on the Italians. So Italy is without friends in Albania. Her tactics have been those of a conqueror and not identified with the serious business of winning the good-will of the Albanians. Koritza has taught the world much.

Moving From Here To There

Bell Telephone announces it is distributing its new directory in Toronto and it will take a week to hand out the 260,000 new books. That is a large order, but Toronto is a large city.

We find it of greater interest to learn that the volume contains over 78,000 new or changed listings. Certainly that number is not accounted for by new telephones or additions to existing services. It means that many thousands of people have moved during the year. Toronto could not if it tried equal the moving habits of Montreal where twice a year they have a regular epidemic of moving, where families go popping around the community as though engaged in something like a game of musical chairs.

Yes—78,000 changed listings in Toronto tells quite a story of the habits of the people. Moving from here to there, desiring a change or finding one necessary. Quite different to the comfortable little home where we called a few days ago because the people had celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary. There it was stated they had moved into that house when married, and the bride of sixty years ago had formerly lived in a house on the same street. In one house sixty years and on the same street for eighty years!

This King Is Very Young

Paul Francis Pawlowski produced the oats which ranked highest at the Grain and Hay show of the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago. It is there that one must win to become what is commonly referred to as "the oats king" of the continent.

Little seems to be known about Paul Francis Pawlowski. He was not present at the show because he lives on a farm 100 miles north and east from Edmonton.

It was not possible to call him on the telephone because there is none in his house. The wife of a doctor in the nearest village told a reporter she knew the family. The mother had died some years ago and the children and the father are on the farm. Paul Francis is either 16 or 17 years old, and a new Canadian, and he has taken a leading part in junior agricultural work.

He shipped his sample of Victory oats to the big show in Chicago, and probably he has wondered often enough since what became of it. By this time the youth of 16 or 17 will know his oats ranked higher than anything else produced on the entire continent. Not so bad for a beginner.

The legal weight for oats is 34 pounds to a bushel, but the sample shipped by Paul Francis tipped the official scales at 49 pounds to the bushel.

And that is 44.1 per cent. above the legal minimum for a bushel of oats.

Things may be a little quiet on that remote farm in the days of winter where there is not even a rural line where one can "listen in" now and then, but it seems likely Paul Francis, his father, brothers and sisters will have something about which to talk for several days to come.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Benito has an army
That he can't leave alone;
For every time he sends it out
It turns and runs for home.

Vice-President Pierre Laval has left Vichy for Berlin, and the feeling persists that he will feel very much at home there.

A party of 15 from the Yukon is on the way to Vancouver to enlist in the Canadian army. Men who come a long way are generally to be counted on as going a long way too.

Turkish papers warn the Bulgarians to keep away from an alliance with the Germans. The Turks claim they know whereof they speak because they tried such a tie-up during the last war.

Greeks admit they used the Axis fifth column methods on the Italians by having their men enter Italy and spread the report that the Greeks would not fight and could be easily conquered. Events of recent weeks indicate that the Greeks also used something else.

THRIFT

¶ My neighbor has a head I know, his brains stand firmly in a row, nor are they out of line; his plan works out with perfect ease, and all his relatives he'll please, when it comes Christmas time.

¶ His tastes are humble, that I know, he dreads the stuff we might call show, his socks are very tame; the neckties that he wears are drab, they make him look a trifle sad, his headgear is the same.

¶ Of relatives he has his share, they send him gifts they shouldn't dare, fine socks of red and blue; I've seen the neckties that they send, they are the most peculiar blend, a riot in their hue.

¶ His nieces and his nephews too, of whom they're really quite a few, send scarves he could not wear; they live so many miles away, that he can safe on Christmas day, just lay them by with care.

¶ And now he has some grandsons too, who crave for things all bright and new, he taps his hidden store; he'll send them socks which simply blaze, and they go happy on their ways, he makes a goodly score.

¶ And neckties too of giddy hue, of red and green and pink and blue, he'll ship them out this year; he'll put a greeting card with them, and to these young and stirring men—he'll wish them joy and cheer.

John L. Lewis Long Way From Being Through

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — John L. Lewis' present objective is well known to be the creation of a third political party of national proportions. He suggested the idea some time before the last U.S. presidential election, but didn't get around to an attempt to realize them. Probably he hit on the notion too late — hadn't a sufficient interval to get an organization going before Nov. 5. Now he has four years ahead of him, within which to develop his plan.

John L. Lewis

When John promised to quit as C.I.O. head, if Franklin D. Roosevelt were re-elected, some of this pretty faithful followers figured that he'd climbed overly far out on a limb. Today's indications are that he'd calculated very thoughtfully. If Wendell Willkie had won, his limb would have been all right. If it cracked under him, he'd be in a position to land in his third party hanging basket. It isn't altogether certain that he isn't glad it did crack, he's fixed to proceed with the scheme he had in mind all along.

Presumably Lewis' policy will be to build his prospective new party around the framework of Labor's Non-Partisan league. His surrender of his C.I.O. nominal leadership didn't amount to much. It didn't pay any salary. And Philip Murray who succeeds him is supposed to be only his rubber stamp. Phil to be sure didn't adhere to John as to the latter's anti-Roosevelt attitude, and maybe he'll balk on staying by John's anti-Rooseveltianism henceforward. Still it's to be remembered that Phil's a sub-official of the United Mine Workers, of which John continues as president at $25,000 annually.

HE'S FORMIDABLE

JOHN L. LEWIS, be it understood, is a formidable character.

About five years ago, when John was initiating his split-off from the A.F. of L., I had a lot of sympathy with him.

The A.F. of L. is a federation of craft unions. In my particular business the Typographical Union was one of them. I was on the editorial end of the newspaper business. I thought that my bunch ought to be unionized, too. Heaven knows, I was aware that my crew needed to be organized also. But the Typographical Union or the stereotypers or any of the rest of the mechanical outfits didn't care a hoot for us. Their dope was that they were crafts—to heck with us!

John Lewis started off, though, on the theory that everybody in an industry belongs to it.

For instance, he was a mine worker.

Now, mine workers? They're diggers in mines. They likewise are electricians in mines. They're teamsters in mines. They're explosive experts. They're blacksmiths. They're everybody connected with the mining industry. John wanted 'em amalgamated.

He called an industry a total industry—not a group of separate craft industries.

TOTAL UNIONIZATION

THE MERGER becomes more and more necessary, says John L. Lewis, as we condense into mass industry, like the automobile business. What John wants is total, not merely group unionization.

That's where the C.I.O. and the A.F. of L. differ.

Furthermore, the A.F. of L. still wants to keep clear of partisan politics. It's pick candidates, individually, but not partisanly.

The C.I.O. proposes to have candidates of its own—under a new party label.

I mean, under John L. Lewis' label.

It's a mistake to think that, because John L. has done some resigning, he's retiring from his place in the limelight.

A Bit of Nonsense

Irish

"Sure, and what a night it is!" said the Irishman at a party. "It's simply pouring."

"You can't go home in that downpour," remarked the host. "You had better stay the night with us."

The Irishman disappeared and returned some time later, soaking wet.

"Where have you been," asked the host.

"Home for my pyjamas," replied the Irishman.

Useful Man

Sergeant (exasperated): "As far as I'm concerned, you're good for only one thing in rifle practice."

Recruit (hopefully): "What's that?"

Sergeant: "You tremble so much you'd make a fine moving target for the rest of the squad."

Tempered Down

A spinster living in a London suburb was shocked at the language used by two men repairing telegraph wires close to her home. She wrote to the company on the matter, and the foreman was asked to report. This he did in the following way:

"Me and Bill Fairweather were on this job. I was up the telegraph pole, and accidentally let the hot lead fall on Bill. It went down his neck. Then he said: 'You really must be more careful, Harry.'"

MIGHT LOOK

"We have to be careful. How do I know you're not carrying concealed weapons?"

—Humorist.

• Are We On A War Basis Yet?

MR. H. R. McMILLAN, Timber Controller, ranks as a statesman of Canadian industry. For that reason, and because he is connected intimately with the things of which he spoke, a speech he made recently on our war effort deserves study. Mr. McMillan spoke to a conference of lumber manufacturers.

Mr. McMillan, recounts the Ottawa Journal, began with a word to business. Not again would his audience see the kind of country they were brought up in. An economy based on the liquidation of natural resources was a thing of the past. We were in for a long war; one that would take "everything we have got." If we endeavored to fight it on the basis of our pre-existing commercial instincts, we would not get through. Our thought, our effort, must be oriented to a new economy.

Mr. McMillan, with no axe to grind, political or otherwise, thought the Government saw the difficulties ahead, pictured it as trying to get on with the war on the following main principles:

1. Get the required number of young men in uniform and under training.

2. Place orders on behalf of the United Kingdom for war essentials.

3. Arrange for the manufacture in Canada of many things never made before.

In doing these things, or in attempting them, Mr. McMillan urged that certain things must be kept in mind:

1. We must keep the cost level as near the present as possible.

2. No man can be used for two jobs.

3. Most munitions (guns, tanks, etc.) are made from exotic materials. These same materials cannot also be used in motor cars, refrigerators, etc.

4. Unskilled labor as well as skilled labor must be moved on to essential war jobs.

5. Money required to be spent on war cannot be spent on non-essentials such as gasoline, road-building programs, etc.

These things, unquestionably, are true. Yet how many among us realize their truth? How many of us are acting accordingly?

Most of us, unfortunately, are going on in the old pre-war way; carrying on our ordinary affairs; talking and protesting about interference with business; making small distinction between essentials and non-essentials. Except for taxes, plus the men we see in uniform, the war has barely touched us.

Mr. McMillan, at the heart of things, sees this. Says he:

"There will be interference with private business, protests will be useless, each must shape his thinking to the war economy. We must throw overboard non-essential and save essentials. The job cannot be done by Government alone; it must be done by every Canadian as an individual. Key workers will be drafted for the war effort. Every business man should be training second-string men."

Yet Mr. McMillan would have responsibility for more than individuals. Democracy, he said, must have more of leadership; must be led by men with courage to tell it what to do.

Perhaps if Mr. McMillan had more of experience with public life he would realize more clearly the difficulty of this. Yet if leadership of democracy be difficult, especially in peace, it is none the less desirable, and it is especially desirable, if indeed not vital, in war.

In war, Governments, the leaders of democracy, possess knowledge not possessed by the people. They are aware of perils, of difficulties, of opportunities. On the basis of that knowledge it is clearly their duty to give leadership. To point the way.

• Mussolini Mortified and Mad

WHO is the maddest and most mortified man in the world? We do not know for certain, but we should pick Mussolini. The Italian dictator waited many months for the happy moment to enter the war. When France was reeling he saw his chance and took it. Everything looked rosy. France collapsed, and he was able to dictate terms without having had to strike a blow. This business was really too easy. Britain would pass out speedily—there might be a battle or two to add glory to Italian arms—and then there would be nothing to do but share the power and the glory with the Fuehrer. In the future the word blitzkrieg would have a proud place in the Italian dictionary.

Then came disappointment, unexpected and undeserved. Britain refused to be beaten. He was able to take Somaliland and make a song about it but there his successes ended. His invasion forces in Libya were harassed, bombarded and halted in their tracks. The march to the Suez that was to complete the conquest of the Mediterranean stopped a few miles inside the Egyptian border. The British fleet was sweeping his own Mediterranean Sea. It was necessary to do something, to find some region where there could be a krieg with blitz in it. Greece was handy, just across the way, a weak nation that would be meat for his legionaries. He launched his war that was to take but a few triumphant days. And his armies are beaten, broken and routed. Was there ever such mortification for a proud dictator?

It is a mistake to imagine that dictators have not feelings like ordinary men. In many ways they are more sensitive than any. So we can guess what Mussolini feels like when he thinks of what Hitler is thinking. Or when he thinks of what Molotoff is thinking. Or of what his people are thinking. We can be sure that he is mortified, and mad. He will make great efforts to make up for his initial reverses—we would be the last to suggest that the Greek war is ended or that the threat to Egypt has passed—but he can never again pretend to be Adolf's pal on the same terms as before. He has been shown up before all men, including Hitler, Franco, Molotoff and John Metaxas. It must hurt.—Toronto Telegram.

To The Editor

QUESTION

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—In view of the fact that the Board of Health have appointed Dr. L. A. Clarke as Medical Officer of Health only until such time as Dr. Murray Fraser returns from active service, how does the Board of Education justify the appointment of Dr. S. J. Graham as permanent, all-time, school dental officer after granting Dr. J. C. Green, who has held the office of part-time school dental officer since its inception 17 years ago, leave of absence while actively engaged in the Canadian Army Dental Corp.

Yours sincerely,
A TAXPAYER.

TRAINING CAMPS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—So the "trainees" are to have a week-end's pass, coupled with no guard duties, and late passes. They certainly must be Mackenzie King's "chosen." Far more than the lads who got into uniform months ago.

These boys scattered across this wide Dominion must pay their fare home or hitch-hike; in spite of all the petitions that went to Ottawa and the effort of our own member. Great spirit isn't it? Mackenzie King did not hear or wasn't listening when the country called last time, and it's evident he and his colleagues have very little compassion on those who heard and answered this time. Our boys want the breaks now and not when it's too late.

FAIRNESS FOR ALL.

Ed. Note: Those who are called up for military training receive transportation privileges to the camp, but if they desire to go home on a week-end leave they have to finance it themselves or hitch-hike.—Ed. Examiner.

GUILTY

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I notice where City Engineer Parsons had something to say about the number of cars which were parked along streets when the nice big grader was scooping up the snow and shoving it over to the side of the road. He singled out some of the short streets running between Charlotte and King as being places where offenders lived.

I guess I'm guilty, but let's have a word or two. My garage is up a lane at the back of the house and whether I get there or not depends on whether all the other people up that lane have done their shovelling. If I drove in there and got stuck I would have blocked the works for all the people or else I would have been in for more shovelling than I care to undertake.

I know I was in the wrong, but as the boys say at times, "Gee whiz, engineer, can't you see how it was?"

STUCK.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And Jacob said, O God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the Lord which saidst unto me, Return unto they country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee....Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, and the mother with the children...

And Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, Esau came, and with him four hundred men....And Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept.—Gen. 31.

THE EMPRESS

READERS of these notes will perhaps forgive me for claiming a somewhat intimate sorrow when the beautiful Empress of Britain went down as the result of enemy action. I had crossed in her to Canada in August, 1939, and came back on what proved to be her last peace voyage.

To those who love the sea every liner has a personality of her own. The old Mauretania was like a prim maiden lady, and even when she went to be broken up, bereft of all her ornaments, she made the journey with a fine disdain for other craft that looked at her with curious eyes. The Olympic was opulent, self-satisfied and insensitive. The Normandie was Paris at sea, her very decks screened and everything designed to allow Madame to look her best, free from the too searching glare of the unromantic sun. The Queen Mary is as wholesome as a bale of hay, like a fresh-complexioned, buxom woman without a memory or a regret. The Empress of Britain was unlike all the others. She had a strange combination of elegance and sanity. May she find sedate and comforting companionship in the afterworld where dead ships go.—Atticus, in Financial Post.

LINDSAY

3 Women Beaten In Election At Sommerville

LINDSAY, Dec. 4.—(ENS)—Women aspirants for municipal honors fared badly in Monday's municipal elections in Sommerville Township. Mrs (Dr) Millyard, of Coboconk, contested the reeveship and was defeated by Reeve Wilson by a majority of 112 votes The other women candidates for council, Mrs. Shoshenberg and Mrs. Halliday were also defeated. All the members of the retiring council were re-elected.

At Fenelon Falls they had a rather spirited contest. The Hydro purchase bylaw went down to defeat by a ten to one ratio. A. W. Robson, editor of the Fenelon Falls Gazette, defeated A. E. Tiers for the reeveship by a majority of 154. Two new men were elected to the council, the personnel being H. Palmer, W. Gamble, P. Webster, Dr. Graham George Parkin was re-elected reeve of Fenelon Township over W. Worsley. R. J. McAlpine had a close call in his election of Eldon Township, nosing out his opponent, J. I. Alton by only 29 votes. The electors also voted in favor of a two-year term for the council.

Undecided On Fast Time

Lindsay town council is undecided whether to submit the question of daylight saving to the electors in January or take the responsibility of the change on its own shoulders. The bylaw was submitted to council last night, but was held over for a week. It was felt that in case the council for 1940 was elected by acclamation it would be a waste of money to vote on the bylaw. Mayor Claxton pointed out that Lindsay being a centre where war material was being manufactured, the council might be justified in adopting daylight saving.

Lindsay will observe Boxing Day, December 26, this year. The council voted unanimously in favor of its observance. Other municipalities have followed the action taken in Britain relative to the observance of the day. Business will go on as usual this year overseas.

Lindsay town council plans to observe the great festival of Christmas in a truly religious manner and study a plan to place Christmas trees in front of the town hall and hold a tableau depicting the stable scene at Bethlehem when Christ was born. Mayor Claxton said he would like to see the idea carried out. The children of the different Sunday schools could be asked to sing Christmas carols one night before Christmas. The matter was deferred until Monday next.

The Midland Regiment as well as the two local non-permanent units are in a quandry regarding suitable winter quarters. The headquarters of the battalion has been the curling rink and the none-permanent units have been drilling in the skating rink. The Curling Club was taking no action with a view to having the Midlanders seek new quarters, but Ald. Butler, who is a veteran curler, has asked the council if it were possible to have the battalion headquarters moved to the town hall.

Iron Guard In Check

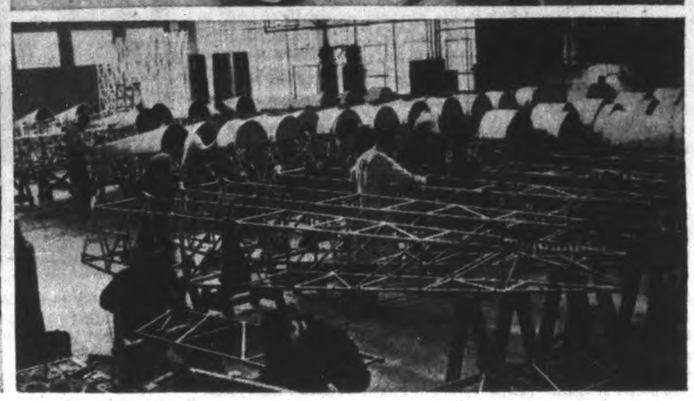
Bucharest, Dec. 4 (AP).

HORIA SIMA, Iron Guard leader, abolished today the Iron Guardist police organization which had played a leading role in the revenge murders of the past week.

He coupled this move to restore order in the turbulent ranks of the Iron Guard with an order for dismissal of those "guilty of false heroism." Rumanians interpreted this latter action as meaning Sima and Premier Ion Antonescu are determined to oust thousands of disreputable members.

These undesirables have been blamed for the present anarchy in Rumania. Comparative quiet prevailed throughout the country today as German troop reinforcements streamed into the country.

Construction Of Training Planes In Canada Now On Mass Production Basis



Construction of deHaviland training planes, used extensively in the preliminary stages of flying instruction under the British Commonwealth training plan, has been put on a mass production basis. Call Internees To Bomb Squads

LONDON, Dec. 4 (CP Cable).—Home Secretary Herbert Morrison told the House of Commons to-day that an administrative officer had gone to Canada to select suitable candidates amongst internees from Britain held there to serve in the pioneer corps, which cleans up bomb wreckage and engaged in salvage work.

In a written reply to Col. Josiah Wedgwood, Labor, the Home Secretary added that the officer, Alexander Paterson one of the commissioners of prisons in England Wales, arrived in Ottawa Nov. 19 and is now visiting the camps.

Col. Wedgwood also asked if Mr. Paterson would try to induce the Canadian government to change the present classification of refugees as prisoners of war.

Mr. Morrison explained that "prisoners of war, class two" was the official wording used in the Canadian defence regulations to describe civilian internees and that therefore it was difficult to alter a description which applied to civilians interned by Canada in addition to those from the United Kiglom.

The Minister said 19,500 aliens are still interned by the United Kingdom. Of these 4,000 are classified as unfriendly and the others are being dealt with as fast as possible. He said skilled workers would have first consideration for release to become part of the national war effort.

Four Boys Are Given Suspended Sentences

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 4. — (ENS). — The four Campbellford boys picked up by police following a series of break-ins in various parts of the town, appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., of Peterborough for sentence on Monday. Three of the boys, under sixteen years of age, had eight charges of breaking and entering against them while the fourth, a seventeen-year-old, had only a charge of entering and theft. The trio which had been working together for several weeks as charged by the police with having entered H. M. Fowlds & Son's office, the town weigh scales, A. J. Meyers' cheese warehouse, W. H. Gibson's confectionery warehouse, J. H. McArthur's butcher store, and Dunk's grocery store. Their career, which was abruptly terminated when they raided a vacant house, doing considerable damage to its woodwork with a small hatchet, was climaxed with their appearance before the Magistrate, who gave each of the four a two-year suspended sentence. Parents of the boys were ordered to make restitution for the damage they had done.

Crown Attorney Harry Deyman of Cobourg prosecuted.

Campbellford Rotary Leads In Attendance

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 4. — (ENS). — Rotarians had reason to be elated at their luncheon held this week. They were told that of all the clubs attending the district meeting in Stirling a week ago theirs had the highest percentage of attendance. With Christmas coming near members discussed among other things the supplying of baskets to the needy. "If there is any need for effort in this direction we should do our part," suggested Rotarian Harold N. Carr, with whom other members agreed.

As a means of keeping up the weekly attendance average the suggestion was made that two of the club should be made responsible for seeing that no member forgets the meeting. The decision was made to donate some five dollar article to Hollywood Theatre manager A. Rappaport for the auction sale he is conducting in the theatre to help the Lord Mayor of London's Fund.

NewAnglo-Spain Deal Brightens

LONDON, Dec. 4 (CP Cable). — The new Anglo-Spanish financial agreement was hailed in London today as a favorable sign that a larger trade pact with that strategically important country might be concluded shortly.

It is understood that progress has been made in the trade negotiations, which have been under way for some time, largely due to Gen. Francisco Franco's personal interest in them.

Under the agreement announced yesterday Spanish funds frozen here will be freed to permit a larger volume of Spanish purchases in the sterling area.

It is emphasized that the agreement is purely economic and that no political clauses or understandings are attached. However, it is obvious that Spain concluded the arrangement fully aware that its benefits would cease were she to throw in her lot with the axis.

A high government leader commented that "Spain wanted butter and the Axis offered only bayonets."

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

LONA WAS like an excited child as she showed Jim about the rooms she had rented for their first home.

"Isn't it perfect?" she asked, when they had come to the tiny kitchen.

"It's great, girl," he agreed. "And you look swell in that apron. Sort of like—home, isn't it?"

The longing in his voice touched her. "Oh, Jim!" she said, and clung to him. "It's so good to be happy."

"You are happy, then, girl?" It almost seemed as if he were reassuring himself.

"Of course I'm happy. I'm so happy I could almost cry. Think of it! No more looking for work, no more boarding houses, no more being lonesome . . . ."

"Maybe you've jumped from the frying pan into the fire." His voice was teasing. "Just wait until you have to get up at six o'clock and get my breakfast. And cook and scrub and make beds, and—what else does a housewife have to do?" He paused, inquiringly. "It's a terrible life, the women all say. . . . From early morn to setting sun, A woman's work is never done'" he chanted triumphantly. "See what you've let yourself in for?"

She laughed as she set out gleaming white dishes on the red and white linen tablecloth. "I'm going to love every minute of it," she proclaimed, confidently.

It was a truly delicious meal. From the steak, sizzling with butter, and oozing juice, to the fragrant steaming coffee that came from the tiny dripolator in a golden stream, everything was perfect. Watching Jim enjoy it, Lona's pride stirred justifiably. She had, she felt, outdone herself.

"This is swell, girl," Jim told her, approvingly, as she pushed back his plate and reached for his pipe. She had it ready for him, together with the evening paper, and she made a great ado of establishing him in the easy chair in the living room while she cleared off the table. He objected at first, insisting upon helping her with the dishes, but she brushed aside his scruples.

"You're spoiling me," he told her, solemnly, pulling her down on his lap for a moment before he let her have her own way. "I'm warning you." But in his kiss she read that he was secretly delighted at her solicitude. She'd keep him that way, she vowed, as she went back to tidy up the tiny kitchen.

She had the place back in exquisite order when the click of Dinah's chair sounded in the hall outside, followed by a tap on the door. A gray-haired, sweet-faced woman, with some of Dinah's own beauty still clinging to her lined face, wheeled the girl into the room, and Lona knew before she had spoken that she was going to like Mrs. Morriss.

"We've come to make sure you're comfortable over here," the woman told her, when introductions had been completed. "If there's anything needed that's not here, you're to tell me, It's the first time we've rented these rooms, you know, and I was a little afraid the equipment might not be adequate."

"It's perfect," Lona assured her. "You're not to worry about us, Mrs. Morriss. We're going to like it here, I feel lucky to find such a place."

"I'm glad you've come." The woman's eyes went to Dinah's bright head and back to Lona. "Dinah, here, has been telling me about you," she offered. "It will make me feel easier to know there's someone in the house when I'm away. Someone she likes having."

"I'm glad Lona will have company, too," Jim said, then, and he and Mrs. Morris looked at each other in sudden understanding that made Lona feel very young; as if she and Dinah were two children who needed to be cared for.

"They talk as if we were a couple of infants," Dinah broke in, laughing impishly in mock disgust.

"You are," Jim shot back at her, and she laughed in earnest. Neither of you are past the spanking age."

"Just you try spanking us!" she bantered, and Lona knew that Jim's swift acceptance of her on an equal footing with Lona, despite her encumbrance, had won her sturdy heart.

"I've been thinking all afternoon about that party we were talking of at lunch," she brought out, then, "Would the evening after next suit you? That would give me two days to raise the crowd on the telephone. There's nothing going on that night, either. It's an open date."

"That would be just right," Lona told her. "And I think it's wonderful of you to go to all this trouble for us. I—appreciate it."

"It's fun." Dinah's blue eyes snapped. "I love having parties. Besides, it isn't any trouble for me. I don't have to work. I just sit here in this chair and do the bossing. Do you dance?" She turned to Jim suddenly.

"Slightly," he admitted. "May I engage the first dance with you now? That is, if you must have dancing!"

Dinah's laugh was a silvery tinkle. "It's nice of you to be so gallant," she told him. "But you can't dance with a wheel chair."

They went on that way for the rest of the visit. As if they had known each other always, Lona thought, as she lay that night in the old-fashioned bed. It pleased her to think that Jim liked Dinah and that Dinah approved of him, a pleasure that amused her when she recalled that this morning she hadn't even known Dinah existed. And now, here she was, lying awake, thrilled because of a party promised her by a stranger.

She was more excited over this party than she had thought it was possible to be, over anything so trivial. It had been so long since she had taken part in any social gathering. Her last real party had been in Bridgewater before the thing that had turned her life awry had happened.

She had been escorted that night by the very man her father had to shoot, she recalled now, with a shudder. It had been a troubled gathering, alive with the undercurrents of what was to come. Dismay took hold of her as she thought back over it. Ought she to be so free with these people here in Brighton? Was it, as she had always felt since those old black days, too dangerous, after all, to have friends?

Oh, but things were different, now, she told herself. Such thoughts were morbid. Nothing dreadful was going to happen to her again. She was done with horror. Listening to Jim's even breathing beside her, she succeeded in pushing back the memories that for a moment had crowded into her mind. Pulling herself again into a pleasant sense of expectation, she finally drifted off to sleep.

She was soon to learn that when Dinah said party she meant just that, The next two days were a

Vanderbilt Pair Will Separate

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 — (AP). — The romance of young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and his auburn-haired wife, the former Manuela Hudson, has ended in a separation of mutual agreement, two and a half years after it began on the sidelines of race tracks, where his cerise and white racing silks fluttered. "It is true—beyond that I have nothing to say," Vanderbilt, one of the wealthiest young men in the United States, said today through a spokesman at his hotel suite several blocks from the Park Avenue Tower hotel suite which his wife is staying.

The rift in the marriage of the boyish-looking millionaire, who, at 28, is president of the Pimlico and Belmont Racing Associations, and his 26-year-old girl who shares his enthusiasm for racing, follows by seven months the collapse of another romance of the turf world—Liz Whitney's marriage to John Hay (Jock) Whitney, amateur steeplechase rider. This ended in a Nevada divorce. Vanderbilt, whose wealth has been estimated at between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 is a great-grandson of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, who founded the family fortune; a grandson of the present Cornelius, and son of the late Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who died when the Lusitania sank in 1915.

Young Alfred's marriage in 1938 to the California girl, daughter of George Hudson, attorney and former Mayor of Monterey, caused a flurry in New York society, which was unaware of the romance. The Vanderbilts have a daughter, Wendy.

KEENE, Dec. 4 — (ENS). — The Y.P.S. met on Sunday evening and was presided over by Ruth Brown during hymn-singing period. The topic "Christianizing the Community" was in charge of Kenneth Murray, who read the scripture lesson and its meaning. A vocal solo, "Just For To-day" was sung by Betty Brown; a reading, "Unto Myself," by Isabel Faux; piano duet by Mrs. Murray and Jean; an interesting reading, "The Community," by Helen Nelson, was followed by discussion with others taking part. A poem, "For The Man at The Front," was read by Ted Gall. Hymns on the topic were sung. The singing of the National Anthem and Benediction ended an enjoyable meeting.

The Sacrement of the Lord's Supper was observed at Keene United Church on December 8, at 10.45 a.m. The preparatory service will be held on Friday, December 6, at 8 p.m.

October Strikes Total Reaches 29

OTTAWA, Dec. 4 (CP)—Twenty-five strikes and lockouts involving 7,609 workers and a loss of 19,830 man working days were recorded in Canada during in October, compared with 10 in September, involving 2,668 workers and a time loss of 6,053 days, according to figures published today in the Labor Gazette.

In October, 1939, 27 disputes involving 6,496 workers and a time loss of 23,724 days were recorded.

Most of the time loss in October, the Labor Gazette said, was occasioned by nine strikes of coal miners in Nova Scotia, and by strikes of shipyard workers in Collingwood, Ont., and Montreal.

Only strikes of importance in September involved silk factory workers in Cornwall, Ont., and embroiderers in dress factories at Montreal.

Certain Fatigue Duties Given Trainees

OTTAWA, Dec. 4—(CP)—Recruits called up for compulsory training are not getting away entirely without fatigue duty in the training centres, it was learned at the Department of National Defence yesterday.

When the training centres started the idea was that the staff would do all the routine work, such as dish-washing, cleaning and sweeping, in order to allow the recruits their entire time for military training.

It was found, however, that the staffs employed were not quite large enough and a certain amount of dish-washing and other fatigue duty is required from the recruits. A duty platoon is set up each day to assist the permanent training centre staff.

As things work out a recruit serves on the duty platoon about one day in his 30-day training period and never more than two days. He doesn't miss any parades by being assigned to the duty platoon but has a little extra work to do which keeps him busy while his comrades may be taking their ease.

Browns Pick Up Two Hurlers For $30,000 Cash

ATLANTA, Dec. 4 — (AP). — Baseball's minor leagues took the stage to-day with official opening of their 39th annual convention, but the majors grabbed the spotlight with the ring of cash on the barrel-head.

The St. Louis Browns, here with advance billing as a club willing to peel its bankroll for player strength, did just that in a surprise move on the eve of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues parley.

Brown President Donald Barnes announced purchase of Fritz Ostermueller and Danny Galehouse, two good journeymen pitchers, from the Boston Red Sox for an unspecified sum in cash, and indicated the club also was interested in a "dependable catcher."

Unofficial figures put the probable price for Ostermueller and Galehouse at $30,000. Ostermueller last season was credited with five wins and nine defeats, while Galehouse won six and dropped six.

Mack Trades One.

Meanwhile Connie Mack acquired a promising Southern League pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics in a straight swap with the Atlanta Crackers, the lanky patriarch gave Ed. Heusser, a right-handed submarine baller, for Atlanta's Luman Harris. One of the Crackers' mainstays last season, Harris won 17 and lost eight. Heussel was a disappointment with the A's, winning six and losing 13. Cracker Manager Paul Richards, however, was optimistic regarding Heusser, recalling he won 19 and lost seven for Memphis in 1939.

There were recurrent but unconfirmed reports that the southern champion Nashville Vols were negotiating for sale of Boots Poffenberger, a 26-game winner last season in the Southern Association after a spectacular washout with the Brooklyn Dodgers. Similar speculation centred on conferences between newly-appointed General Manager Jim Gallagher of Chicago Cubs and Larry Macphail, president of the Dodgers. Rumor tagged Brooklyn's pitcher Luke Hamlin likely to go to the Cubs in exchange for an outfielder, possibly Augie Galan and Jim Gleeson. Gallagher and Macphail, however, depreciated talk of the deal.

Parshall, with 54 winning heats, piled up 962 points on a point-scoring system awarding 10 points for a winning heat or dash, 6 for second, 3 for third, and 1 for fourth. In 1939 he compiled 1,125 points to finish first.

Headaches are often connected with upset stomach, with colds, or over-indulgence of some kind. You need something to ease the ache quickly. But you want to correct the cause of the trouble too. That's why we recommend Alka-Seltzer . . . because it's a double-acting remedy, and also because it's so pleasant to take.

Two-way Relief

Alka-Seltzer is two remedies combined in one. One ingredient is what is known to science as an analgesic. It eases pain . . . quickly — whether the pain be a headache, neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatic or other pains. The second ingredient helps to correct excess acidity and to restore the alkaline balance of the system.

Alka-Seltzer tablets effervesce as they dissolve in water, very refreshing to drink. Not a laxative. Try Alka-Seltzer today. 30c and 60c at drug stores.

Thurier Adds 5 To Lead League With 26

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 4 — (AP).— The high-powered forward line of Springfield Indians blasted furious new assaults against the net-minders of the American Hockey League during the past week, with result that Fred Thurier, Fred Hunt and Glenn Brydson were more firmly entrenched than ever in the loop's top three scoring positions.

Thurier, leading the league since early season, gained five points during the week to bring his total to 26, while Hunt added four points for an aggregate of 23. Brydson was in third place with 16.

Les Cunningham of Cleveland Barons and Lloyd Roubell of Pittsburg Hornets, the first Western Division representatives to crash the scoring column, were tied with 15 points, and Bobby Kirk of Hershey Bears was next with 14.

Veteran Jockey Dies In Toronto

TORONTO, Dec. 4—Harry Watts, popular Toronto jockey during the days of the first Great War, dropped dead at his home on Woodbine Avenue yesterday. Watts rode Tartarean, King's plate winner in 1916, and was well known in racing circles throughout Canada and the United States. He was in his forty-seventh year.

Born in Toronto, son of an ardent horseman, Watts had a natural love for horses and exercised the animals at Woodbine track while still a youngster. In 1916 he was up on Tartarean, who won the coveted Canadian racing classic for the late Charles Millar. Millar sprang into prominence in later years through the "Millar Will Derby," which eventually brought fortunes to four Toronto mothers.

Mr. Watts retired from racing in 1920 and built a butcher shop on Woodbine Avenue in East York, where he has lived and worked ever since. He never went near a race track from the day he retired until this summer, when he spent an afternoon at Long Branch.

Watts had been suffering from a heart ailment in recent years and had been advised to retire from business. However, he remained active right up until the day of his death and served customers in his butcher shop on Monday afternoon.

Mr. Watts is survived by his widow; two sons, William and Urban, and a daughter, Jessie. He has also two brothers and a sister. One of his brothers, Dick, is training a racing stable in California.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The Peterborough senior B squad will have a new coach this season in the person of Jim Ellis, defence player of last season's intermediate A champs. Frank Buckland, 1939-40 coach, announced at the meeting of the club executive last night that he would be unable to spare the time necessary for the job this campaign. He suggested Ellis as his successor and players and executive greeted the idea with approval. Accordingly it was decided that Buckland should interview his prospective successor and secure his consent to taking on the task of guiding the Petes' squad this season. Frank promised to render whatever assistance he could to the new coach. The meeting expressed itself as in favor of a double schedule in the five-club group with a two-team playoff and Frank Buckland, Bun Kingdon, Fred Scates and Lorie Mitchell were named as delegates to the schedule meeting.

* * * * * *

It was announced during the meeting that cash donations had already been received from Alex Elliott, M.L.A., J. P. Bond, W. B. Gordon, Peck, Kerr, McElderry and Borbridge, J. J. Turner and Sons, the Hotel Champlain, Harold Morrow, Johnston Motors, Peterborough Lumber Company, Sid. Goldstone, and C. S. Cummer. Letters have been sent out to many firms and individuals and it is hoped that there will be a liberal response as expenses will be heavier this season with long trips to Kingston and Whitby added to the itinerary. The club, it should be understood, is not raising any money this season by the sale of programs or other advertising and is depending upon the support of citizens who feel that a good hockey club is a fine advertisment for Peterborough and in every way worthy of support.

The choice of Johnny Mervin as manager of the Peterborough junior squad was approved by last night's meeting. The new manager and Coach Archie Weir were appointed as delegates to the group schedule meeting which is to be held in Oshawa. Lindsay and Oshawa Bees are the other clubs in the group and the Peterborough club intends to press for a triple schedule, thus ensuring six home games. Coach Weir will have to dig up some new material this season, owing to the graduation of a number of last year's squad but several new players are in the offing including McGregor who played hockey in Ottawa last season and is now a member of the staff of the army training camp at the Exhibition grounds. McGregor will likely play with the military team in the Trent Valley League but that will not prevent him from turning out with the junior O.H.A. squad.

Vitarelli Is Sizzling

According to the Baltimore papers Managers Pick Hines of the Orioles is looking to Ned Vitarelli to take Bill Calladine's place this season as top scorer for the Baltimore Eastern League club. The Peterborough youngster is certainly living up to expectations so far, for since getting back into the game after being out with injuries he has been hot, sizzling, in fact. The other night out of five goals scored by Baltimore against Washington, Ned scored two and assisted in two more.

* * * * * *

Here are some nice things one of the Baltimore sheets has to say of Vitarelli as a result of that stellar display: "While there's no getting away from the fact that it is nice to have big men around on any ice hockey squad, Ned Vitarelli, the dynamic little wingman of the Orioles, is proving that size isn't everything. A 150-pounder, Vitarelli, the smiling lad from Peterborough Ont., buzzed around the Washington Eagles at Iceland last night like a bee among a herd of bulls and he generated the big punch that resulted in the Eagles' second defeat of the young season. Ned turned in the remarkable feat of figuring in four fo the five goals that Pick Hines' skaters put together to trim the enemy, 5-4, in the best hockey game served up here thus far this season. The blackhaired winger assisted Spike Wychnenka on the first tally, scored the second with the aid of Wychnenka and Chick Webster, assisted Spike on the third and scored the fourth. The last Oriole goal was tallied when Vit was out of the game or he'd likely have been in on that one too."

* * * * * *

"For a fellow lacking stature and slight of frame, Vitarelli does outstanding work against big men, and Washington has just about the bulkiest set of skaters in the Eastern League," continues the article. "Coach Pick Hines looks for Vitarelli to take Norman Calladine's place as the big scorer of the Birds this season. That's a big order, since Calladine, now with the Philadelphia Ramblers, broke the league scoring record here last season. The rapid-fire scoring generally was a tribute to the Birds' first line, for Wychnenka and Webster fit into the scheme with Vitarelli as though these lads had been playing together for some time. The line already is one of the most feared in the league."

May Be Break For Petes

If Johnny Godfrey can stage a comeback this winter after his serious illness during the past summer the Peterborough senior B squad will have the benefit of the services of a defence player who although only 22 years old now has had a lot of hockey experience. Godfrey played with the New York Rovers in the Eastern Hockey League last season and before that was on the defence of the Sudbury team that won the world's championship in Europe. He started his career with Ed Wildey's Young Rangers and has played with other clubs. Late this summer the former Rover underwent a serious operations in St. Joseph's Hospital here and for some time was in a critical condition, but he has put on 46 pounds since then and hopes to be able to get into the game with the Petes this season.

Boston Bruins who gave Amerks a 10 to 3 lacing Sunday night picked up where they left off last night and handed Red Dutton's unlucky gang a 6 to 2 setback. It was the first win at home for Dit Clapper and his pals and sent the Bruins up into third place. Boston, after some unsteady going, seem to be on their way. Incidentally Bill Cowley, centre ice star has served notice on the N.H.L. that he has serious designs on the scoring honors. Mister Cowley who bagged six points in Sunday night's game garnered three more last night, with two goals and an assist, giving him a total of nine points in two consecutive games which is piling them up with a vengeance. Cowley is now all alone in first place in the scoring list with a three-point lead over Bryan Hextall of the New York Rangers.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Coach Ross Trimble of the Ottawa Rough Riders is worrying about injured players. Probably most of the casualties will be in action Saturday however....Twenty-two goals have been fired past Earl Robertson in three games. He does not look like a good bet for the Vezina trophy....Sportsmen here will be glad to learn that P. J. Mulqueen, president of the Canadian Olympic committee is considered out of danger....Squee Allen, one of the Amerks' rookies is out of action with an eye injury....Boston Red Sox are selling pitchers. That is surely one for the book.

Thanks Soccer For His Good Legs

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—(CP)—The most talked of legs off the musical stage belong to Jimmy Wilson, aged 42, recently named manager of the Chicago Cubs—and he thinks soccer did the trick.

Wilson's legs broke into the news when it became apparent that the Cincinnati Reds would have to pin their World Series hopes on the veteran coach's underpinnings.

Taped from ankles to thighs, the aging legs carried him through the whole series. He even chalked up a stolen base in one game. Now soccer fans—and Jimmy says he thinks so, too—say that the major league soccer Jimmy used to play for the Eries contributed much to the good condition of his legs throughout his baseball playing career.

Henry Armstrong Awarded Edward J. Neil Trophy

NEW YORK, Dec. 4—(AP).—For his contributions in boxing, in losing as well as winning, Henry Armstrong yesterday was awarded the Edward J. Neil Memorial Trophy, which annually honors the memory of The Associated Press boxing writer and war correspondent, who was killed in Spain.

In naming Armstrong unanimously, the Boxing Writers' Association of New York considered his gallant showing in losing his welterweight championship to Fritzie Zivic two months ago as much as the fact he is the only ringman in fistic history to hold three world titles simultaneously.

Follows Dempsey, Conn

The third annual award of this plaque will be made at the writers' annual dinner, Jan. 9. Armstrong follows Jack Dempsey and Billy Conn as winners of the award, which goes to "the man who has done the most for boxing" each year.

The writers also named their selections as the leading challengers in all fistic divisions, Conn and Max Baer were voted a tie as the outstanding contenders for Joe Louis' crown, with Red Burman of Baltimore third.

Murray Lewin of the New York Daily Mirror was elected president of the associations, succeeding James Dawson of The New York Times.

Only two other fighters, Louis and Baer, received consideration with Armstrong for the award.

Armstrong returns to the fistic wars January 17 to meet Zivic in Madison Square Garden in an attempt to regain his welterweight crown. He lost a one-sided 15-round decision to the Pittsburger October 4, but finished on his feet, and, at the final bell, with both eyes punched closed so that he couldn't see his rival, he was still on the aggressive, moving forward blindly and throwing punches.

Triple Title-Holder.

"Hennery the Hammer" began his pugilistic rise in 1937 when he knocked out Petey Sarron to win undisputed possession of the world featherweight championship. By March of 1938, he had piled up a record of thirty-eight straight victories, thirty-six of them by knockouts. Then he took the welterweight championship from Barney Ross and the lightweight title from Lou Ambers to complete his unprecedented triple. Afterward, he relinquished the featherweight title and lost the lightweight crown to Ambers in a close, disputed decision.

The boxing writers voted the following lists as their rankings of champions and three outstanding challengers in order for each division:

Heavyweight — Champion, Joe Louis; challengers, Billy Conn, of Pittsburg, and Max Baer, Sacramento, Calif. (tied) and Red Burman, Baltimore.

Light-heavyweight — Champion, Conn; challengers, Jimmy Webb, Fort Worth, Texas; Tommy Tucker, New York; Melio Bettina, Beacon, New York.

Middleweight — Champion, Ken Overlin, Norfolk, Va.; challengers, Steve Belloise, New York, Tony Zale, Chicago, Billy Soose, Farrell, Pa.

Welterweight— Champion, Fritzie Zivic, Pittsburg; challengers, Henry Armstrong, Los Angeles, Lou Ambers, Herkimer, N.Y., Mike Kaplan, Boston.

Lightweight — Champion, Lew Jenkins, Sweetwater, Tex.; challengers, Sammy Angott, Louisville, Dave Castilloux, Montreal, Aldo Spoldi, Italy.

Featherweight—Champion, Harry Jeffra, Baltimore; challengers, Petey Scalzo, New York, Chalky Wright, Los Angeles, Bill Speary, Nanticoke, Pa.

Bantamweight — Champion, Lou Salica, New York; challengers, Tommy Forte, Philadelphia, Tony Olivera, Los Angels, Kui King Young, Hawaii.

Army Ski School Now In Full Swing

OTTAWA, Dec. 5.—(CP)—Canada's first military ski school is in full swing here at Lansdowne Park.

Skiers, selected from units and training centres across the country started training yesterday for service as ski instructors with their own units when they complete the course here.

Many of the officers and non-commissioned officers assigned to the school brought their own skis and their first workout at the school was on the football field on which Balmy Beach and Ottawa will meet next Saturday in the Eastern Canada final.

The men attending the school are already skilled skiers. The object of the training is to teach them how to carry out military duties and operations on skis.

The battle dress uniform, worn by all Canadian soldiers is ideal for skiing, some of the men stated. Later on, it is expected a light white covering will be worn over the uniform to make the men less conspicuous in the snow.

Lieut. T. P. Gilday of the Canadian Guards, Montreal, is chief instructor and in the school are men who saw service with ski troops of Scandinavian countries.

One of these is Cpl. R. K. Heise, of the Victoria Rifles, Montreal, who fought for Finland against the Russians and fought the Germans at Narvik in Northern Norway. In the Finnish war Cpl. Heise made a 200-mile trip on skis.

Sapper I. L. Eivemark of the Royal Canadian Engineers is another who served on skis in Northern Europe.

Jopling, Crowe Eligible To Play Here

Preliminary plans for what is hoped to be an unusually successful hockey season were completed last night when the executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club met in the Chamber of Commerce with President R. M. Glover in the chair and a good attendance of executive and players.

Frank Buckland, last year's coach, who has been appointed again for this season announced that he would not have the time to devote to the job this winter and suggested that Jim Ellis be asked to take over the position. He was authorized by the meeting to consult Ellis who was approved of by both executive members and players.

It was decided to order new stockings for both senior and junior teams and half a dozen new sweaters will be needed as replacements. Otherwise the club is in good shape as regards equipment. The meeting decided that all equipment needed during the season will be purchased through Bun Kingdon who will issue the orders for what is needed.

President Glover announced that he had taken the case of Drake Jopling and Don Crowe up with Secretary Hewitt of the O.H.A. and those players had been ruled eligible to play with Peterborough this winter.

Bun Kingdon, Fred Scates, Frank Buckland and Lorie Mitchell were named as delegates to the Senior B schedule meeting at Belleville and Coach Archie Weir and Manager Johnny Mervin authorized to attend the junior schedule session at Oshawa. President Glover read a list of firms and individuals who have made donations to the funds of the club this winter. These names are listed in another column.

Among those present at the meeting was Johnny Godfrey, former defence star of the New York Rovers. Godfrey, who has been here most of the summer and was seriously ill for some time, will endeavor to stage a comeback.

GUELPH ELIMINATES OSHAWA GENERALS IN THE S. P. A. TOURNEY

Holota Sparks Guelph To 4-2 Victory

TORONTO, Dec. 4. — Guelph Bilmores tasted the sweet morsel of revenge last night, atoning for countless defeats in the past against Oshawa Geenrals, by sweeping the Dominion junior hockey monarchs out of the S.P.A. Junior A Trophy competition with a 4-2 victory at the Gardens last night. According to Guelph officials, it was the first time the Royal City representatives had gained victory over Tracy Shaw's charges since gaining admittance to Ontario's major junior hockey circle, and it catapulted Tommy Ivanoff's youngsters into the final against Toronto Marlboros. The titular test will be played at the Gardens on Saturday afternoon.

Johnny Holota, stickhandling centre wizard, paced his inspired mates to their precedent-shattering success. Holota scored three goals and his all-round play was the highmark of the combat. Gregg scored the other Guelph counter. Red White and Ron Wilson were the Oshawa marksmen, both goals coming in a belated but futile third-period spurt.

Holota collected the only goal of the first period on a neatly executed solo effort in the third minute of action. Throughout the stanza, both teams dished up fast action and only capable net-minding by Neath and Shad kept the count to 1-0.

Tony Licari, who patrolled right wing in efficient fashion, perpetrated the manoeuvre that gave Holota the opening for Guelph's second goal at the 3.16 mark in the second period. A penalty to Fritz Fraser, Oshawa defenceman, led to the third Guelph goal, Gregg scoring unassisted at 9.07.

Oshawa's determined thrusts in the third period were frustrated by alert covering and brilliant goaling by Percy Neath, and it wasn't until past the midway mark in the stanza that Red White produced the first goal for the Dominion champions. He converted a neat three-way play with Ron Wilson and Ken McNaught.

That success was nullified three minutes later by a penalty to Frankie Eddolls, Oshawa defense stalwart. While Eddolls sat out for two minutes, Holota took Licari's relay to beat Billy Hainsworth, who guarded the Oshawa net in the third period. Ron Wilson converted White's pass for the final goal at 16.16.

Neath, Martin, Gregg, Holota, Licari, Allan and Wheeler stood out for Guelph. Jim Conacher, Eddolls, Ron and Wally Wilson were best for Oshawa. Jake Dunster, Oshawa defenseman, was an early casualty, suffering a gashed nose in the first few minutes of play.

Hockey's Big Seven

By The Canadian Press

Bill Cowley of Boston Bruins continued his point-gathering spree against New York Americans last night, climbing into first place alone in the National Hockey League's Big Seven by picking up two goals and an assist in Boston's 6-2 victory. Two other Bruins moved into a tie for the last berth, Eddie Wiseman by bagging an assist and Roy Conacher with a goal and an assist. Bryan Hextall, New York Rangers, slipped from a first place tie with Cowley into second position and Detroit's Syd Howe remained tied for third with Phil Watson of Rangers as no other games were played. The leaders:

Howe, Detroit	4	7	11
Watson, Rangers	3	8	11

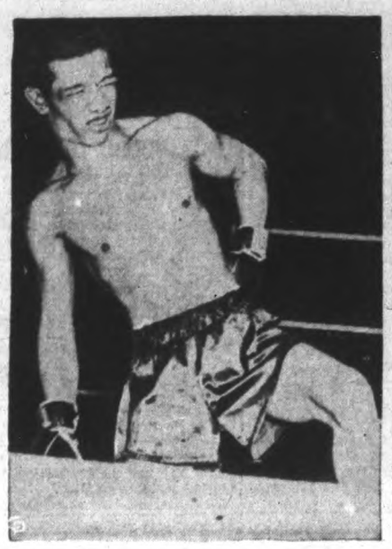
Salica Wins From Montana On Technical K.O. In Third



Obviously hurt, Small Montana is shown struggling to his feet, LEFT, after one of the 10 knockdowns he received at the hands of Bantamweight Champ Lou Salica in their title bout at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens. Referee Billy Burke stepped in and stopped the fight in the third round following Montana's 10th trip to the canvas. A mere shell of his former self, the former world's flyweight champ was in bad shape early in the first round after Salica had hit him with a murderous right hand to a vulnerable spot in the challenger's left side. The victorious champ is shown, RIGHT, shaking hands with Montana as his handlers work over him.

Boston Bruins Whip Amerks In 6 to 2 Fracas

By JACK MITCHELL
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

It will take a few more games for perspective, but right now the Boston Bruin powerhouse—after working at half speed since the start of this National Hockey League season—finally appears to be generating fully from every turbine.

The Bruins, now only one point out of second place, have fired a total of 16 goals to almost double their former output in winning their last two starts. It is true both were against New York Americans, but a sprightly lot of Americans that, though crippled, no longer work for Manager Red Dutton as the old men of Manhattan.

For those who watch the shadows for coming events, it may be not amiss to remember that the Bruins now occupy almost exactly the same spot as at this time last season before a drive carried them to the league championship. There always has been something about Manager Art Ross' clubs, perhaps the sheer power, that makes them slow on the getaway.

The power with all its trimmings was there in full force as Bruins walloped the Americans 6-2 in Boston last night to follow up a 10-3 victory over Dutton's troupe Sunday. It was the only league match and the result lifted the Bruins from fourth to third place, one point behind Detroit Red Wings.

Cowley Paces Them

Pacing the attack again was Bill Cowley, veteran Boston centre, who picked up six scoring points in the first meeting. Cowley contributed two goals and an assist to the Bruins cause, and incidently increased his personal point total to 15 to hold first place alone among the league's individual scorers.

The other four Boston goals were divided evenly among as many players, with Defenceman Jack Shewchuck getting his first of the season and Roy Conacher, Woody Dumart and Bill (Flash) Hollett bagging the others. Both Americans' counters came in the final frame with Lorne Carr and Rookie Norm Larson getting them.

The Americans, with three players already out of the lineup through injuries, lost another in the game. It was the 22-year-old rookie left winger, Vivian (Squee) Allen of Saskatoon, who suffered a hemorrhage in his right eye when cut by a hockey stick. He was ordered to remain in hospital for further examination.

Curlers Expect Good Year; Rinks Drawn

Peterborough curlers cleared the decks last night for what promises to be a most successful season when the winter meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club was held in the club rooms, Charlotte Street.

The chief order of business was drawing up the rinks for the season's play. It was found that the membership of the club is complete and rinks numbering within two of last year's total were arranged. A large number of new members have joined the club.

President T. A. Mackay was in the chair for the enthusiastic meeting.

In respect to the memory of three curlers who have passed on since last season, the members stood for a period of silence as a tribute to George Cairns, A. B. Gates and Frank Voyer.

Ray P. Best, the club's representative at the annual meeting of the Ontario Curling Association, gave a report of the proceedings, stressing the fact that the various clubs in the association had been unanimous in their decision to carry on in spite of the war.

D. B. Carlisle, chairman of the membership committee, reported on the activities of that body and stated that many applications for membership had been received.

Two new executive members were elected, J. E. Thomas replacing the late George Cairns, while Charles Westbrook was elected to fill the gap caused by the resignation of E. L. Sackville.

It was reported that if the cold weather continued it would be possible to commence the schedule games next Monday night.

As Connie Mack would say, "Goodness me!"...Billy Meyer, who would have had the Cub job if Jimmy Wilson had turned it down, is expected to take up where he left off at Kansas City.

Gabe Kaufman, Kansas City promoter who has been promised Joe Louis for a February fight, will try something new. Hextall, Cowley Leading NHL Marksmen

MONTREAL, Dec. 4—(CP).—Bill Cowley's six-point scoring spree as Boston Bruins whipped Americans Sunday night carried the starry Bruin centre into a first-place tie with Bryan Hextall of New York Rangers in the National Hockey League scoring race, according to official statistics released last night.

In that one game, Cowley doubled his point-total to go into the top-spot tie with 12 points on three goals and nine assists. Hextall moved up from a third-place tie with five points during the week.

Last week's leader, Detroit's Syd Hows, dropped into a second place tie with Phil Watson of Rangers, a point behind the leaders. Three Toronto Maple Leafs were grouped in third spot with 10 points each. They were Hank Goldup, Gordie Drillon and Syl Apps.

Goldup held the leadership in goals, with seven, after his four-goal splurge against Americans Saturday night, while Cowley led the league in assists with nine.

The official records made Jimmy Orlando of Detroit the league's bad man with 18 minutes in the penalty box. Unofficial tabulations that included misconduct penalties, gave Red Goupille of Canadiens the edge, however, with 12 minutes in minors and a 10-minute misconduct for a 22-minute total.

Vitt Asks Indians For $2,500 Bonus

CLEVELAND, Dec. 4. — (AP)—Cleveland Indians of the American Baseball League disclosed today Oscar Vitt is asking the club for $2,500, claimed due under the attendance clause in the former manager's bonus contract.

"Oscar thinks we owe him $2,500 and I'm sure we don't," said President Alva Bradley. "I've suggested that he ask Commissioner Landis for a ruling. If he doesn't I'll probably do so myself."

Bradley said the difficulty hinged on interpretation of a supplemental mid-season agreement. Oscar was generally believed to have received $17,500 for the last campaign. Replaced for next year by Roger Peckinpaugh, Vitt recently signed to manage the Portland, Ore., club.

It could happen only in Hollywood, but it has happened. Now its the strip-tease picket. ABOVE photo shows Gerta Rozan, actress, who once refused to dance for Hitler, taking her stand at the studio doorway removing the coat of her red and black suit. "Tomorrow," she said, "will come the skirt. If they keep on snipping, I keep on stripping," she said, after discovering, as the result of a sneak preview, that her role had been left on the cutting room floor. The dispute was settled after Gerta had removed her slip.

Press Acclaims Step Down By Jos. Kennedy

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—(CP)—The New York Herald Tribune, commenting editorially on Joseph P. Kennedy's resignation as United States ambassador to Great Britain, said yesterday "A vast number of Americans...are going to breathe more easily."

The New York Times, while commending Kennedy for much of his work in London, also was critical of the ambassador who announced Monday night he had submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt Nov. 6 It said: "Unguarded talk was always one of the defects of his qualities in London; another was a reliance upon 'hunches' rather than cool analysis."

The Herald Tribune said:

"The one important issue in the United States today is between those who believe that even war may be a lesser evil for American democracy than a supine surrender of our last democratic allies to Hitlerian world empire and those who believe that war of any sort would be so destructive that in the last analysis they would give up the fort and make peace with Hitler rather than risk it.

"Mr. Kennedy, already suspected of belonging to the second party, deftly evades the issue; tries to clothe his uncertain position with the advantages of both sides, and then inexcusably associates the president with an attitude which is only that of Mr. Kennedy..."

He wished that Canadians could hear the kind of challenging economic, social and political aims which Britain's leaders were voicing.

J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata), urged a return to responsible government. A small group of cabinet ministers thought the war was their exclusive prerogative.

There was too much hypocrisy about patronage, he claimed, when certain cabinet ministers were bringing in a crowd of their business associates.

premature rejoicings last March when the yards were acquired by the Roy M. Wolvin interests of Montreal. Contracts failed to materialize, however, and in July a petition was sent to Hon. C. D. Howe, Supply Minister, begging that the services of the yards be utilized The Town Council later called on the Government to expropriate the properties, claiming that the new owners were not satisfied to operate on the margin of profit available on Government contracts.

The Council decided in July to give notice that the company would no longer have a fixed assessment after January 1, 1941, but would be obliged to pay all municipal taxes.

Italians.

The high command's communique on action at the opposite end of the battlefront—in the push toward Elbasani—said only:

"In the Pogradetz region, we captured new heights after fierce fighting. Prisoners were taken, and automatic weapons, howitzers, and three guns fell into our hands."

The spokesman, describing operations in that sector, declared the Greek right wing pushed forward despite snow and bad weather northwest of Moskopolis, dislodging Italains from heights there.

40 Miles From Elbasani.

(Dispatches from the Yugoslav frontier indicated the Greeks had reached the Devol valley northwest of Moskopolis, which would put them within 40 miles of Elbasani.

(Reports from the same sources last night said another column had driven Italian Bersaglieri troops from Mumulishta, just north of Pogradetz, which woud put this drive within 45 miles of Elbasani by road).

In the centre of th battlefront, near Premet, the Greeks were reported to have cut to pieces one of Italy's picked companies, and then caputred two officers and "what was left" of the company.

The spokesman said Greeks on this front also seized the plateau of Platovouni, crushing "strong enemy resistance."

Greek communiques said civilians were killed in Italian bombings at Prevenna, Philiatra, and the Island of Levkas, and that Greek planes "successfully bombed columns and storehouses behind the enemy lines."

(A Reuter's news agency dispatch from London quoted the Athens radio as saying 604 persons had been killed and 8,070 wounded in Italian raids on "undefended" towns and villages in the first month of the Greek-Italian conflict.)

WINNIPEG WHEAT

WINNIPEG, Dec. 4 — (CP). — Wheat futures moved with narrow limits yesterday on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. At the close the values were ⅛ higher to ⅛ cent lower.

It was a day of routine trade with little buying by mills and locals, and some light spreading operations. Offerings continued light, and there were no reports of export trade. Buenos Aires was unchanged.

In the cash wheat market shippers took small lots of No. 1 Northern, while mills were in the pit for No. 2 Northern and the lower grades. Offerings, however, were limited and sales light. Spreads generally were unchanged.

Coarse grains showed little activity. Mills and maltsters were in the market for oats and barley, but trade in flax and rye were quiet, with a small volume changing hands.

Price changes in coarse grains were narrow, with values slightly firmer.

Yesterday's Quotations.

wound up. Two amendments were lost. One, proposed by Conservative House Leader Hanson, was defeated on a straight vote between the Liberals and all opposition groups, 140-51. The other, proposed by John Blackmore, leader of the New Democracy group, was supported only by that group and the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, 174-18.

Financial Resolutions

The House today turns from the omnibus debate on the throne speech to the two vital finance resolutions introduced Monday by Finance Minister Ilsley. It is believed debate on these measures can be completed in time for Christmas adjournment by Friday.

Last night the senate met briefly before adjourning to 5 p.m. today when government Leader Dandurand suggested bills on tax and tariff changes might have been sent to the senate by the House. It was the senate's first meeting since Nov. 15.

Senator C. E. Tanner (Con. Nova Scotia) urged that wooden cargo vessels should be built in Canada to carry foodstuffs and war materials from the Dominion to Britain.

Yesterday's loose debate in the Commons was featured by a series of exchanges between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Conservative House Leader, by renewed demands for a parliamentary investigation of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and by a sharp clash between J. S. Roy, Independent Conservative member for Gaspe, and Justice Minister Lapointe.

Probe of the CBC Needed

M. J. Coldwell, acting C.C.F. House leader, asserted that an investigation of CBC affairs was necessitated by charges of "irregularities" and serious internal conditions made by Alan Plaunt on his recent resignation from the CBC board of governors.

There were the resignations of two responsible CBC officials for somewhat similar reasons. There were the grave charges of Jean-Charles Harvey, editor of Le Jour, Montreal, that certain CBC officials were "enemies of the democratic ideal" and would not be displeased by a British defeat.

"Why is the government silent on the matter?" asked Mr. Coldwell. "Why does the board of governors remain ready to allow such a condition to continue.

"This is a great public service and to my mind it is dangerous to rely upon a chairman who is head of a St. James street trust (Rene Morin, chairman of Trust General Du Canada, Montreal) and a vice-chairman who is a key figure in the Canadian movie industry, which in a sense is a competing industry which, largely under the guidance of this vice-chairman (N. L. Nathanson, chairman Famous Players Corporation), has become one of our great Canadian monopolies.

Big Business in Control?

"Is this another example of big business controlling what has been called by an American author the opinion industry?"

In a fiery speech, Mr. Roy tried ot move an amendment to the throne speech resolution, to the effect that the government had asked, and been given, a mandate for only moderate participation in the war—as evidenced by the speeches of Quebec members of the cabinet prior to the election. Those speeches, compared to those of other members of the government in other parts of the country, indicated a shameless opportunism" on the part of the government.

Mr. Roy's proposed motion died when he failed to obtain a seconder, for which Mr. Lapointe congratulated the House. The Minister of Justice denounced the new member as a contributor to disunity.

Quebec Solidly in Line

"He well knows that Quebec has never been as united as she is today," Mr. Lapointe said. "Quebec is solidly with the effort of Canada in this conflict and we are going to stay solidly behind that effort—no matter what may be the sniping campaign of those disgruntled politicians who try to divide a united country."

The only people in Quebec who were opposed to the war work of the government were communists, he said. There might be others but they were afraid to express their views.

He added that Mr. Roy was elected by "an unfortunate accident," when two strong liberals opposed him.

Starting off the day, Mr. Hanson criticized the reports by nine cabinet ministers on the war effort for their failure to adopt a "more realistic attitude."

He clashed with the Prime Minister when he suggested there was a feeling in England that Canada was trying to make money out of the war.

That, Mr. King declared, was a libel on the people of Canada, on its producers and manufacturers. It was unfair to the people of England and doubly unfair to the people of Canada and the only person he had ever heard suggest such a thing was Mr. Hanson himself.

Hanson's Idea Accepted.

Mr. Hanson, who three weeks ago proposed appointment of standing committees on military and war supply matters, yesterday urged the Government to name a special committee to review the Government's war expenditures currently.

This proposal, which was accepted by the Prime Minister, had been discussed at a private meeting between the two Leaders and a handful of their colleagues after the original proposal was made by the Conservative Leader, it was disclosed "no approach to the subject could have been more helpful" than that of Mr. Hanson and his associates, the Prime Minister said.

Because of the necessity of secrecy, Mr. King said he hesitated to agree to appointment of two standing committees as originally suggested. However, he believed a select committee as suggested by Mr. Hanson and similar to a committee operating at Westminster would be beneficial.

When Parliament reconvened in February, after the Christmas adjournment, the Prime Minister said he would introduce a motion identical with the one used in forming the British committee.

The Prime Minister said the time had come when every Canadian should examine his or her own conscience to determine what service could best be rendered. Some could assist by saving, some by lending, others by working in various avenues.

"The time has come when it is for every man and every woman to ask himself and herself, 'How can I best serve in this great crisis, how can I serve my country and how can I serve humanity itself?' Because it is the existence of civilization as we understand it that is at stake at this time."

Mr. Coldwell urged the Govern-

IN NEW QUARTERS.

The Household Finance Corporation has moved into new offices on the second floor of the Lansfield Block, 177 Charlotte Street, it was announced to-day.

SPOKE AT LAKEFIELD.

As a variation of the subjects at the agricultural short course at Lakefield, Ed Butler spoke to the young people Tuesday afternoon on the ideals and purposes of the Chamber of Agriculture.

FOR THE NAVY LEAGUE

Chief Constable Newhall said members of the police department and court officials are making donations to the Navy league of Canada. Other citizens who are interested in this cause may leave their subscriptions at the police station.

SUFFERED ACCIDENT.

Two items were sent on to the Legal Committee from the council Monday night. One was a notice of a damage claim by Mrs. Blake McNaughton, who fell on the west side of Park Street, north of Romaine, on November 26. The other was a Kitchener resolution proposing appointment of three persons to assist workers in getting justice under the Minimum Wage Act for girls.

A HEADACHE REMOVED.

Several managers of local stores had a worried look when they learned that the recent tariff changes included toys from the United States. Several of them had placed orders for toys some time ago, but the orders had not been completed as yet. It has been announced from Ottawa that any orders placed prior to December 2nd will be allowed through.

BATTERIES IN DEMAND.

"I have only one battery left in stock," was the remark of a garage and service station operator this morning. "The cold snap caught a lot of weak batteries and they would do nothing about starting the car. Some of them are all right and will come back, but a number are out of the running. It was almost too much, for there has not been a chance to get to bed and sleep." The same condition existed at all the garages in the city and two trucks and their innings dragging in cars that were stalled in various parts of the city." Several dealers reported there had been a run on heaters which when plugged in for the night keep the engine fairly warm and in condition for easy starting in the morning.

NEW OFFICERS

Three members of the Prince of Wales Rangers made their appearance last night, dressed as officers for the first time. They were Lieuts. Karl Duffus, Lorne Bateman and Jack Couper.

CARS DAMAGED

Cars driven by Karl A. Duffus and Dr. C. C. Cragg were damaged to the extent of $70 at noon today when they met in collision at London and Bethune streets. Neither driver was injured. The Duffus car was travelling east on London street and Dr. Cragg north on Bethune street when the crash occurred.

REMANDED A WEEK.

Daniel McInnis, a transient, who said that he was a coal miner, was charged before Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court this morning with begging. He was arrested on Tuesday night. "I was drunk," was the accused's answer to the charge. At the request of the police, McInnis was remanded in custody for a week.

WINDOW PEEPING.

Complaints from residents along Prince Street that a window-peeper had been annoying citizens in that neighborhood for some time resulted in the capture last night of a fifteen-year-old boy who may be charged in juvenile court. "It was funny to see people in their pyjamas," he said in explanation of his conduct in peering into windows at night.

TOUGH ON TAXIS

The snow of the past week is taking a heavy toll on automobiles and taximen have been hit the hardest. One local man who operates four cars, has had one car with a broken drive shaft, another with a broken clutch and the third with the rear end stripped. All have been repaired. So far none of the city buses have broken down mechanically but the drivers report driving conditions are far from ideal.

GET RID OF IT

Canadians who are holding any amount of American money are doing themselves no good, and are not making a contribution toward winning the war. Canada needs every bit of American money that she can get, and the Foreign Exchange Control Board may impose a severe penalty on any person who is known to be hoarding any quantity in excess of one dollar. Ten cents premium is paid on dollars and seven cents on silver for amounts over a dollar. If you have American money turn it in at the banks.

Council Honors Memory Of Two Leaders

The recent bereavement of Peterborough's municipal household in the deaths of Roland Denne, Utilities Commissioner, and Alderman Walter Stocker, received the City Council's formal attention of tribute Monday evening.

"Since our last meeting," Mayor Hamilton said in addressing his associates before the business of the session was begun, "we have lost one of our members, Alderman Stocker, who has been known throughout the city for the interest he took in the affairs of the city and for the time and care he gave to his work. We also lost Roland Denne, a former mayor of the city, who sacrificed his time even to the extent of taking it from his own business to give his interest to the affairs of the municipality. In their memory I ask the Council to stand in silence for one minute."

At the conclusion of that hushed period, Alderman Roy remarked, "Both of them were with us at our last meeting."

Departing from the customary order of business, Alderman Dutton then presented the following resolution which was seconded by Alderman Roy:—

"That this Council and the progressive civic life of Peterborough and district has suffered most grievous loss in the deaths of Roland Denne and Walter Stocker.

Roland Denne, who died suddenly on the morning of November 5, 1940, had devoted the best years of his life to the promotion of Peterborough's welfare. He served in every field of municipal government and civil improvement. No beneficial effort lacked his energtic service. For eight successive years he was Mayor of Peterborough and the City Council benefitted greatly from his leadership, knowledge, business ability and vision. Many good works in Peterborough stand as memorials to Roland Denne, including busy factories, paved roads and soundly-financed municipal government.

Alderman Walter Stocker died suddenly in the midst of his work on the morning of November 9, 1940, his death being probably hastened by the shock caused to him by the death of his long-time friend, Roland Denne. Alderman Stocker came to Canada as a young man from Yorkshire, England. By his driving energy and honesty he succeeded in his business undertakings and he was able to devote the last twenty years of his life entirely to the service of his city. He served in many capacities, but his work will be best remembered for his services to the Children's Aid Society, Board of Health, and Parks Committee. His great love of things beautiful was given full scope by his many years of work as chairman of the Parks Committee. Under his direction beauty flowered forth in many places that before his coming were rubbish grounds.

Both these men were leaders in the community life of Peterborough and their services, standing as an inspiraton to others, will long be remembered."

Deputy Minister Dies

Col. C. L. Smart, deputy minister of transport, collapsed and died at Ottawa at the age of 66. He took over the post he held at his death when the transport department was set up in 1936.

Removal of Snow From Streets Credit To Board

Alderman Bradburn voiced a pedestrian complaint Monday night that when the big snow graders cross the paths of the sidewalk plows the result is a three or four foot barrier of snow thrown up in the way of those who walk.

The council agreed that this snow mound was an impediment at street crossings, but it was felt that the only way to avoid it would be to have men with shovels follow the graders on their rounds. And as the big machines retrace their courses it was thought that the expense would be too much.

"I hate to see so many services being set up," Mayor Hamilton said in reference to the proposed shovelling crews. "They all add up the expense."

City Engineer Parsons said that during the fifteen years of grader experience he had never had any serious complaints about the mounds which are rolled across the sidewalks in the course of snow removal.

"After seeing Stratford last winter, and the state of their streets, I came back with a better opinion of our own system than I ever had," Alderman Roy said. "Stratford streets were a mess."

Economy Offset

This question of the street graders putting it over the sidewalk plows was left to the goodwill and patience of the citizens. Incidentally Lionel Brown, Canada Packers salesman added last night a note to the Roy evidence, "saying you should see Toronto," and he was not talking for publication. But Mr. Brown said it took him something like fifty minutes to drive from Eglington avenue to Fleet street. The snow fell and stayed there just as it does on the Tenth Concession, and motor traffic rolled it into ruts, and after having to crawl around the big city Mr. Brown said Peterborough's streets department were doing a splendid job.

At the Board of Works meeting last Thursday night, was inclined to hedge a bit on the side of economy, but that was before the week-end snows had changed the scenery. The streets were getting slightly bumpy about that time, and Alderman Wilson, replying to a query, said he thought the scrapers might be turned out to shave off the tips of the snow nubs on the pavement.

At that time the chairman of the Board had visions of coasting along through December without incurring bills for snow shovelling. And then the weather crossed the Parsons department up by laying a deep blanket of it over everything and stepping up the frigidity.

The road scrapers went to work Sunday morning at 1 o'clock, and a whole row of trucks and men and graders were working down George street last night from about King street to the C.P.R., doing a thorough job, too, and then this morning the snow starts falling again, with the probability that extraordinary expense for the first week in December will have to be paid out of the balance which it is presumed Alderman Wilson expected to show at the end of the month.

Inspectors Find Rangers Making Progress

The Prince of Wales Rangers inspection Tuesday night, by Col. P. H. Gardiner, M.C. and Lt. Col. L. F. Grant was a success in spite of the intense cold.

After the inspection, Col. Gardiner, expressed complete satisfaction at the progress made by the members of the unit, and lauded Col. J. M. Dewart, M.C., on the excellent showing made by his officers and men. Many of the methods of instruction being used by the Rangers are innovations, the inspecting officer said, and the marked results are gratifying.

With winds blowing that would credit the most business-like January night, most of the members on the Regiment's roll turned out with belts and brass shining. All ranks were anxious that the showing made for the two inspecting officers be a good one.

Machine Gun Used

One of the innovations in the instructional methods is machine gun fire on the miniature range in the armouries. A Vickers Machine Gun has had the regular barrel removed, and a .22 barrel has been inserted. The gun may now be fired, with single shots, using .22 long cartridges.

A paper screen has been placed at the far end of the shooting gallery, upon which is projected a landscape by use of a slide and a projector. The men who are having aiming and firing practise are given the range, indication of target on the screen, and the fire order. The target is then the object of fire, and as the paper is punctured, the accuracy of the fire can be observed.

The classes in map reading have been made more beneficial, through the use of enlarged sections of maps. This method enables the instructors to explain the various steps in map reading more clearly.

Sand Table Work

The sand table is a feature of the Rangers' training facilities. The three permanent instructors have done excellent work in this direction, and the recruit is trained in field engineering and tacits, with miniature hills, trucks, roads, houses and other land features before him.

The Regimental school of instruction that has been in progress for the past two months has almost reached its conclusion, and tonight, junior officers and N.C.O.s will be given their first test of knowledge. An unofficial examination has been arranged, and about 70 members of the Rangers will be given an opportunity to prove their ability as potential leaders. The official qualifying examinations, it is thought, will be held in about two weeks time.

Second Trial Of Gold Theft Charge Started

The second trial of Douglas Newington on an indictment of having possession of gold concentrates alleged to have been stolen from the mines at Cordova last March 20, which Canada Smelters more recently abandoned, was begun Tuesday afternoon before a jury at the December sessions of the county criminal court with Judge D. B. Coleman of Whitby presiding.

The prosecution is being conducted by Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., and counsel for the defense are R. H. Greer, K.C. Toronto, and Ralph Standish of this city.

In an outline of the case to the jury, Mr. McElderry pointed out that the charge was in the words "possession of partly smeltered gold for which there was reasonable ground of suspecting had been stolen from one of the final stages of ore reduction at Cordova. Mr. Newington's job was in the department which bound this penultimate phase of gold production.

Provincial Constable David Silvester and Traffic Officer Gordon Broughton told this morning of having intercepted the accused at the Locks' Bridge on instructions from Madoc on March 20.

A lunch box containing four long, narrow bags, about the shape of stockings, was found wrapped in a windbreaker on the floor at the rear of Newington's car.

Similar "stockings" were used in the sieving of concentrates in the process of gold reduction from ore.

"When Constable Broughton asked me if this was what I was looking for I noticed that Newington turned very white. The color suddenly left his face," Constable Silvester said.

War 25 Years Ago

RAF Bomb Crew Listed Dead All Come Back

ATHENS, Dec. 4 — (CP). — Three members of a British bomber struck by Italian anti-aircraft shells during a low-dive attack two days ago on an Albanian port returned to their mess last night and wearily read the official poster about them:

"Missing, feared dead."

Here is their story as told by the squadron leader who piloted the bomber:

"We got a direct hit just as we released our bombs. One fragment ripped a large hole in the port engine cowling but the motor continued to go. The other quit on us.

"I could still fly her despite the many holes in the fuselage and none of us was injured, even though a notebook in the air gunner's pocket was torn in half by shrapnel and the explosion threw the plane on its back.

"I thought we'd pass out from gas fumes before I spotted a small island. The island only had a landing strip of beach which looked about 20 yards wide.

"I gave the mates a chance to jump but they preferred to stand by me. Well, I got her down all right in a belly-landing but that was just the beginning of more trouble.

"A peasant nearby on seeing us ran away screaming. Then a man appeared with a rifle and looked tough. We raised our hands and yelled: 'English, English.'

"This fellow looked very, very surprised and, with a definite American accent, yelled: 'Are you guys English?'

"By this time several hundred locals had arrived and they looked very dangerous, but our American friend talked fast and kept them back."

The pilot said an automobile was then borrowed by the three R.A.F. men, told how they were bombed by Italian planes and lost the car, finally found a fishing boat and crossed to the Greek mainland —twenty hours on a rough sea.

"But the reception we got on landing was worth it, the pilot grinned.

"Those in the small town showered us with flowers, brought out bottles of the local wine, and finally the Mayor led me to the balcony of the town hall for a speech. Since it was in English I know they didn't understand it, but every time I said 'Mussolini' and made signs I brought the house down."

Camp Maintains Schedule On Cold Days

Fifteen degrees below zero at the Exhibition Camp on Tuesday morning according to the camp thermometer, but it made no difference to the officers, the training schedule was maintained.

Sharp at eight o'clock every fit trainee was out on parade, and instead of physical drill, one company of 250 men were handed snow shovels and put to work to remove the deep snow that had fallen. The other two companies were ordered to parade around the race track in full battle kit, in lieu of the physical exercise.

The snow is serving a useful purpose in so much as the men have been ordered to bank the huts with it, and to-day every hut in the camp is banked with snow right up to the bottom sill of the windows.

The camp at Exhibition Grounds is believed to be affected by colder weather than any other camp across the Dominion to date, but the men are not grousing at all, and work is going ahead in satisfactory fashion. To-day one company route-marched to the Peterborough Armouries where they were given target practise on the indoor 25-yard range using .303 rifles bored for 22 calibre ammunition. This is made necessary owing to the fact that the range at camp is not completed as yet, and the snow is too deep on the outdoor range in Otonabee Township.

There is very little frost in the ground, and one company even went so far is to engage in trench building this week, shovelling away the deep snow, and then constructing the trench. The training of soldiers in the art of camouflage cannot be taught by actual demonstration, but this is taken care of by an extra lecture period on the subject. There is a sand table 12 feet by 8, and several model barbed wire entanglements, which the men are taught to build.

Lieut. Dick Stewart, who commanded the 7th Platoon in the first draft, has a 7th Platoon this time that is showing the way in efficiency. Not one member of the platoon has been A.W.O.L. or confined to barracks for any misdemeanor to date.

This morning it was 10 below at the camp, but the camp doctors report they have not treated a single case of frostbite, which indicates clearly the high quality and comfort of the uniforms, caps and mitts.

Breaks Through Line Of Children Driver Is Fined $5.00 and Costs

Driving through a line of Central School children crossing Water street at Murray street recently cost E. Westlake of Lakehurst a fine of $5 and $2.50 costs in traffic court this morning. Cheese Awards Are Very Close

Judges of cheese at the dairy show in Belleville must have some extraordinary fine system of making awards.

In determining the winners of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association special to Central Ontario cheesemakers with the highest average score from May to October, inclusive, the first three were separated only in the third decimal place, one-thousandth between the first and second, and the same fraction between second and third.

The first three at the head of the list were: J. H. Dudgeon, Thomasburg, 93.998; Thomas Hogle, Roslin, 93.997; and Albert McAdam, Peterborough (Silverwoods) 93.996. The next three cheesemakers were also in the 93-point class.

The average for the season of only a tiny fraction under 94 points indicates consistent quality in the two-cent bonus class.

Andrew Wilson of Young's Point was one of the retired cheesemakers of Central Ontario who were presented with honorary diplomas of membership by the Central Ontario Association, whose convention was held at Belleville in connection with the dairy and cheese show. The awards were made in recognition of their service to the dairy industry. Mr. Wilson has had the longest period of service, 53 years. Four other retired makers had less than fifty years' service.

Westclox Plant Starts At Seven

Westclox plant stepped up production today adding an extra hour to the daily schedule in order to meet production requirements brought about by war conditions.

Wednesday morning the employees reported to work at seven in the morning instead of at eight the usual time, and this schedule will continue for months. This stepping up of work at the plant is due to two things, an amazing increase in the demand for clocks and watches and a speeding up to facilitate production of special parts for government requirements.

In peace time, England and the other parts of the British Isles purchased the bulk of their clocks and watches from what is now enemy country. Alarm clocks are now more than ever a necessity in the Motherland, and England must depend on Canada for her supplies. The timepieces could be purchased from the States but this would affect the foreign exchange adversely as England needs all foreign exchange to purchase war essentials from the States. She can buy from Canada without any interference with her war program, and thus the local plant of the Western Clock Company is bearing the brunt of new demands.

J. H. Vernor, general manager of the plant said today that the factory is working beyond its rated capacity on clocks, and he had the further encouraging news to report that domestic sales of watches and clocks has shown a marked uptrend.

An extra shift running to just past midnight has been put on in the Automatic Screw machine department, to meet the new demands, and this has given some added employment. Three foot presses and six automatic screw machines are running extra on the new work.

COYOTE AND GOBBLER

BENTON, Alta—(CP).— William Denton declares a young coyote chased his 40-pound gobbler one night and they crashed and burst open a wheat-filled implement shed, both being buried alive in the golden grain.

Fred Hills Out For Utilities

First municipal candidate to enter the field, Major Fred Hills announced this morning that he proposes to contest the election to fill the vacancy on the Utilities Commission caused by the death of Roland Denne. Under the bylaw this gap cannot be filled by the appointment of a member but only by a vote of the electors and this election will be included on the program for the municipal election in January. Major Hills, veteran of the last great war, and, until he took command of the veterans company of the Prince of Wales Rangers, the commanding officer of the Peterborough Civil Home Guard is a well known citizen of Peterborough. He is a member of the insurance firm of Hill, Weddell and Hills.

Plan Petition To City Council To Name Industrial Commissioner

The need in the city of Peterborough for an industrial commissioner has been felt so keenly by members of the Peterborough Business Men's Association, that it has been decided that a petition to that effect should be presented to the city council at a special meeting to be held some time this month.

This decision was reached at a meeting of the Association held last night. The petition will be representative of a cross section of the citizens of Peterborough.

It has been said and was repeated last night, that Peterborough has been in the shadows concerning new industries brought into being since the beginning of the war, and that an industrial commissioner would be the answer to the problem. If Peterborough were to have a man at Ottawa at present as an industrial commissioner it was felt by business men that the benefits to this town would be manifold.

The appointment should, the member of the Association agreed, be an immediate one, and no time should be lost. Speed in this operation is to be a key-word, and the petition forms are being printed at present.

It is felt that more new industries, and perhaps more war contracts would be forthcoming in the direction of this city if the appointment should go through immediately, and to that end the members of the Peterborough Business Men's Association are bending. Before long, citizens of Peterborough will be invited to sign the petition. It is understood that all citizens will not be asked to sign, but a representation of the various categories into which citizens may be divided will be sought.

Register Conviction Gaming House Case

Giving judgment in a case in which the evidence had been heard several weeks ago, Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court this morning found Spiro Zakos guilty of operating a common gaming house in connection with his pool room and cigar store on George Street.

Zakos was fined $25 and $5.75 costs.

"I am asking for fourteen days in which to pay the fine," said Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., who appeared for the accused. "I want to consult the owner of the machine."

It was intimated that there would be an appeal against the magistrate's ruling.

Reviewing the evidence and the cases that had been referred to in the argument of defence counsel, Magistrate Gee in his judgment said that he was satisfied that the machine referred to in the evidence had been used for gambling purposes.

Camp Hospital Ready For Use

Medical staff at the Exhibition Camp, C.H.T.C. 32, moved into the new camp hospital yesterday and the accommodation and facilities are much superior to those in the first hut used as a hospital.

The new building is a warm, newly decorated, comfortable hut with 20 beds, a complete dispensary, proper basin attachments and equipment which permits almost everything except operations.

Dr. Angus Robertson of Campbellford, who was called up as a trainee and who is a fully qualified doctor, has been attached to hospital staff assisting the two medical officers, Dr. C. D. Hewitt and Dr. Earle of Mallorytown. He gets some military drill, but not quite the same amount as the other trainees.

Army trucks were used to transfer all equipment from one building to the other and the job was done in record time. The only patients at the time were a few trainees on sick parade with sore heels, and one with an injured arm. None of these were confined to bed.

Vegetable Men Elect Officers

Harold Johnston of North Monaghan was elected president of the Peterborough Vegetable Growers last night. Bert Arnott is first vice-president, and Fred Stinson is second. F. C. Paterson is secretary.

Mr. Johnston was appointed delegate to the convention of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association in Toronto next month.

The group of local growers who met last night decided to put some new effort into their organization in the hope of increasing its membership.

Need Sidewalk East Of Bridge

James Shaughnessy, Otonabee street, wrote the council Monday night pointing out the need of a sidewalk of some material on that street leading easterly from the Locks' Bridge to Downers' Corners.

The council was aware of the recent fatal accident on that stretch of road, and Mayor Hamilton recalled that the council had asked the Department of Highways at least to make a cinder path down to the bridge. That was done on the slope of the road, and City Engineer Parsons said that the width of road between the guardrails indicated that it might have been the Department's intention to construct a sidewalk.

Mr. Parsons was asked by the council to make a study of what might be done along Otonabee street for the convenience of residents at Eastgate.

The bride wore a street-length frock of magnetic rose crepe, with wine, shoulder veil, wine suede accessories, and corsage of white chrysanthemums. Miss Susie Elliott of Brampton, who attended her sister, was in robin's egg blue crepe, with corsage of rosebuds and navy accessories. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Mr. Orville Payne of Warsaw.

After a reception at Hooper's Palm Rooms, the bridal couple left by train for point seast, and will live in Peterborough.

W.A. Honors Two Retiring Officers

The church parlors were filled for the Christmas meeting and election of officers of the W.A. of George Street United Church on Tuesday afternoon, at which the president, Miss M. E. Elliott presided, opening the meeting with a hymn and prayer. The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. F. Burnham, and included a Christmas hymn; a scripture reading by Mrs. W. P. Purdy, the topic, "My Savior, Lord and King," and prayer by Mrs. H. L. Roberts.

the dollars she has helped raise for various projects in the last 25 years were heaped in one mountain of millions, its computation would make a comptometer creak.

How It's Done.

When the writer asked her the secret of her success in organization, raising funds and "making people do things," she looked nonplussed, then said succinctly, "It takes imagination and enthusiasm."

But her cohorts are a good deal more articulate on the subject. This sums up what they have to say:

"She makes everybody she works with feel he is a real and important part of the project and gives him a sense of being two inches taller and ten times better than he is. She never loses sight of the people whom she is trying to help. She reads their letters and can tell about them in a way that stirs up sympathy for them. She has a wonderful speaking voice—educated and cultivated—but she's not standoffish and high-hat. She can work with all kinds of people from elevator men to presidents, meet everyone on his own level and win him over to her side. You just can't say 'no' to Mrs. Belmont."

Problems of New Canadians Are Outlined

In spite of the zero weather, most members of the Murray Street Mission Circle were in attendance at the afternoon meeting on Tuesday. The Christmas message was given by Mrs. B. Jackson, and Mrs. A. H. Campbell had charge of the program. Mrs. A. Miller, Mrs. W. G. Shimer, Mrs. D. Loomis and Mrs. Campbell herself dealt with problems of the new Canadians in the various cities of Canada. These European people who have crossed the ocean to find in Canada freedom and democracy, need the welcome and helping hand of Canadian missionaries, who look after their needs, physical, mental and spiritual. Mrs. Graham, the president, thanked the ladies for their interesting and informative papers.

Boxes of new and used clothing are to be sent to mission stations at Cochrane and Kenora, this clothing to be brought to the church and packed December 10.

Mrs. A. R. Kennedy, representative to the Local Council of Women, reported on the various activities of the Council. She carried to Mission Circle members the message of Mrs. E. Wand, Council president, who urged that all housewives "Buy British."

Women Will Have To Curb Their Luxurious Tastes

As a result of Monday's import prohibitions, the feminine passion for silks, furs and feathers, and many other commodities and compounds designed to make a woman luxuriously comfortable will be more difficult to gratify. Even when the Canadian woman is in her kitchen and going about her household duties, she may be handicapped, since a wide variety of canned foods designed to make preparation of meals simple, yet with attractive results, was affected in the prohibitions announced.

Although Canada produces much of the processed food which may no longer be imported, there will be many delicacies no longer available for midnight snacks and afternoon teas, such as fancy fruits, biscuits, confectionery, nuts, chocolate and cocoa products, and numerous delicacies which have been imported from the United States.

Canadian production should be able to furnish all the household gadgets designed to make housekeeping simpler but there will be a scarcity of such imported trimmings as fancy paper napkins, bridge scores, silverware, glassware and ornaments. Clothing and cloth fabrics of all kinds no longer will be imported from other than sterling countries and the same is true of jewellery and precious stones for personal adornment.

When the housewife ends her work and is able to curl up with a magazine and a box of chocolates, the latter will have to be Canadian or British made, and the magazine of a nature which the Revenue Minister believes is worth the expenditure of foreign exchange. If she likes sex stories, confessions or detective yarns, she will have to be content with whatever Canada produces. Those from the United States will be prohibited along with the "action comics" now popular with both adults and youths.

I.O.D.E. Bazaar To Display Much Originality

Exceptionally clever with the paint brush and needle, and always brimful of originality, members of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., have gained a reputation for the quality and colorfulness of their annual Christmas bazaar and tea, which is to be held in the Y.W.C.A. next Saturday afternoon. Senator Iva Fallis, Miss A. Wood, Mrs. D. Loucks, Mrs. H. V. Morphet and Mrs. Braund will make the draws for valuable prizes donated to the Chapter by members and business firms.

Mrs. C. S. Browne is in charge of the bazaar table, to which each member has, in addition to making many of the novelties, donated a gift to be sold at twenty-five cents. Mrs. G. H. Ham and her group are in charge of this section of the bazaar booth. Mrs. C. L. Upper is convener of the home-cooking table.

Tea arrangements are being convened by Mrs. C. Muir, with Mrs. Thompson in charge of decorations. Names of the winners on draws will be published in Monday's Examiner.

I.O.D.E. Chapter Busy With Christmas Work

Fifty-two pairs of socks were sent overseas in Christmas boxes to Peterborough soldiers by the Jeanette Scott Chapter, I.O.D.E., reported Miss Ann Heideman, war secretary, at the December meeting, held at the home of Miss Allen Morgan, George street, with the regent, Miss Grace Comstock, in the chair. Fifty pairs of socks are to be sent to the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, and remaining knitted articles to I.O.D.E. headquarters at Hamilton and Halifax for distribution to the Navy and Air Force. Thirty-five dollars is to be donated by the Chapter to the fund for Canada's war guests, and a committee was appointed to take charge of the Christmas baskets to be sent to needy families.

Mrs. L. W. Welsh reported to the meeting regarding the formation of a Chapter of the Victorian Order of Nurses in Peterborough, which members felt was a much needed service in the city. The treasurer reported on the successful tea held by the Chapter in November, and on returns from the concert given by the Madrigals in aid of I.O.D.E. work, which were most gratifying.

The Stars Say . . .

For Thursday, December 5
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A moderately interesting and progressive day is the augury based on the predominant lunar aspects. The energies and spirit of initiative may be keyed up to more than customary high pressure, and yet such stimulation is likely to be exercised in the domain of the personal rather than the business life, unless such practical expression pertain to the arts, entertainment or perhaps promoting certain social, welfare or romantic functions.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of lively and interesting adventures, with the forces and faculties keyed to high purpose, although this may be in the direction of progressive or artistic rather than purely sordid and practical objectives.

A child born on this day will be active, energetic and ambitious to be of service in a humane, social or philanthropic spirit. It will be artistic, refined, have high ideals and aims, thereby promoting much personal appeal.

Having a pail with a cactus in it which she desired to make attractive, one ingenious person pasted the linings of Christmas card envelopes on it. Then she shellacked the whole thing. Narrow lines of black paint may be used to add to the decoration.

BABY'S little "Tummy" is often easily upset. It is easily righted again, too, if you know just how to do it. Let Mrs. M. S. Alway, of London, Ont., tell you: "Baby's Own Tablets are a great help at the first sign of upset stomach, during teething time or when a cold is coming on. They work quickly yet gently to carry away poisons and promote quiet sleep. Walking floors at night is unknown in our home."

And Mrs. W. R. Sharp says: "I nursed my baby shortly after being alarmed over a motor accident and that upset her almost to the point of convulsions. I gave her Baby's Own Tablets and she soon stopped crying—went to sleep and when she awakened was her own good self again."

Equally effective for diarrhoea, colic, teething troubles, simple croup, constipation and simple fever. Sweet-tasting, easy to take, prompt in their action yet harmless. GEORGE STREET AT KING

Reds Are Taught To Beat Up Boy Scout Lads

NEW YORK, Dec. 4—(AP).—How a New York grammar school child is taught to be a Communist — by beating up Boy Scouts and regarding teachers and policemen as enemies—was told yesterday by a Brooklyn zoologist to a joint legislative committee investigating subversive movements in New York City's school system.

Ralph De Sola, the witness, testified he joined the Communist Party and was assigned to the "children's movement"—the Communist "training school" for children from 6 to 10.

"They were taught the 'Soviet slant' on life," he testified. "They were taught their only friends were the defenders of the Soviet system, and their enemies teachers, policemen and others who did not believe as they did."

Part of this program, he added, consisted of waylaying and beating Boy Scouts, although frequently the tables were turned and "other kids would sock them and beat them up."

De Sola in his testimony also said Morris U. Schappes, history instructor at the college of the City of New York, and Mrs. Elizabeth Deward and Miss Yetta Feigenbaum, Brooklyn public school teachers, were members of the Communist Party.

At the opening session Monday, Dr. Bernard D. N. Grebanier, assistant professor of English at Brooklyn College, testified that he and eight other faculty members joined the party, using aliases to conceal their identity. Seven of those he named denied any connection with the Communist Party and accused him of being "hysterical."

He continued that it had cost him approximately $500 a year to belong, some for dues, some for support of the Communist publication, "The Daily Worker," and the rest for "the Red Front Fund."

"I never knew exactly what that front was," he said.

Grebanier said he sought to resign, but that the resignation was turned down. Then he was expelled, he continued, "as a counter-revolutionary enemy of the working class and of the party"—but not before a campaign was instituted against his reputation.

He told the committee that faculty members at Brooklyn College attempted to promote Communism among the students by publishing a paper known as the Staff from May, 1935, "through 1939."

He named Dr. Howard Selsam, assistant philosophy professor, as one of three instructors who contributed articles to the paper, which was distributed to students by Young Communist League members.

DOROTHY DIX

As a Child Is Trained it Will Continue to Grow. You cannot Expect Grown Children to Respect Your Authority if You Don't Start Discipline When They Are in the Cradle.

Dear Miss Dix—What can I do with a peevish, fault-finding, sulky daughter whose outlook on life is distorted, who magnifies trifles into insults and keeps me walking on eggs for fear of offending her? She threatens to leave home, but stays on possibly because she is so comfortable.

UNHAPPY MOTHER.

ANSWER—So you are afraid of your own daughter? How did you get that way? And, more important still, how did you let her get that way? If you are honest with yourself you are bound to admit that you are to blame for the situation, because if you had not let her get the upper hand with you when she was little she would not now have you under her thumb and be tyrannizing the life out of you. Your chance to assert your sovereignty was when she was in the cradle, and if you had done so you would have had her so thoroughly under control that she would never have dreamed of rebelling against your authority.

I never hear a mother letting a child talk back to her and say impudent things to her without wondering why she hasn't intelligence enough to know that the child is going to grow up to despise her and insult her and revile her.

Spanking Sometimes Needed

And I wonder still more that she hasn't enough sense to realize that she could stop it at once and forever by turning little Johnny or Mamie across her knee and administering a spanking that would teach him or her that mother is a person to be respected and to whom you had better keep a civil tongue in your head when you address her.

If it is any comfort to you, however, to know that you are not alone in your sufferings, look about you at the other terrorized mothers. About half the parents in America are in your plight and live in deadly fear of their children.

They quake with terror of the bawling out that Tommy and Susie will give them if they cross them. They shudder with dread when they think of the caustic criticisms of Maud and Percy about their personal appearance, their manners, their friends and everything that they do or leave undone.

They wouldn't dare to express an opinion in opposition to the views of Sam or Sally, nor would they dream of showing such impertinence as to ask Fanny and Bob where they were going and when they will come in, and far be it from them to presume to use the automobile if any of the children want to take a joy ride.

How to Handle Belligerent

Whose fault is it when parents are afraid of their children? Who brought up the little boys and girls to be self-centered egotists, without a thought of anybody else's comfort but their own?

Who reared them with no respect for authority? Who taught them that they didn't even need to be even decent to father and mother and that they were meek, humble, cringing creatures to whom they didn't have to be polite?

Don't all speak at once.

In your case, Unhappy Mother, the remedy is plain and simple. Spunk up for once in your life and tell your peevish, fretful, disagreeable daughter just where she gets off.

Take your courage in both hands and inform her that unless she can make herself pleasant and agreeable she will have to leave home and find some other place in which to live. She won't go, but it may scare her into behaving herself.

But I hope that every mother who has a saucy little child will profit by your case and give the impudent little brat what's coming to it.

Love or Luxury?
You Are the Judge

Dear Dorothy Dix — Should a girl marry a man she loves, even if he cannot give her as good a home as she already has?

DOUBTFUL DOTTY.

ANSWER — Depends upon whether she loves the man or her comfort most. If she puts sentiment above luxury she is not so much concerned about the state of his purse as the state of his heart. She doesn't ask how much money he can give her, but how much love.

She would rather live on bread and cheese and kisses with him than be fed on terrapin and champagne by another, and a two-by-four apartment with him will look better than a palace without him.

Of course, no matter how much a girl is in love with a man, she should stop and consider if he can make a decent living for a family; but that is only a precautionary measure to preserve their love and secure their happiness, because love flies out of the window if the bill collector is perpetually knocking on the door, and because there is no peace and contentment in a home unless there is a fire on the hearth and food in the cupboard.

Beyond asking that the man furnish her with the modest competence, a girl should not consider money in choosing a husband. Nor should she ask that her young husband support her in the style to which she has been accustomed.

It has probably taken her father 30 years to make enough money to give his family a fine house and luxuries, and no boy starting out in business has that earning capacity.

If a girl loves a man as she should to marry him, she ought to be willing to begin at the bottom with him, to work and save with him and help him build his fortune. The sacrifices they make for each other will bind them together.

This Remedy
Prevents Divorce

Dear Dorothy Dix — Mr. and Mrs. A. have been married thirty years. He has always been fortunate in having a good job, but their prosperity is owing to the thriftiness and saving of his wife.

Recently he became infatuated with a young girl who was, of course the "only one who understood him." After making a spectacle of himself for a few months, he asked his wife for a divorce, so he could marry his soul mate. She hesitated a while, but at last said: "Yes, I'll give you a divorce, but only on one condition. You must sign over everything you own to me. The money we have managed to save together, the house we live in, our car, in fact, everything, then I'll set you free."

Of course he raised objections, and so did the soul mate. "When I married you all that you had was your job and two or three large bills that you owed," she said, "and this other lady can marry you on the same platform, and she will if she loves you as much as I did." Whereupon the soul mate gave Mr. A. the air and he has returned to his clever wife, much the wiser man.

A SPECTATOR.

ANSWER—Fine! It shows that there is a remedy for divorce after all, if a wife has gumption enough to use it. Another wife I knew settled the problem by telling her husband that if she gave him a divorce he must agree to take all of their five young children to live with him and his affinity. And that was that.

flurry of preparations. Not that there was to be anything elaborate or costly about the affair. It was, of necessity, simple. But it seemed that here in Brighton, as in all small towns, there was a definite routine to be followed in getting together "the crowd."

First there was a succession of telephone calls. It seemed to Lona that Dinah had sat with her ear glued to the receiver for a solid morning when she announced, finally, that everyone had been reached, and all but two had accepted. The most important of the acceptances was, Lona was assured, that of "Pinky" Malone. He, it developed, was the local piano player. Without him there would be no dancing. The music being assured, there was the matter of refreshments to be considered next.

"Chicken salad," Dinah proclaimed without hesitancy. "Mother's famous for her chicken salad. They'll expect it. With hot biscuits and pickles."

"Why, that's a meal, Dinah!" Lona laughed. "They must eat well in this town."

"There must be punch, too. Bobby Graves will bring over the stuff and spike it at the last minute," Dinah confided with a wink. "Mother's dry, you know. She won't serve any drinks. But, of course, if she doesn't know—"

"But, Dinah, if she objects—"

"Oh, she just pretends she doesn't know. It's a great joke. Bobby always mixes the punch and nobody asks what he puts into it. You see, all our mothers are dry. This is a dry town. That is, they vote dry, but—" She broke off, and laughed, and Lona laughed with her. There were so many delicious little contradictions about this place.

Town Council Hopes To Balance Budget

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 4 (ENS)—A balanced budget at year's end was forecast by chairman of the town finance committee, Reeve Charles Calver, in his report to council on Monday night. "Things look exceptionally well," he said. Of tax arrears which are always a criterion of local economic conditions the Reeve said that $2,700.00 more than had been budgeted for had been collected. When the year's budget had been set it had been expected only $6,000.00 in arrears would come in but already the figure had exceeded $8,700.00 which prompted the Reeve to compare the situation with the one which existed five years ago when in their report to the department of Municipal affairs sixty-five per cent. of arrears were listed as uncollectable, while at present thirty-five per cent. "All we are reporting this year as an average of fifteen per cent. over a five year period. We are in a better position than we've been for from 16 to 25 years.

Representing the business men of the town Dr. O. C. Watson asked council to make a donation towards the Santa Claus parade being arranged. He pointed out that part of the plan included presenting each child with an orange and a bag of candy. He emphasized the business value the affair was expected to have and pointed out that every merchant was contributing towards the plan. On motion of the Reeve and Councillor Burgiss $25.00 was granted to the Association sponsoring the parade.

A complaint that he was being unfairly discriminated against in the matter of work was made. "All I want is a day's work. I have a house and wife and I pay taxes" argued Nick Parcels who charged that when he reported to the town foreman for work all of the snow had been shovelled.

Never Refused Work

"I never refused any man a day's work—if he would work he was given work. Its all tommy rot and a bundle of lies about me refusing to give this man work," countered Councillor Macmillan, "if he came at eight o'clock in the morning like the rest of the men he would get his work but he came two days in succession at noon when the work was done."

The clerk read a letter from Major Willis, O.C. of 'B' Company Midland Regiment thanking council for its contribution of $25.00 towards the "emergency fund."

Wants Fee Returned

A letter from W. B. Gordon on behalf of G. Petherick, local auto wrecker, who claimed he had paid his license fee to operate the junk yard and had been refused the license. Mr. Petherick's chief complaint was that he wanted his two dollars back if the license wasn't to be granted. He said he held a provincial license. The matter was referred to the legal committee with power to act.

Relief officer J. J. Lewis Hay announced only three families on relief. Tax collector J. C. Birmingham indicated $1,595.72 in 1940 taxes during the month of November, plus an additional $318.72 in arrears had been collected.

The Reeve's report on expenditures as compared with the actual budget followed with first figure indicating the budget and second what was actually spent to end of October. Officer $460-$900; rent $200-$145; printing $225-$283; interest $250-$212; law $300-$125; roads and bridges $4,800-$2,550.54; relief and hospitalization $1,300-$915.79; fire protection $3,000-$339.97; county rate $9,000-$8,280; street lights $4,500-$4,543; town property $200-$288; miscellaneous $300-$585; public library $1,550-$1,550; grants $310-$335; board of health $750-$101; police $2,400-$2,154; garbage collection $610-$708; election $100-$96; discounts $700-$676; street oil $2,500-$2,182; tax sale $100-$97; insurance $701-$701.

Sword To Stay Bent

LONDON, Dec. 4—(CP Cable).—When a bomb bent the crusader's sword gripped in the hand of Richard the Lion Hearted's statue beside the House of Commons, Hon. Vincent Massey, the Canadian High Commissioner, suggested that it be left in that state as a symbol of the spirit that a free people may bend but will never break. Lord Reith, Minister of Works and Buildings, announced today that the suggestion has been adopted.

Lad Fifteen Shoots Teacher

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 — (AP). — Harold Wagner, 15-year-old Brooklyn schoolboy, who was suspended from school last week for throwing rocks through school windows, walked into the principal's office yesterday.

"I don't want to talk to you about it, Harold," said the principal, Milton Salit, 35.

"I came here to shoot you," Salit said the boy answered calmly.

Detective Harry Lavin, reconstructing the incident, said Wagner then pulled a .22-calibre sawed-off rifle from under his coat. The gun discharged, the slug landing in Salit's shoulder. The principal pinned Harold to the floor. Then two clerks rushed in and held the boy.

Salit was taken to the hospital, where his wound was said to be not serious.

Lavin said the boy told police he had previously entrusted the gun, which he found in a vacant lot, to a friend, Ignatius Hickman, 12. Both boys were sent to the Children's Shelter to await police action.

"Are you sorry for what you've done?" Detective Captain William A. Sullivan asked the boy.

"Naw," said Harold.

Polish Farmer Wins Oat Crown

VILNA, Alta., Dec. 4—(CP).—"I thought I would win," said Paul Francis Pawlowski, 23-year-old Polish farmer, when he learned last night tht he had won the world's oats championship at the Chicago International Exposition's grain show. He placed seventh in oats at Chicago in 1939 with his first exhibit.

Paul Francis, oldest of seven boys and four girls in the Pawlowski family, said he prepared the Victory oats exhibit that won him the title. Just a year ago he saw and heard the boys who were winning world grain crowns for Alberta and told himself "if they can win world titles, I can."

Paul Francis, who succeeded Bill Skladan, 21, of Andrew, Alta., as oats king, said he "intended to stay with the oats," when asked whether he would now try to win the wheat championship.

The Pawlowski family came from Poland in 1905 and have practised scientific farming on the 230-acre farm about 100 miles north-east of Edmonton.

Canadian Sinks Hun Sub, 'Flutters' Home

LONDON, Dec. 4— (CP Cable)—A Canadian pilot of the Coastal Command yesterday described over British Broadcasting Corporation facilities an attack on a submarine in the North Sea and an exciting flight home in a damaged machine.

The pilot, from Stellarton, N.S., was on a reconnaissance flight when the U-boat was sighted 'just as it was stepping into its own backyard.'

"Our reconnaissance patrol of three Lockheed Hudsons were near the Norwegian coast when we found the U-boat slinking home," he said. "We wasted no time....I do not think Jery realized he was being attacked until he saw us screaming down with our bomb doors open."

The Nova Scotian said it was too late for the submarine to submerge, but the conning tower gun opened fire and hit his aircraft three times.

The U-boat was hit squarely by one bomb and another burst close beside the hull. The Canadian saw the submarine's stern lift from the water, then it disappeared in a swirl of oil and bubbles.

The stricken plane had an elevator out of operation, one petrol tank empty and another leaking. Nonetheless it managed to "flutter" back to its base and land safely without giving a job to an ambulance waiting at the field.

How to Make a Splendid Cough Remedy at Home

A Big Saving, and It's So Easy! No Cooking!

Cough medicines usually contain a large quantity of sugar syrup—a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Take 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking! No trouble at all.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16 ounce bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of really splendid medicine for bad winter coughs. It makes a real saving for you, because it gives you four times as much cough remedy for your money. It lasts a long time never spoils, and children love it.

This is a very effective, dependable quick-acting cough remedy for the whole family. Quickly, you feel its penetrating effect in the air passages. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes and makes breathing easy. You will be more than delighted with its quick effect in clearing up bad coughs.

Pinex is a compound containing Norway Pine and palatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, a well known and reliable soothing agent for winter coughs. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

No Happiness in the Home When Mother Is Sick

The tired, worn out mother cannot make a happy home if she is sick and worried by the never ending household duties.

She gets run down and becomes nervous and irritable, downhearted and discouraged, can't rest at night, and gets up in the morning feeling as tired as when she went to bed.

Women suffering in this way may find in Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills a remedy with which to help recuperate their health, build up the run down system, and assist them back to health—happiness again.

Price 50c a box, 70 pills, at all drug counters.

Look for our trade mark a "Red Heart" on the package.

IN MEMORIAM

YORK.—In loving memory of my daughter, Annibell, who departed this life just one year ago today, December 4, 1939.

These are things death cannot take away;
Nor age, nor tears, nor pain, nor cruel care can harm her now
Or enter memory's hall.
She that I loved so beautiful and fair
From all life's dangers now secure is she;
Lovely she was and lovely she shall be.

—Ever remembered by her mother, Mrs. E. York.

For Carefree Pleasure Sing Lively Cowboy Airs

Choose Favorites Old and New

Happy times when you sing cowboy songs! Dates and parties have a gay, carefree intimacy. And no better ditty than that old western favorite, "Goodbye, Old Paint," to put your friends in a singin' mood.

"Old Paint's a good pony, he paces when he can; Goodbye, old Paint, I'm a-leaving Cheyenne."

Then turn the pages of your songbooks to find a grand old tear-jerker, "The Last Great Round-up" is one they'll all love.

"When I think of the last Great Round-up.
On the eve of Eternity's Dawn,
Then I think of the past and the cowboys,
Who were once with us but now are gone."

Or, for a bit of humor, sing "New River Train." A disillusioned sweetheart tells her man,

"Sugar Pie, you cannot love five,
Making love to five is like stirring a beehive—"

Give your friends the time of their lives with the 19 cowboy songs in our song book. Has words, music and piano accompaniments. Includes such perennial favorites as "The Dying Cowboy," "Red River Valley," "Git Along Little Dogies," several with guitar diagrams.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of POPULAR COBOY SONGS to Examiner Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BAKEFUL IN TWO WAYS

PSYCHIC bidding may be costly in its effect both upon the opponents and upon your partner. If they manage to see through such a bid by you at an illogical spot, it can bring you severe punishment. If your partner fails to smell it out, the side may get into the wrong contract. There is an additional important way it may hurt—on a later hand or hands. Your partner will be on the lookout for other psychics by you, and sometimes will suspect you of a psychic when you have been guilty of no such thing. In that event, his suspicions may wind you up in the wrong contract.

It is true enough that the natural meaning of South's final 4-Spade call is to show a five-card suit, since it was a rebid. It also proclaims the possession of a still longer suit in diamonds, since they were bid first. If North reckoned that South's opening bid was anywhere near as sound as his own original pass, he would have counted South for not over two cards total in the two unbid suits, and the equivalent of two aces. In this event, he should have figured that 5-Diamonds would be airtight, and should have made that bid. But he did not.

South had acquired quite a reputation as a venturesome and imaginative bidder of psychics especially third-hand when not vulnerable. North therefore doubted whether South had any diamond suit at all, and also whether he had anything near to two aces. Hence his pass of 4-Spades. Against repeated heart leads at every chance, making South ruff, his contract was utterly impossible, in view of West's holding of four trumps—a probable holding when six are held by the defenders.
